1724. — — — — —.]—A vendor agreed to sell a piece of land to M. with immediate possession, the purchase to be completed in five years. Before completion, M. agreed to sell the land to C., & the agreement was registered in the district registry, with a receipt for part of the consideration money which C. had laid out for M. in buildings on the land. C. offered to pay the vendor the amount agreed upon between him & M., & applied for the delivery of the abstract, but the vendor refused to convey to him the land in question unless he would purchase other land also agreed to be sold to M., & shortly afterwards the vendor & M. conveyed the land to H. stipulated, "that, if any dispute should arise as to the title, the same should be submitted to a conveyancer, to be agreed upon by both parties; the objections to be stated in writing, within six months of the date of the agreement, to the solr. of the vendor; & in case he should be of opinion that a good title could not be made out, then either party should be at liberty to rescind the contract on two calendar months' notice after the opinion of counsel had been obtained." This agreement was entered into by A., at the request of C., which circumstance, however, was not known to B. By a subsequent agreement, A. agreed to sell the premises to C., upon the same terms, etc., under which he had contracted to purchase of B. D., the mother of B., had a life estate in the premises, which circumstance, though known to B. & his solr., was not known to either A. or C. D. did not, in respect of her life estate, sanction the agreement. A. & C., as co-plffs., filed their bill against B. & D. for specific performance of the original agreement. After that bill had been answered, but before either party had gone into evidence, A. died intestate, & C. then filed a bill of revivor & supplement against the original defts. & the heir-at-law & personal representatives of A. Upon those two bills, no answer to the latter having been filed, the parties joined issue:—Held: C. was entitled to have specific performance of the agreement, with compensation in respect of D.'s life estate.—*NELTHORPE v. SECT. 3.—CHANGE IN POSITION OF PARTIES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DEATH.

A. Death of Purchaser.

(a) In General.

1727. Right of vendor to rescind—After long delay.]—An estate was sold by auction, & the purchase was to be completed in two months according to the conditions of sale. The buyer died soon afterwards, & suits were instituted both in the spiritual ct. & the Ct. of Ch. respecting his affairs, which prevented the completion of the contract. Four or five years after the sale the vendor filed his bill to have the contract rescinded, & the affairs of the buyer still remaining unsettled, the ct. rescinded the contract & gave plff. his costs out of the deposit.—MACKEETH v. MARLAR (1786), 1 Cox, Eq. Cas. 259; 29 E. R. 1156.

1728. Right of heir to specific performance—Contract must be binding on purchaser.]—A person having contracted for the purchase of an estate in fee simple, in possession, free from incumbrances, died intestate before the completion of the contract: it subsequently appeared that a good title in possession could not be made in consequence of an outstanding lease, for the life of a person, at a low rent: a bill was filed by the heir-at-law of the purchaser for a specific performance of the contract, with an abatement from the purchase-money as a compensation for the lease for life, & seeking to have the purchase-money paid out of the personal assets of the purchaser:—Held: the purchaser could not have been compelled to perform the contract, & the heir was not entitled to have it completed for his benefit.—COLLIER v. JENKINS (1831), You. 295; 159 E. R. 1004.

1729. ————]—When an heir-at-law seeks to have a contract, entered into by his ancestor, carried into effect for his benefit, he must show that there was a binding contract at the death of the ancestor, & one which could be enforced against an unwilling purchaser.

In 1853 A. agreed to purchase some real estate, but he died intestate before the completion of the purchase. It turned out that part of the property had been held for twenty-seven years under a parol exchange entered into by a mere tenant for life; but, after A.'s death, the exchange was confirmed by the trustees:—Held: the contract could have been enforced against A. in his lifetime, & his heir-at-law was entitled to have it completed for his own benefit at the expense of A.'s personal estate.—GARNETT v. ACTON (1860), 28 Beav. 333; 54 E. R. 394.

l. ———— Where assignment by purchaser in breach of agreement.—If an agreement of sale requires the vendor's approval to any assignment of the vendee's interest, & an assignment is made without such approval, the assignee has no right upon tendering the amount due to insist upon the transfer being made to him. But he has an equitable interest in the property, & in an action by the vendor for cancellation of the agreement the assignee has the right to redeem, & if he redeems, to such protection as the ct. deems proper, & the ct. may direct a transfer to be made to him.—FITZPATRICK v. FITZPATRICK, [1923] 1 W. W. R. 1188; 16 Sask. L. R. 286.—CAN.

m. Action by vendor as assignee of purchaser against sub-purchaser—Purchaser as necessary party.—If a vendor of land takes from A. his purchaser, a quit-claim deed & a verbal assignment of the moneys due under an agreement of sale to purchasers from A., the original vendor is an equitable assignee, & in suing the purchasers from A. on their covenant in the agreement of sale to them, should in the absence of special circumstances, add A. as a party to the action.—BRODER v. RINK, McRADU, [1920] 3 W. W. R. 213.—CAN.

PART VI. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—A. (a).

n. Right of heir to compensation—On resale by vendor.—Where a purchaser died after paying three-fourths of the purchase money, leaving an infant heir, who was entitled to a specific performance of the contract; & the vendor, at the instance of the administratrix, conveyed the property, which had greatly increased in value, to a third person, & it afterwards passed into the hands of persons without notice:—Held: the heir could sue the vendor in equity for compensation.—FORSYTH v. JOHNSON (1868), 14 Gr. 639.—CAN.

Sect. 3.—Change in position of parties: Sub-sect. 1 A. (a), (b) & (c), & B. (a), (b) & (c).]

1730. — Purchase by trustee of trust property.—Where one of two trustees for sale bid at a sale by auction & the property was knocked down to him but he died before the sale was completed, it was held that his heir-at-law could not as against the next of kin compel the specific performance of the contract, so as to give him the benefit of the contract.—INGLE v. RICHARDS (No. 1) (1860), 28 Beav. 361; 3 L. T. 46; 6 Jur. N. S. 1178; 8 W. R. 696; 54 E. R. 405.

1731. Right of sub-purchaser to complete.—A purchaser under a decree agreed to sell the lots he had purchased to A. & died, his heir being abroad. Ordered that A. should be substituted for him as the purchaser, & should be at liberty to pay the purchase-money into ct. & be let into possession.—PEARCE v. PEARCE (1834), 7 Sim. 138; 58 E. R. 789.

1732. Enforcement against executor.—A verbally agreed with B. his solr. for the sale of land to B. This agreement, which was never reduced to writing, provided that B. should bear all expenses of making out the title, that possession should be at once given, & that the purchase-money should be paid at a fixed future date with interest in the meantime. B. entered into possession, but took no further steps in completion of the purchase, & before the purchase-money became due, died. In a suit by A. for specific performance against the exor. of B.:—Held: B., as A.'s solr., ought to have had an agreement in writing prepared, & the exor. was bound to complete the purchase & pay the costs of the suit.—BRAFIELD v. SCRIVEN (1873), 22 W. R. 202.

1736. —.—A. having agreed to purchase a real estate, the purchase-money for which exceeded the amount of his personal estate, by his will, made a few days afterwards, attested by three witnesses, as to all the worldly goods that it had pleased God to bless him with, gave & bequeathed to his wife & two sons, all his goods, cattle, chattels, personal estate, & effects whatsoever; & in case they died without issue, etc., gave the children's share of the personal estate & effects over; testator dying before the purchase could be completed:—Held: the agreement ought to be specifically performed; & the words of the will, being insufficient to comprehend real estate, the estate ought to be conveyed to the eldest son & his heirs, etc.—CAVE v. CAVE (1762), 2 Eden, 139; 28 E. R. 849, L. C.

17441. Whether contract enforceable.—Against purchaser.—The vendor of real estate having died before the conveyance, leaving infant heirs, the purchaser proceeded at law to recover back the purchase money paid, partly to the vendor & partly to his administrators; whereupon a bill was filed by the representatives of the vendor, to restrain the action & for specific performance. The ct. made the decree.—VAN WORMER v. HARDING (1867), 14 Gr. 167.—CAN.

1746. — — —.]—The vendor of a real estate died before completion intestate as to his real estate:—Held: the legal personal representatives of the vendor might maintain a bill against the vendor's heir & the purchaser for a specific performance, & although the interest of vendor was equitable & the purchaser had since got in the legal estate.—HODDEL v. PUGH (1864), 33 Beav. 489; 10 L. T. 446; 10 Jur. N. S. 534; 12 W. R. 782; 5 E. R. 458.

1747. — — —.]—If contract binding—Leave of court not obtained.—A nobleman was tenant for life of estates settled by Act of Parliament, & thereby vested in trustees. He was also owner of estates in fee simple. By his will he gave the real possessor of the title a right of pre-emption of his unsettled estates, at a stated price. During his life he had entered into a correspondence with the trustees of the settled estates for the sale to them of one particular unsettled estate, & the trustees had petitioned the ct. for leave to purchase, but no final order was made. The nobleman died, & his successor in the title claimed to exercise his rights of pre-emption, but, on the other hand, the trustees of the settled estates claimed that the contract should be carried into effect, & the exors. of deceased supported the same view, & claimed the purchase-money to be paid by the trustees as personal estate:—Held: the parties to the correspondence not being then the authorised agents for purchase, & there being no final order of the ct., to conclude the bargain, the contract was not a binding one, & therefore the claim of pre-emption was correct; & that of the trustees & of the exors. not sustainable.—SHREWSBURY (EARL) v. SHREWSBURY (COUNTRESS) (1854), 23 L. T. O. S. 86; 18 Jur. 397.

1748. Effect of death of vendor—Consideration annuity to vendor.—S. agrees to sell his estate to B. in consideration of an annuity for his life. The time limited for the conveyance was Oct. 31; but the annuity was to commence, & A. was to have the rents & profits of the estate, from Apr. 5 preceding. S. died on Nov. 12, before any conveyance was executed. On a bill brought by A. for a specific performance of this agreement, the ct. dismissed it, but without costs.—POPE v. ROOTS (1774), 1 Bro. The vendor died, having devised the estate to pltfs., & appointed one of them his exor. The bill was filed against the provisional assignee of insolvent, & an equitable mtgee. by deposit of the agreement for purchase, & it prayed the payment of the residue of the purchase-money by defts., or by sale of the estate. Pltfs. did not prove their title as devisees. Defts. disclaimed:—Held: the ct. could not make the decree sought without evidence of the devise; but upon payment of the costs of defts., the ct. might, defts. not opposing, declare pltfs. absolutely entitled to the estate.—GABRIEL v. STURGIS (1846), 5 Hare, 97; 15 L. J. Ch. 201; 6 L. T. O. S. 452; 10 Jur. 215; 67 E. R. 843.

Pending a dispute respecting the title to land contracted to be sold, & to avoid the question as to the interest of the purchase-money, the vendor gave the purchaser the opportunity of investing the purchase-money in consols in the joint names of the vendor & purchaser, provided the investment was made by a certain day, & the purchaser made the investment accordingly:—Held: the vendor, having proposed the investment, could not have charged the purchaser with the loss, if the funds had fallen, & the vendor was entitled to the benefit accruing from the funds having risen.—*BURROUGHS v. Application of Act—Contract relating to land or interest in land.]—A mtgee. of land & policies of assurance on the life of the mtgor., which were mortgaged by one deed, acting under his power of sale, sold the land by public auction, but retained the policies. In reply to the purchaser's requisition on the vendor's abstract of title, the vendor's solrs. stated that all the abstracted deeds in the vendor's possession, which description included the mtge. deed, would be delivered up on completion. When the purchase was completed, however, they refused to deliver up that deed on the ground that part of the property to which it related, viz. the policies, had been retained by the vendor, but offered instead a statutory acknowledgment, for its production & indorsed a notice of the purchase thereon. On a summons by the purchaser under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), for delivery up of the mtge. deed:—Held: Vendor & Purchaser

Act, 1874 (c. 78), applies only to land or an interest in land; the vendor, in retaining the policies, did not retain any part of an estate within sect. 2, r. 5, of that Act, & the mtge. deed must be delivered up to the purchaser.—Re WILLIAMS & NEWCASTLE'S (DUCHESS) CONTRACT, [1897] 2 Ch. 144; sub nom. Re FULLER & LEATHLEY'S CONTRACT, 66 L. An application was made to the ct. under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), s. 9, for an opinion whether it was necessary, under Places of Worship Sites Act, 1873 (c. 50), s. 1, to appoint a guardian to concur in the grant on behalf of the infant:—Held: Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), did not apply to a voluntary grant, but this defect might be cured by the admission of a contract for a nominal consideration.—Re SALISBURY (MARQUIS) (1875), L. 1806. General rule—All matters which can be dealt with on reference as to title.]—The purchaser of a farm, consisting in part of 400 acres of heath land, took the objection that a title was not shown to the soil of the heath land, but only to rights of pasturage over it. The vendors took out a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), asking that it might be declared that the purchaser's objections & requisitions were sufficiently answered. Affidavits were filed on both sides, & the deponents were cross-examined. The Master of the Rolls rejected the affidavits & cross-examination, on the ground that evidence by affidavit upon requisitions as to title under the Act ought not to be given unless required by the judge:—Held: the evidence ought to have been admitted, for that, on a proceeding under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), the parties are in the same position as they would have been under a reference as to title in a suit for specific performance.

I have always considered that the Act was intended to enable the ct. to decide in a summary way without a specific performance suit, such questions as whether a requisition has been sufficiently answered according to the practice of conveyances, whether a requisition is precluded by the conditions, & the like, but not to enable the ct. to try in this way disputed questions of fact (JAMES, L.J.).

My opinion is that, upon the true construction of this Act of Parliament, whatever could be done in chambers upon a reference as to title under a decree where the contract was established, can be done upon proceedings under this Act (JAMES, L.J.).—Re BURROUGHS, LYNN & SEXTON (1877), 5 Ch. 1811. — Misdescription.]—A material misdescription in the particulars of a property sold by auction may be corrected by the auctioneer's verbal statement at the sale, & if this is done the purchaser will not be entitled to specific performance with compensation, even if he did not hear the auctioneer's statement; in such a case the vendor is entitled to annul the sale, notwithstanding the existence of a condition that a misstatement in the particulars should not annul the sale, but form the subject of compensation.

I cannot enforce specific performance with compensation against the vendor; & as the purchaser does not wish to complete without compensation, I will rescind the contract, order the return of the deposit with interest, & give the purchaser the costs of investigating the title down to the time he was furnished with the written statement of the auctioneer. 1832. ———.]—At a sale by auction property described in the particulars as “leasehold business premises” was put up for sale under conditions providing that the title should commence with the conveyance to the vendors, & that no objection should be made in respect of anything contained in the lease. Nothing was said in the particulars or conditions as to the contents of the lease; no opportunity was given to intending purchasers to inspect the lease, & the property was bought by a purchaser who had not in fact inspected it. After the sale the purchaser discovered that the lease contained covenants restricting him from carrying on upon the premises any trade or business or doing any act to the nuisance, annoyance, or damage of the lessors or the adjoining tenants, or using the premises as a public-house. He then took out a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), for a declaration that the vendors had not shown a good title under the contract, & for a return of the deposit which he had paid on the purchase:—Held: (1) as the property was put up for sale as business premises the purchaser was entitled to have an assignment of property on which he could carry on any business, subject only to the restrictions imposed by the general law, or in force as to any particular trade; (2) as the covenant imposed serious restrictions upon the use of the premises as business premises, the purchaser was entitled to a declaration that the title was not such as he could be compelled to accept; (3) without prejudice to his right to bring an action for return of the deposit, he was not entitled to any further relief upon the summons.

(4) Semle: the ct. has no jurisdiction, upon a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), to make an order for a return of deposit on the ground of misrepresentation, where such misrepresentation would support an action for rescission.

(5) Although a contract may be such that a ct. of equity would refuse to decree specific performance of it; yet it may be binding at law, & the purchaser may be unable to recover his deposit (STIRLING, J.).

(6) The purchaser . . . can only recover the deposit by raising a question which affects the validity of the contract, & therefore is not entitled to any further relief upon this summons (STIRLING, J.).

(7) Although the purchaser has not been entirely successful he has succeeded to a substantial extent, & I think that the costs ought to be paid by the vendors (STIRLING, J.).—Re DAVIS & CAVEY (1888), 40 Ch. D. 601; 58 L. J. Ch. 143; 60 L. T. 100; 53 J. P. 407; 37 W. R. 217, C. A.

1834. What amounts to—Right to rescind—Exercise of power of rescission.]—One of the questions for decision upon a summons taken out under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), s. 9, was as to whether the vendor had properly exercised the power of rescission of the contract given to him under the ordinary conditions for rescission, in case of the purchaser insisting upon an objection which the vendor is unable or unwilling to remove. It was objected that such question affected the validity of the contract itself, & could not be decided upon a summons under sect. 9:—Held: as the question was one which arose out of the contract itself, it could properly be raised under sect. 9.

The ct. has jurisdiction, upon a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), s. 9, to determine the validity of a notice given by a vendor to rescind his contract to sell.

The matter, however, was not discussed at all in chambers, but the summons was adjourned at once into ct. (NORTH, J.).—Re JACKSON & WOODBURN'S CONTRACT (1887), 37 Ch. D. 44; 57 L. J. Ch. 243; 57 L. T. 753; 36 W. R. 396.

1835. ———.]—(1) A general declaration as to title ought rarely to be made on a vendor & purchaser summons, that procedure being only intended for the decision of isolated points arising out of or connected with the contract.

(2) An isolated point on the form of the conveyance may be dealt with on a vendor & purchaser summons, although resp. may have a right to obtain rescission of the contract on the ground of mistake. Such a right to obtain rescission does not give rise to “a question affecting the existence or validity of the contract” within Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), s. 9.

The lease under which the property was held contained a covenant against assigning without the consent of the lessor, with the usual qualification as to refusal in the case of a respectable & responsible tenant. The vendor agreed to sell the property to the purchasers, who were brewers, under an open contract. The lessor refused to give his consent to the assignment, stating that the main ground of his objection was that he desired the house to remain a free house:—Held: upon summons taken out by the purchasers asking for a declaration that a good title had not been shown, the title was not one which could be forced upon an unwilling purchaser.

(2) I therefore think there should be the same order in this case as in Re Hargreaves & Thompson's Contract, No. 1831, ante, where the vendor was ordered to return the deposit with interest at 4 per cent. from the day when it was paid, & to pay the purchaser's costs of investigating the title (BYRNE, J.).—Re MARSHALL & SALT'S CONTRACT, [1900] 2 Ch. 202; 69 L. An agreement for the sale of certain leasehold houses contained the following stipulation: "The vendor's title is accepted by the purchasers." The leases under which the property was held contained onerous & unusual covenants the existence of which had not been disclosed by the vendor before the contract was entered into, & of which the purchasers had no notice:—Held: the condition as to the acceptance of the title did not affect the vendor's general duty of disclosure, & the purchasers were entitled to rescind the contract & to have the deposit returned with interest.

(2) It appears to me that the purchasers in this case are entitled to succeed, & although not without some hesitation, I think I may also, as in the case of Re Hargreaves & Thompson's Contract, No. 1831, ante, order the return of the deposit with interest & the costs of investigation of title (BYRNE, J.).—Re HAEDICKE & LIPSKI'S CONTRACT, [1901] 2 Ch. 666; 70 L. 1842. Order for rescission of contract.]—An agreement was entered into in Nov. 1887, between A. & B. for the sale to B. of the remaining nine years of the lease of a residential house in Regent street & B. paid a deposit. A. was second under-lessee of the premises. B. sent in certain requisitions, one of which stated that the last receipt for the payment of the rent by A. must be produced. In compliance with this requisition A. produced a receipt signed by the original lessee from the Crown, to whom A. had paid the rent under threat of distress. The purchaser objected that that was not a compliance with the requisition in accordance with Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 3 (5). On Mar. 4, 1888, the purchaser gave notice to the vendor that unless the requisition was duly complied with within one month, the contract was at an end. On Apr. 10, 1888, the vendor took out a summons asking the opinion of the ct. as to whether he had sufficiently complied with the requisition. The purchaser asked for a return of the deposit:—Held: (1) the receipt of the ground landlord was not sufficient; (2) although it was the vendor's summons, the purchaser was entitled to have the contract rescinded, & to a return of the deposit, together with 4 per cent. interest from the time of payment, with the costs of the summons, including the costs of investigating the title, the costs to be a charge on the vendor's interest in the property.—Re HIGGINS & PERCIVAL (1888), 57 L. The purchasers discovered that the premises contained only 935 square yards, the surveyor having made a miscalculation. Neither vendors nor purchasers previously knew the actual area. 1862. —.]—*Vendor in questions between sub-vendor & sub-purchaser.]—*A summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78) asking for relief, to which it is plain from the contract that appct. cannot be entitled, will be stayed as frivolous & vexatious.

A. agreed with B. to sell him a public-house, & that in case A. should take, or be interested or concerned in a public-house, within one-third of a mile of the premises sold during the occupation of B. or his widow A. should pay to B. £500, & a covenant to this effect should be inserted in the conveyance. A's title to the property consisted of an agreement to purchase it from C. which contained a similar provision limited to the occupancy of A. & his widow, & not mentioning any covenant in the conveyance. B. accepted the title & tendered a conveyance containing a covenant by C. in the terms of A's agreement with B. C. refused to enter into this covenant, & B. took out a vendor & purchaser summons for a declaration that he was entitled to a covenant by C. A. moved to stay proceedings under the summons as frivolous & vexatious:—Held: as it was clearly impossible to make a declaration on the summons which would be binding on B.

& the relief, if any, to which appct. was entitled, was specific performance with abatement, to which the declaration asked would not help him, the summons ought to be struck out as frivolous & vexatious.—Re BARTLETT & BERRY'S CONTRACT (1897), 78 L. T. 751.

1863. — Parties to summons.]—(1) It is incumbent on the ct. to decide questions of law between a vendor & a purchaser, yet it must be borne in mind that any such decision does not technically bind any one else but the parties actually before the ct., & does not prevent any person not bound by the decision from at any time bringing fresh litigation upon the purchaser with reference to the same title (JESSEL, M.R.).

(2) Upon the question of costs, I do not consider that, because a particular title may be one which a conveyancer would not recommend a purchaser to accept without a decision of the ct., the purchaser ought not to pay costs if the ct. is of opinion that a good title can be made: on the contrary, the general rule is to order the purchaser to pay the costs, so as to assure his title & show that the ct. entertains no doubt upon it (JESSEL, M.R.).—OSBORNE TO ROWLETT (1880), 13 Ch. 1867. Application in chambers.]—A purchaser who has availed himself of the provisions of Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), & has thereby obtained an order on summons which has disposed of every objection which he thought fit to raise, & under which the vendor has been ordered to make compensation, is not entitled to bring an action, for specific performance of the contract for sale & damages. If a vendor does not comply with the order on the vendor & purchaser summons, the purchaser should apply in chambers to get it enforced.—THOMPSON v. RINGER (1880), 44 L. T. 507; 29 W. R. 520.

SUB-SECT. 4.—REVIEW OF ORDER.

1869. Jurisdiction of Chancery Division.]—(1) Where a good title has been declared on a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), the purchaser is not at liberty to reopen the question by way of review, unless he can prove that since the order on the summons he has discovered material facts, which he could not with reasonable diligence have discovered earlier, showing that the title is defective; in which case he may bring an action of review, the jurisdiction of the old Ct. of Ch. as to allowing proceedings by way of review being still exercisable by the Ch. 1915. ———.]—Deft. in Aug. 1892, agreed to sell some land to pltf. for £150, of which £40 was paid at the time, & the balance was to be paid by twelve equal quarterly instalments of £9 3s. 4d. each. In case of default for thirty days in the payment of any instalment, the whole of the unpaid instalments were to become immediately due & payable, &, in the event of default for thirty days in payment, the vendor was to be at liberty to resell the land, & to retain out of the proceeds of sale the unpaid instalments with interest, & was to pay the balance to the purchaser. The purchaser went into possession under the contract, & retained possession for a considerable time, &, though generally in arrear with the instalments, he had by Aug. 1895, paid them all except the last. The last instalment became due on Sept. 29, 1895, but it was never paid. Correspondence took place, in which the vendor called on the purchaser to pay, but he never gave him notice that, if payment was not made within a specified time, he should treat the contract as abandoned. In Oct. 1896, the purchaser went away, & the vendor was unable to find him. The vendor resumed possession of the land & endeavoured to sell it, but without success, & in Mar. 1898, he agreed to let it for three years

Appeal from master on reference.]—Where a master, on a reference under Vendor & Purchaser Act to settle the title under a written agreement for a lease, ruled that evidence might be given to show that covenants the lease should contain, an appeal does not lie to the Supreme Ct. from the judgment affirming such ruling, it not being a final judgment & the case not coming

k. Necessity for notice to purchaser.]—If the vendor elects to cancel without giving notice, he cannot do so by a mere operation of his mind, but to a tenant who took possession. In June, 1898, the purchaser reappeared, & wrote to the vendor that he was prepared to pay the final instalment. In July, 1898, the purchaser commenced an action against the vendor, claiming specific performance of the agreement of Aug. 1892, & damages in lieu of or in addition to specific performance:—Held: pltf.'s conduct did not amount to a repudiation of his contract, & the vendor was not justified in treating the contract as abandoned, &, though the purchaser was not entitled to specific performance of his contract, he was entitled to damages.—CORNWALL v. HENSON, [1900] 2 Ch. 298; 69 L. J. Ch. 581; 82 L. T. 735; 49 W. R. 42; 16 T. L. R. 422; 41 Sol. Jo. 514, C. A.

1916. Necessity for notice to purchaser—& return of deposit.]—Pltf. agreed to take a house of deft. for two years. Afterwards, on Sept. 4, 1817, he agreed to buy the estate of the vendor, in consideration of £25 paid down, & of the further sum of £425 to be paid on Dec. 25, 1817, on or before which time the conveyance was to be executed. An abstract was delivered on Oct. 20, 1817, & afterwards a draft of the conveyance, with the abstract, was sent to pltf., with a note of deft.'s solr., stating that the deeds were with him, & desiring to hear from pltf. if any objections occurred; & many ineffectual applications were made to see pltf. A notice was served on pltf. on Dec. 22, 1817, that deft. would, on Dec. 23, 24 & 26, attend at pltf.'s house to execute the conveyance, &, on default, he should consider pltf. as refusing to proceed in the purchase, & act accordingly. On Apr. 2, 1818, pltf. returned the abstract, with objections to the title. On Apr. 13 deft. distrained on pltf. for rent. On a bill filed by the vendee for a specific performance:—Held: the vendor should have given notice that he considered the agreement as at an end & should have returned the £25; & not having done so, the ct. directed the usual reference as to the title.—*REYNOLDS v. Purchaser retaining possession without payment—Vendor unable to make good title.]—Where a party had contracted to purchase, & had been eight years in possession of premises to which the vendor was unable to make a good title, & refused either to abandon the agreement or accept such title as the vendor could give, having paid no part of the purchase-money & no rent; the ct., upon a bill filed by the vendor for relief, directed the agreement to be delivered up to be cancelled, & the rents & profits received by the purchaser to be accounted for, & ordered the purchaser to pay the costs of the suit.—*KING v. 1919. — Bankruptcy of purchaser—Assignee required to make election—Refusal to elect.]—Bkpt. had bought some freehold property by auction, & had paid a deposit of £20 per cent. on the amount of the purchase-money; but there being some dispute about the title, the purchase was not completed before the bkpcy. Upon a petition by the vendor, that the assignee might be ordered to deliver up the agreement, & that the vendor might retain the deposit money, a special order was made, giving the assignee a fortnight to elect whether he would fulfil or abandon the agreement, without prejudice to his right to a return of the deposit money.—Re GLOVER, Ex p. BRIDGER (1836), 1 Deac. 581.

1920. — Default in payment—Purchase-money payable by instalments.]—Several suits at law & in equity, to determine the title to certain lands, were pending between persons claiming to be mtgees. of such lands, & one who claimed the same lands in fee by title, under a settlement, paramount to the mtge. Pltf., claiming to be a subsequent mtgee. of the same lands, contracted to purchase the interests of the prior mtgees. in their principal moneys, arrears of interest & securities, & to pay the purchase-money at certain stipulated times, all of which, except an annuity, were to be paid in 1843; & to pay & indemnify the prior mtgees. against the past & future costs of the suits & proceedings; & time was to be of the essence of the contract. Pltf. did not pay the instalments until a considerable time after the stipulated period, but such later payments were accepted by the vendors. The bill, filed in 1845, when some of the payments still remained to be paid, alleged that defts. refused to perform the agreement, & prayed a specific performance:—Held: every default by pltf. in payment of the instalments at the stipulated time was a new breach of the contract, giving defts. the right to rescind it; but, to preserve such a right, it must be asserted immediately after the breach occurred, &, in this case, the breach had been waived.—*HUNTER v. 1922. — Vendor's agent exceeding authority.]

—Where a party seeks to set aside a contract for sale entered into by his agents in excess of their authority, but confirms a contract to let, which was within their authority, he has a right, before any bill is filed against him by the lessee & asserted purchaser for specific performance, to file a bill to have the agreement cancelled, offering to grant a lease if the lessee chooses; because, if he brought an ejectment, the contract to let would be an answer to his action; & if he had brought an action for rent, he might have been considered as acquiescing in the whole agreement, the contract to let & the contract to sell being in the same instrument.

A. gave his agents authority to let, & a qualified authority to state what was the selling price of property, but no authority to sell. The agents contracted in his name to let, with an option to the lessee to buy at a stated price. The lessor filed a bill to have the agreement delivered up to be cancelled, on the ground that the agents had exceeded their authority; & the lessee filed a bill for the specific performance of the contract:—

There was a small balance due on an outstanding mtgee., & the vendor had agreed with the mtgee. before the date fixed for the completion of the sale to pay off the mtgee., but it was not actually paid off before that date. The purchaser was accidentally prevented from completing at the fixed date, & the vendor claimed a right to rescind the contract. In an action by the purchaser for specific performance:—Held: the vendor was entitled to rescind, notwithstanding the fact that he had not paid off the mtgee., & procured the legal estate to be revested in him, the unrevoked consent of the mtgee. being effectual though revocable, to validate his title.—BRICKLES v. SNELL, [1916] 2 A. SUB-SECT. 2.—RESALE.

1949. When right arises—Default in payment.]—A. agreed with B. by deed that he, A., would, on payment of £900, as thereafter mentioned, grant, sell, & convey to B. the messuage, lands, & premises therein mentioned; & B. covenanted to pay the sum on or before Jan. 1, then next, or whenever a good title to the messuage, etc., should be tendered to him; but it was agreed that if B. should, on or before Jan. 1, be desirous that that sum should remain a charge on the premises, then B. might require same, so that upon the completion by A. of the conveyances, B. should execute to A. proper conveyances for securing the sum of £900 on the premises, with interest. Covenant by B. to pay the interest so long as the principal sum should remain unpaid. Proviso, that in case the interest should be in arrear thirty days next after same should have become due, B. should be considered as a tenant to A. of the messuage, lands, etc., from the date thereof, at the yearly rent of £40 10s. payable on Apr. 16 & Oct. 16 in every year; & it should be lawful for A., his heirs & assigns, to enter & distrain, & to sell & dispose of the distress, or otherwise to deal with same, in like manner as in distresses for rent reserved by lease, to the end that A. might be fully paid & satisfied the interest & costs. B. gave due notice that he would require the purchase-money to remain a charge on the premises for five years; he was let into possession & received the rents, & in July, 1828, became bkpt., & half a year's interest being in arrear for more than thirty days, A. distrained on the tenants then in possession of the premises. The assignees paid the amount of the distress. On Oct. 16, 1828, after bkpt. had obtained his certificate, another half year's interest became due, & an action of covenant was brought against bkpt. to recover same:—Held: the unpaid vendor was entitled to have the estate resold, & the produce & interest applied in payment of the purchase-money, & to prove against the estate for the residue.—HOPE v. BOOTH (1830), 1 B. & Ad. 498; 9 L. SECT. 2.—FORFEITURE AND RECOVERY OF DEPOSIT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1958. Nature of deposit—Whether security for performance.—COLLINS v. STIMSON, No. 1999, post.

1959. ———.]—On a sale of real estate the purchaser paid £500, which was stated in the contract to be paid "as a deposit, & in part payment of the purchase-money." The contract provided that the purchase should be completed on a day named, & that if the purchaser should fail to comply with the agreement the vendor should be at liberty to resell & to recover any deficiency in price as liquidated damages. The purchaser was not ready with his purchase-money, & after repeated delays, the vendor resold the property for the same price. The original purchaser having brought an action for specific performance:—Held: (1) the purchaser had lost by his delay his right to enforce specific performance. (2) The deposit, although to be taken as part payment if the contract was completed, was also a guarantee for the performance of the contract, & pltf. having failed to perform his contract within a reasonable time, had no right to a return of the deposit.

(3) In order to enable the vendor to act [retain deposit] . . . there must be acts on the part of the purchaser which not only amount to delay sufficient to deprive him of the equitable remedy of specific performance but which would make his conduct amount to a repudiation on his part of the contract (COTTON, L.J.).

(4) The effect of this clause is . . . that the purchaser seeking damages is no longer obliged to prove his willingness & readiness to complete on the day named, but may still recover if he can prove such readiness & willingness within a reasonable time after the stipulated day (FRY, L.J.).—HOWE v. SMITH (1884), 27 Ch. D. 89; 53 L. J. Ch. 1055; 50 L. T. 573; 48 J. P. 773; 32 W. R. 802, C. A.

1960. ———.]—The conditions in a contract of sale of land provided that the purchaser should pay a deposit, & that if he failed to comply with the conditions the deposit should be forfeited & the vendors should be at liberty to resell. The purchaser paid the deposit, & accepted the title, but when the time for completion arrived he could not provide the residue of the purchase-money. The vendors thereupon gave the purchaser notice that the contract was rescinded & the deposit forfeited. Three years afterwards, the vendors having contracted to sell to another purchaser, it was decided that their title was bad, owing to a defect which had appeared upon the face of the abstract delivered to the first purchaser. The first purchaser thereupon brought an action to recover his deposit on the ground of mutual mistake & failure of consideration:—Held: the title having been accepted, & the deposit having been forfeited solely in consequence of the purchaser's default, he was not entitled to recover the deposit.

The deposit serves two purposes, if the purchase is carried out it goes against the purchase-money, but its primary purpose is this, it is a guarantee that the purchaser means business (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—*SOPER v. SUB-SECT. 2.—FORFEITURE.

A. In General.

1971. General rule—Forfeiture on default by purchaser.—The deposit is not merely a part payment of the purchase-money, but constitutes a security for the completion of the purchase, so that if the purchaser fails to perform his part the vendor may retain it. On the other hand if the vendor fails to perform the contract on his part, & there is no default on the part of the purchaser, the latter may, in the absence of a stipulation to the contrary, recover the deposit from the vendor (STIRLING, J.).—LEVY v. STODDON, [1898] 1 Ch. 478; 67 L. J. Ch. 313; 78 L. T. 185; on appeal, [1899] 1 Ch. 5, C. A.

1973. What amounts to default—Failure to complete on appointed day—Time not of the essence—Necessity for notice of intention to compel strict performance.—In general, the time appointed for the performance of a contract is of the essence of the contract itself.

But, where, from the nature of the subject-matter, the exact day does not appear to be material, a party who seeks to exact a forfeiture in case of failure on the appointed day must give notice to the other party that he intends to hold him to the day.—CARPENTER v. BLANDFORD (1828), 8 B. & C. 575; Dan. & Ll. 175; 3 Man. & Ry. K. B. 93; 7 L. J. O. S. K. B. 58; 108 E. R. 1156.

1974. — — — — — Time of the essence—Stipulation in nature of penalty.—A co. incorporated by Act of Parliament for making a dock agreed with a landowner to purchase a piece of land for £4,000, of which £2,000 was to be paid at once, & the remaining £2,000 on a future day named in the agreement, with a provision that if the whole of the £2,000 & interest was not paid off by that day, in which respect time was to be of the essence of the contract, the vendors might repossess the land as of their former estate, without any obligation to repay any part of the purchase-money:—Held: this stipulation was in the nature of a penalty, from which the co. was entitled to be relieved on payment of the balance of the purchase-money, with interest.—Re DAGENHAM (THAMES) DOCK CO., Ex p. HULSE (1873), 8 Ch. App. 1022; 43 L. J. Ch. 261; 38 J. P. 180; 21 W. R. 898, L. J.

1977. Relief against forfeiture—On what terms granted.—(1) The bill praying an inquiry into the title & a specific performance, on deft.'s motion after answer an inquiry was directed as to the title, at what time the abstract was delivered, & whether it was sufficient: but the ct. would not decide upon any matter of relief.

(2) Relief against forfeiture of the deposit upon putting the other party in the same situation as if the contract had been performed at the time agreed.—MOSS v. MATTHEWS (1796), 3 Ves. 279; 30 E. R. 1010, L. C.

Annotations:—As to (1) Reid, Gibson v. Clarke (1813), 2 Ves. & B. 103; Paton v. Rogers (1813), 1 Ves. & B. 351.

1978. Deposit in hands of agent—At whose risk.—Vendor, resisting an application by the purchaser for payment into ct. of the deposit, in the hands of the vendor's agent, charged with a loss by the agent's failure.

This is not strictly a sale by auction. Upon a sale by auction the vendor determines who is to receive the deposit. The auctioneer is not a stakeholder of the purchaser: at least not of his choice. If he were a stakeholder for both parties, either would have a right to propose to change the stakeholder; & the party refusing takes upon himself the risk.

Sect. 2.—Forfeiture and recovery of deposit: Sub-sect. 2, A., B., C. & D.; sub-sect. 3, A.]

The motion in ct. has at least as much weight as a private proposition. This proposition was resisted upon the ground that the deposit was secure in the hands of the agent. The refusal to concur in that proposition throws the risk of his credit on the party refusing. Under these circumstances, without entering into the general question, it would be too hard to throw that loss upon this purchaser (GRANT, M.R.).—FENTON v. BROWNE, BROWNE v. The intention may be collected from other parts of the agreement. Thus, where there was a distinct clause providing that either party making default should forfeit £1,000:—Held: the deposit was not to be forfeited, & might be recovered back on A.’s disposing of the house as above, but it could not be recovered back before A. disposed of the house.—PALMER v. By a contract for sale of real estate it was stipulated that a portion of the purchase-money should be paid immediately, & the residue on the completion of the contract. There was no stipulation as to the forfeiture of the deposit in case the purchase went off through the purchaser’s default. After the title had been accepted the purchaser became bkpt., & the trustee disclaimed the contract under Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (c. 71), s. 23, & called upon the vendor to repay the deposit:—Held: the vendor was entitled to retain the deposit.—Re PARNELL, Ex p. A purchaser on signing the contract for sale paid a deposit to vendor’s solrs. as stakeholders. The contract did not contain a clause forfeiting the deposit on default by the purchaser. The purchaser failed to complete & the vendor obtained judgment for specific performance, which the purchaser failed to comply with:—Held: the vendor was entitled to rescission of the contract & also to receive & retain the deposit.—HALL v. C. Effect of Proceedings for Specific Performance.

1986. Purchaser failing to obtain decree—Failure to pay purchase-money—Vendor refused costs unless deposit returned.]—Under two agreements for sale, one of which was to be completed on June 1, & the other on Sept. 29, both in 1846, disputes arose upon the title, & upon certain valuations incident to the purchase. The conveyances were engrossed on Jan. 4, 1847, & the vendor made two requisitions to the purchaser to complete the first on Jan. 11, & the second on Jan. 25, 1847, & intimated that non-compliance with the requisitions would be treated by the vendor as a breach of the agreements. The purchaser did not comply; but his solrs. reiterated claims to certain deductions & abatements. The disputes continued until after Feb. 13, 1847, when the purchaser filed a bill seeking specific performance:—Held: the circumstances & delay did not constitute a case of such default by pltf. as to preclude him from a title to specific performance; but, it appearing on the correspondence that the claims of deduction & abatements had not been the cause which delayed the completion of the purchase, but that want of means on the part of the purchaser to pay even so much purchase-money as, according to his view, he had to pay, was the cause of the delay up to & until after the date of the filing of the bill, the purchaser had so acted as to have lost the right to enforce a specific performance. 1992. When amount recoverable—Vendor failing to make good title.—A purchaser of a leasehold may object to the vendor's title, on the ground that he has incurred a forfeiture by omitting for the space of a month to pay the annual premium of insurance pursuant to his covenant; although it does not appear that the lessor has taken advantage of the forfeiture.

Upon a sale of a leasehold, the purchaser agreed to pay a deposit of £50, & the residue on completion. Instead of actually paying the £50, he gave the vendor £5 & an I.O.U. for £45.—Held: the vendor, failing to make a good title, was not entitled to recover the £45 upon an account stated; & the defence was admissible under never indebted.—*WILSON v. 1993. — As damages on resale by vendor—Though loss less than deposit.—An agreement for the sale of a public-house by pltf. to deft. contained the following clauses: " &, as earnest of the agreement, the said purchaser has paid into the hands of the vendor the sum of £50, which is to be allowed in part at the completion of this agreement, & if the said purchaser should fail to fulfil his part of the agreement then the deposit money shall become forfeited in part of the following damages. . . . If either of the said parties should neglect to perform or refuse to comply with any part of this agreement, the party so refusing or neglecting shall pay to the other the sum of £50, hereby mutually agreed upon to be the damages ascertained & fixed on breach thereof." Deft., instead of paying the deposit gave pltf. an I.O.U. for the amount & ultimately refused to complete the purchase, & pltf. resold at a loss.—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover the £50 & not merely the actual damage which he had sustained by deft.'s breach of contract.—*HINTON v. 1994. — Sale by auctioneer.—Pltfs. were auctioneers employed to sell certain premises which were put up to auction for sale & knocked down to deft. as the highest bidder & purchaser. Deft. signed a contract in writing, acknowledging himself the purchaser, & that he had paid by way of deposit a sum in part of the purchase-money. He had not in fact actually paid any part of the purchase-money, but had given an I.O.U. to the auctioneers for the deposit.—Held: in an action by the auctioneers upon an account stated to recover the sum for which the I.O.U. was given, there was evidence to go to the jury to support it, & the action was well brought.—CLEAVE v. MOORE (1857), 28 L. T. O. S. 255; 3 Jur. N. S. 48; 5 W. R. 234.

Whereupon C., pays A., part of the purchase-money as a deposit. 1996. Purchaser from assignee in bankruptcy—Bankruptcy superseded—Trustee without title.]—

Bkpt.'s assignees had contracted for the sale of his copyhold lands & received a deposit. The commission was afterwards superseded because when it issued petitioning creditor's debt was not due. Another commission issued upon the petition of another creditor & the same assignees were chosen:—Held: pltf. having abandoned his contract pending the old commission might recover back his deposit.—*BARTLETT v. The supposed principal afterwards repudiates the contract; & after notice of the fact to the agent of the vendor, A. pays the deposit money, according to the conditions of sale. Upon its turning out that the title is defective, A. is entitled to recover the deposit in his own name.—LANGSTROTH v. TOULMIN (1822), 3 Stark. 145; 171 E. R. 802, N. P.

1998. Lunatic—Vendor ignorant of lunacy.]—Pltf. contracted for the purchase of an estate from deft., & paid a deposit on the terms that unless he objected to the title within a certain time, same should be considered as accepted. No objection was made by him to the title. Pltf. at the time of the contract & of the payment of the deposit was a lunatic, incapable of understanding the meaning of a contract or of managing his affairs, & derived no benefit from the contract; but these facts were unknown to deft., who made the contract with him fairly & bona fide, believing him capable of understanding the meaning of same:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to recover the deposit notwithstanding he was a lunatic incapable of contracting or of understanding the meaning of contracts.—BEAVAN v. M'DONNELL (1854), 9 Exch. 309; 2 C. L. R. 474; 23 L. J. Ex. 94; 22 L. T. O. S. 243.

1999. Trustee in bankruptcy of purchaser—Agreement for forfeiture—Through non-completion by purchaser.]—

W. having secretly realised the greater part of his available property & effects, absconded with the proceeds. W. was subsequently adjudicated a bkpt., & on Oct. 4, 1882, pltf. was appointed a trustee of the estate. On Oct. 10, W. entered into an agreement, in an assumed name, with F. for the purchase of certain house property, & paid to deft., as stakeholder under the agreement, a certain sum by way of deposit, which it was admitted formed part of the proceeds of the secret realisation. The agreement provided (inter alia), that the deposit money should be forfeited to the vendor if the purchaser neglected or failed to complete the purchase. W. was shortly afterwards arrested & convicted as an absconding bkpt., & the purchase of the property was consequently never completed.

It was admitted that both deft. & F. had acted throughout bona fide in the ordinary course of business, & that the non-completion of the agreement was not caused by any default on the part of F. Pltf. having claimed to have the deposit money paid over for the benefit of bkpt.'s estate:—Held: inasmuch as it was of the essence of the contract that the deposit money should be forfeited if the purchase was not completed, such money belonged to F. & could not be followed by the trustee of bkpt.'s estate.

According to the law of vendor & purchaser the inference is that such deposit is paid as a guarantee for the performance of the contract, & where the contract goes off by default of the purchaser, the vendor is entitled to retain the deposit. . . . In the present case the deposit was paid not to the vendor, but to an auctioneer, & the law, as is well known, is that an auctioneer to whom a deposit is paid under such circumstances receives it as the agent of both parties, & cannot part with it without the sanction of both of them (POLLOCK, B.).—COLLINS v. STIMSON (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 142; 52 L. J. Q. B. 440; 48 L. T. 828; 47 J. P. 439; 31 W. R. 920, D. C.

2003. Contract not completed—Agreement unstamped & unsigned.]—Declaration on special agreement for the sale of a lease of a house in order to recover a deposit for the purchase, the supposed agreement being unstamped, but not having been signed by either of the parties, or by the auctioneer as their agent, pltf. may recover for money had & received. In such case it is incumbent on deft. to show that when the deposit was demanded by pltf., he tendered an assignment of the lease.—ADAMS v. FAIRBAIN (1817), 2 Stark. 277; 171 E. R. 645, N. P.

2004. — Purchaser refusing to sign contract.]

—Pltf. contracted to purchase of deft. the lease, etc., of a public-house by a memorandum in the following form: "Received of Mr. Moeser the sum of £80 being the deposit on account of £800, the purchase-money for the Wheat Sheaf Tavern, the contract for which is now being prepared, to be signed by the vendor & purchaser when completed & ready for signature. B. B. Wisker." The contract tendered to pltf. for signature contained amongst others, stipulations that the purchaser should pay the expenses of the investigation of the vendor's title, & that, if the purchaser should insist on any objection or requisition as to title which the vendor should be unable or unwilling to remove or comply with, the vendor might annul the sale, & return the deposit, but without any interest or costs of investigating the title; & that if the purchaser should fail to comply with the above conditions his deposit should thereupon be forfeited to the vendor, who should be at liberty to resell the property. Pltf. refused to sign this contract, on the ground that it contained unreasonable terms, & deft. resold the property:—Held: the pltf. was entitled to recover back his deposit.—MOESER v. WISKER (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 120; 40 L. J. C. P. 94; 24 L. T. 134; 19 W. R. 351.

2006. — — — — —.]—By a document of July 10, 1922, the purchasers agreed to purchase certain freehold land & a nursery from the vendor "subject to a proper contract to be prepared by the vendor's solrs." & acknowledged having paid £240 "as deposit & in part payment of the purchase-money." Completion was fixed for Nov. 2. The purchasers signed the document & the vendor added & signed a receipt for the deposit confirming the sale.

A proper contract was subsequently prepared by the vendor's solrs., approved by the purchasers' solr., executed by the vendor, & tendered to the purchasers for execution. The purchasers, however, refused to sign it, declined to proceed with the transaction, & claimed the return of the deposit:—Held: the document of July 10, 1922, was only conditional, & did not constitute a firm contract, & the purchasers were in the circumstances entitled to recover the deposit; semble: the deposit, unless expressly stated to be so, is not a guarantee that the purchaser will do his best to carry out the purchase, & so forfeitable to the vendor if he fails to do so; but is an anticipatory part payment of the purchase-money.—CHILLINGWORTH v. ESCHÉ, [1924] 1 Ch. 97; 93 L. J. Ch. 129; 129 L. T. 808; 40 T. L. R. 23; 68 Sol. Jo. 80, C. A.

2008. Contract not enforceable — Statute of Frauds.]

—Lands of deft. were put up by him to auction; one condition of the sale was, that the purchaser should pay a deposit & half the auction duty. Pltf. purchased & paid as above. He signed a written memorandum of the contract, which J. N., the auctioneer's clerk, also signed as follows: "Witness J. N." J. N. received the above sums for M. the auctioneer, & signed the receipt, being authorised by M. to do so, as follows: "For Mr. M.—J. N." Money was afterwards paid over by the auctioneer, on the purchase, to B., deft.'s attorney, as his agent. Deft. not being able to make out his title, B., as his agent, wrote a letter to pltf.'s attorney, naming pltf. & deft., saying that he could not make out the title to "this property as freehold," advising pltf. "to relinquish his purchase," & referring to the "charges" to be made by pltf.'s attorney:—Held: J. N. did not sign the memorandum as agent to deft.; neither his agency nor the contract were recognised by the receipt of the money or B.'s letter; here was, consequently, no proof of a contract to make a title on which deft. could be charged under Stat. Frauds, s. 4; & therefore, although pltf. might recover the deposit & moiety of auction duty as money had & received, he could not recover interest thereon, nor his expenses of investigating the title.—*GOSBELL v. there. Some time afterwards, the remainder of the purchase-money not having been paid, & possession not having been given up to A., the landlord withdrew his consent:—Held: the contract was conditional on the landlord's consent being obtained; & the verbal consent originally given having been withdrawn before any change of tenancy had taken place, it must be considered as not having been given, & the condition not having been performed, the money was paid on a consideration which had failed, & A. might maintain money had & received, to recover back the £50 paid.—*WRIGHT v. 2014. Vendor not named in contract—Effect of knowledge at time of payment of deposit.—Pltf. signed a contract for the purchase of a leasehold shop from "the vendor," subject to particulars & conditions; & the auctioneer signed "as agent for the vendor." Pltf. paid a deposit, & the vendor's solr. forwarded to pltf.'s solrs. an abstract of title, & in reply they wrote: "without prejudice to any question which may arise as to the contract of purchase herein, we beg to name Tuesday next to examine abstract of title, with deeds, etc." After examining the abstract they forwarded requisitions, writing at the foot of them, "The above requisitions are made without prejudice to any question which may arise as to the contract for the purchase of the premises." Pltf. subsequently repudiated the contract, on the ground (inter alia), that the contract did not disclose the name of the vendor, & brought an action to recover the deposit:—Held: pltf. could not recover, having chosen, knowing that the vendor's name did not appear in the memorandum, to pay the deposit & receive the abstract of title; & the expression in the correspondence, "without prejudice to any question which may arise as to the contract of purchase," could not have been meant or understood as referring to the validity of the contract.—*THOMAS v. 2017. — No title at time of contract.—By a contract for the sale of freehold property dated Sept. 27, 1917, the date fixed for completion was Nov. 1. The vendors having failed to show a title by Nov. 6, the purchaser on that date gave notice of repudiation unless a proper title was shown by Nov. 11:—Held: the notice was reasonable, & the vendor's failure to comply with the notice, entitled the purchaser to repudiate & recover the deposit. Semble: the purchaser would be entitled to the same relief on the ground that at the date of the contract the vendors had no title to the property, & there was therefore a want of mutuality.—Ile BAYLEY & SHOESMITH'S CONTRACT (1918), 87 L. One of the conditions of sale was, that the title would commence with the lease granted to him, & that purchasers were not to object to there being no reversion in him, the vendor:—Held: assuming that these were not improved leasehold ground "rents" a purchaser was precluded from objecting thereto by the condition of sale, & could not recover back his deposit

2023. ———.]—A contract for sale of superfluous land of a railway co. which had been conveyed by the co. to the vendor contained a stipulation that the purchaser should assume & admit that everything, if anything was necessary, was done by the co. to enable them to sell the land as surplus land, & should not call for or require production of any evidence to that effect; & a further stipulation that if the purchasers should fail to comply with the terms of the agreement the deposit should be forfeited to the vendor. The land was not situate in a town or used for building purposes. In the course of the investigation of the title the purchaser discovered that the prior owners had not waived their right of pre-emption; & as the vendor refused to remedy the defect, the purchaser brought an action claiming a return of the deposit & damages. The vendor then sold the land to one of the prior owners:—Held: the purchaser was bound by the stipulations to admit the title of the co. to sell to the vendor; & as he had refused to abide by that stipulation he had broken the contract, & could not maintain the action, or claim a return of his deposit.—*BEST v. The purchaser afterwards discovered aliunde what he regarded as a serious defect in the prior title; but it was not suggested that the alleged defect was known to the vendor when framing the conditions of sale. On a summons under the Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), for a declaration that the vendors had not shown a good title to the property, & for an order for repayment of the deposit with interest & costs:—Held: the purchaser was precluded by the third condition of sale from making any objection in respect of the alleged defect in the prior title, & the summons must be dismissed.—Re NATIONAL PROVINCIAL BANK OF ENGLAND & MARSH, [1895] 1 Ch. 190; 71 L. One of the conditions of sale provided that the purchaser should make no objection or requisition as to the title between the date of an underlease & the date of an assignment of that underlease, but should assume that the assignment vested in the assignee a good title for the residue of the term. Deft. discovered that owing to a breach of trust & the fraudulent concealment of a will during the period covered by the condition, the title offered by pltf. was positively bad even as a holding title. He therefore refused to complete. (9) "If any error or misstatement shall appear to have been made in the particulars of sale, it is not to annul the sale; but shall entitle the purchaser to compensation." 2033. — Objection not made within stipulated time.—Pltf. was the purchaser, at a sale by auction, of an estate put up for sale by deft., together with A. since deceased, subject to conditions of sale. By the third condition the vendors were to deliver an abstract of title within seven days, & "all objections & requisitions not stated in writing & delivered to the vendors' solr. within fourteen days from the delivery of the abstract, were to be considered as waived," & in that respect, "time was to be of the essence of the contract." The twelfth condition stipulated that "the vendors being trustees should not be required to obtain the concurrence of any one interested in the proceeds of the sale," & the fourteenth condition stated that "if the purchaser should fail to comply with these conditions his deposit should be thereupon actually forfeited to the vendors," who were to be at liberty to resell & recover the deficiency, if any, & the costs of resale from the defaulting purchaser. Pltf. signed the usual agreement to complete the purchase according to the conditions, & paid a deposit of £300. An abstract of title was delivered within seven days, which showed that the property had been devised to deft. & his co-trustee A., since deceased, upon trust to pay the income to F., testator's son-in-law, for life, & after his decease to sell the estate & stand possessed of the proceeds "upon the trusts for the children of F. as therein mentioned." It was stated in the abstract that F. would join in conveying the property; but the abstract was silent as to whether or not F. had any children. An objection, though not until after the expiration of the stipulated fourteen days, was made by the purchaser to the title, on the ground that F. being still alive the power of sale had not arisen & the vendors could make no title, to which the vendors replied, that the objection was made too late; & it was not a valid one. It subsequently appeared that the trusts in favour of the children of F. were for the benefit of such of his children by H., testator's daughter, as should be living at testator's death, to be paid to them if sons at twenty-one, or if daughters at that age or marriage, with limitations over for the benefit of survivors on the death of any child under twenty-one & being a daughter unmarried. F. & H. had eight children living at testator's death, all of whom at the date of the sale had attained twenty-one, & three of whom being daughters had married & settled their shares of the trust fund. An action having been brought by pltf., the purchaser, to recover his deposit:—Held: he was entitled to recover it back, although the objection to the sale was not made within the stipulated fourteen days, the vendors having in fact no title at all to sell the property, & no power to make one.—*WANT v. On investigation of the title it appeared that the houses were part of a property which had been sold by a building society in lots, subject to stringent restrictive covenants which were admitted to make the title not a marketable one. T. having declined to procure a release of the covenants, C. brought an action to recover back his deposit. T. adduced evidence that C. knew of the restrictions at the time of the contract, & the jury found that he did:—Held: this evidence could not be admitted to modify the terms of the express contract, & the pltf. was entitled to recover.—*CATO v. 2042. When deposit recoverable—Power subject to conditions—Conditions not fulfilled.—Pltf. purchased land, & paid a deposit. The condition of sale stated that the sale was made by a first mtgee. under a power of sale. It afterwards appeared that the power of sale was given only in case the mtgee. should give notice in writing to the mtgor. to pay the money due, & the mtgor. should not pay within three calendar months after such notice; & it was provided that the receipts of the mtgee. should discharge the person paying from being answerable for misapplication of the money, or inquiring into the propriety of the sale purporting to be made in pursuance of the power, & from being obliged to be satisfied whether the terms on which the sale was made by virtue of the power were complied with. After this mtge. & before the sale, the mtgor. had executed several additional mtges. on the property. No notice was in fact given to him by the mtgee., but, before the sale, & after the subsequent mtges., he agreed in writing that it should be lawful for the first mtgee. to sell without giving notice:—Held: the purchaser, upon discovery of these facts, was entitled to rescind the contract & recover the deposit. Although, after the sale & before the rescinding of the contract, the mtgor., the first mtgee. & several, whether all or not did not appear, of the subsequent mtgees., had executed an indenture, whereby it was declared & agreed that the sale should be valid although no notice had been given.—*FORSTER v. 2043. — Sale by trustees of settlement—Conditions of sale not fulfilled.—Upon a contract for the sale of an estate, one of the conditions of sale disclosed that the estate was limited to the use of Mrs. C. for life, with remainder to trustees to sell for the benefit of her children; & "there being three only of such children, all of whom had attained the age of twenty-one," it was stipulated that such children, or their assigns or trustees, should, if required, join in the conveyance to the purchaser; but that no objection should be taken to the title by the purchaser on account of the sale taking place in the lifetime of Mrs. C. It appeared that two of the children of Mrs. C. were married women with children, & that they had settled their funds in trust for themselves for life, with remainder to their children:—Held: as the grandchildren of Mrs. C. were minors, & neither they nor their trustees could effectually join in the conveyance, the condition of sale was not fulfilled, & the purchaser was entitled to recover back his deposit.—MOSLEY v. HIDE (1851), 17 Q. B. 91; 20 L. J. Q. B. 539; 17 L. T. O. S. 106; 117 E. R. 1216; sub nom. MOSELEY v. HIDE, 15 Jur. 899.

S. & H. S., "their heirs, exors. & administrators," upon trust that W. S. & H. S., or the survivor of them, or the heirs, exors., or administrators of such survivor, should sell. Testator further declared that W. S. & H. S., or the survivor of them, or the exors. or administrators of such survivor, should hold the proceeds of the sale in trust to pay debts & invest all the residue of the trust moneys in govt. or real securities, & pay the dividends equally between testator's wife & daughter during their lives, & wholly to the survivor after the decease of one of them; & after the decease of that survivor to divide the whole equally amongst all the then living children of testator, or, failing them, according to the Stat. Distributions. Testator also appointed W. S. & H. S. his exors. They acted in the trust, & H. S., the survivor, devised all his real & personal trust estates to A. & B., whom he also appointed his exors., to hold to them, their heirs, exors., administrators & assigns, upon the same trusts as testator H. S. held them. After the death of H. S., A. & B. sold the messuage in question to C., who subsequently contracted with pltf. to sell it to him in fee. In an action by pltf. to recover the deposit money paid under this contract, on the ground that C. had failed to make out a good title:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover; inasmuch as, by reason of the omission of "assigns" in the description of the donees of the power of sale in the devise by S. creating the trust, the title of the devisees of H. S. to convey to C. was too doubtful for a ct. of equity to compel specific performance of the contract.

r. Action for recovery—Necessity for notice of rescission & demand.—

(2) S. in 1810 bought the messuage in fee for £462. The price paid to A. & B. by C., upon the sale of it to him in 1855, was only £73 4s., & the contract price between C. & pltf., in 1859, was £350:—Held: the inadequacy of the price at which A. & B. sold constituted a breach of trust; & as pltf., having notice, was affected thereby, pltf. was entitled on that ground to refuse to complete the contract.—STEVENS v. AUSTEN (1861), 3 E. & E. 685; 30 L. J. Q. B. 212; 3 L. T. 810; 7 Jur. N. S. 873; 121 E. R. 600.

2047. — Sale under power of attorney—Sale not authorised by power.]—B. executed a voluntary settlement of land in favour of his wife & children, which contained a power of sale; subsequently, B. being about to leave England, executed a power of attorney to E., authorising him to sell all or any of his lands, but in general terms. E., as B.'s attorney, agreed to sell a portion of the land comprised in the settlement to deft., & deft. contracted the next day, May 4, 1876, to sell the same piece of land to pltf. On the execution of this contract a deposit of £200 was paid, & the purchase was to be completed on Jan. 1, 1877. The title was objected to by pltf. on the ground that the power of attorney did not authorise the sale to deft., & an action was commenced in the Exch. Div. in Aug. 1877 for the return of their deposit, & for damages for breach of the contract; deft. asserted that the contract was binding & the title good, & by his counter-claim asked for specific performance. An order had been obtained by consent in another action to administer the trusts of the settlement, confirming the proposed sale by E. to deft., & it had also been decided in the action that an order might be made directing a person to convey for B. Deft. subsequently offered a conveyance direct from B. or from the trustees of the settlement, which was declined:—Held: the power of attorney did not authorise E. to sell to deft. any portion of the land comprised in the settlement; & such a sale was not sufficient to call into operation the 27 Eliz., c. 4, pltf. could not be affected by the order in the administration action, & the title being defective, pltf. were entitled to recover their deposit, with the costs of the action, the damages to be ascertained to be limited to the conveyancing costs.—*GENERAL MEAT SUPPLY ASSOCN., LTD. v. 2048. — Sale by trustees of will—No immediate power of sale conferred—Offer to procure conveyance by tenant for life.]—Vendors contracted to sell land as trustees for sale & the purchaser paid a deposit. Upon investigation of the title it appeared that the vendors had no power of sale until the death of an existing tenant for life. The purchaser objected to the title, & the vendors thereupon offered to procure a conveyance from the tenant for life under the powers of Settled Land Acts. The purchaser declined to enter into a new contract with the tenant for life, & took out a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), to have it declared that the vendors had not shown a good title in accordance with the contract, & claiming a return of the deposit, with interest thereon at 4 per cent. per annum from the date of the contract until payment & the costs of investigating the title:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to an order in the terms of his summons.—Re BRYANT & BARNINGHAM'S CONTRACT (1890), 44 Ch. D. 218; 59 L. J. Ch. 636; 63 L. T. 20; 38 W. R. 469, C. A.

The purchaser objected to the title; & after the time fixed for completion had passed, the vendors offered to obtain the concurrence of the beneficiaries, & make a title in that way:—Held: the purchaser could not, after the time for completion was passed, be compelled to take a title which was different from that which he had agreed to take, & which required investigation; & the vendors must repay to him the deposit that he had paid, with interest, & pay his costs of investigating the title.—Re HEAD'S TRUSTEES & MACDONALD (1890), 45 Ch. should the completion of the purchases be delayed from any cause whatever beyond that period the purchaser was to pay interest on the balance of the purchase-money from that day until the completion of the purchase at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. Pltf. paid the deposit at the time of the sale, but owing to objections taken to the title the contract was not completed by Aug. 17. In an action against the vendor & auctioneers to recover the deposit:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to recover, for that by the conditions of sale, the parties had expressly contemplated a postponement of completion of the contract beyond Aug. 17, & time was not of the essence of the contract.—*PATRICK v. A contract for the sale of certain property contained the usual provision that, in the event of the purchaser insisting upon any requisition which the vendor was unable or unwilling to comply with, the vendor might, by notice in writing, rescind the contract. A requisition was made & insisted upon which was the subject of considerable correspondence extending beyond the day fixed for completion, & in which the purchaser inquired, but without result, whether the vendor intended to rescind. In the meantime the vendor had, unknown to the purchaser, been negotiating for the sale of the property to a third party. Finally, the purchaser commenced an action for repayment of the deposit, & other relief. The vendor counterclaimed specific performance:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to be relieved from the contract & to repayment of the deposit.—SMITH v. WALLACE, [1895] 1 Ch. 385; 64 L. J. 2061. — For completion.]—S. agreed to purchase from K. & J., land speculators, a farm for his own occupation forming part of a much larger estate which K. & J. had contracted to purchase with a view of sub-selling it in several lots at a profit. The contract between S., & K. & J. named Oct. 11, 1911, as the day for completion. On the date K. & J., however, were not the legal owners of the estate & could not complete. Ultimately, on Jan. 30, 1912, S. gave them notice of cancellation unless the purchase was completed within fourteen days. K. & J. were still unable to complete, & S. issued his writ claiming the return of his deposit. Thereupon K. & J. resold the farm to another purchaser:—Held: the equitable doctrine that the times fixed for completion was not to be regarded as the essence of a contract had no application in cases where the stipulation as to time could not be disregarded without injustice being done to one or other of the parties, or where one of the parties had put himself in default, as where a vendor had been guilty of unnecessary delay in completion, & the purchaser had served him with a notice reasonably limiting the time at the expiration of which he would treat the contract at an end.—*STICKNEY v. The only evidence of that fact was a statement in the witnessing part of a conveyance, dated 1844, twelve years before the date of the sale from M. to H., from whom the property came by various mesne assignments to the vendor, in which the then vendor acknowledged to have received the amount of the purchase-money for the purchase of the premises " & the fee simple & inheritance thereof in possession, free from land tax & all other incumbrances," & a statutory declaration by M., to the effect that, to best of his knowledge & belief, no land tax had ever been paid for or in respect of the land "subsequently to the purchase or redemption thereof in or about the year 1799":—Held: this was not such evidence of the fact of the land tax having been redeemed as to entitle the vendor to insist upon the completion of his purchase, notwithstanding a condition which provided that "Every deed or entry on or copy of court roll dated more than ten years ago shall be conclusive evidence of everything recited or stated therein" for, this was not a direct statement or recital of the fact that the land tax had been redeemed, but only an acknowledgment by the then vendor that the then purchaser had paid a certain sum for the land as being free of land tax & other incumbrances, & it was consistent with such statement that the land tax had not been redeemed, but that it had been purchased or assigned to the then purchaser, or to a trustee for him, in whom or in whose representatives it might still be vested; purchaser was entitled to recover back

(3) Where a vendor of property or his agent makes a statement which is calculated to mislead the purchaser into believing it to be a statement of facts within his knowledge, & the purchaser, relying on such statement, enters into a contract to purchase the property & pays a deposit, the vendor cannot enforce the contract, but the purchaser is entitled to rescind the contract & to recover the deposit from the vendor.—*NOTTINGHAM PATENT BRICK & TILE CO. v. (f) Non-Disclosure.

2071. Non-disclosure on sale of leasehold—Landlord's notice to repair.—A landlord having given notice to his lessee, under a covenant in the lease, that he would re-enter if the premises were not put into repair within three months, if an auctioneer sell the lease without communicating the notice to the vendee, the latter may recover his deposit from the auctioneer, although he knew the dilapidated state of the premises at the time of sale.—*STEVENS v. 2072. — Purchaser precluded from ob- jecting to non-disclosure.—On July 31, 1924, deft. purchased from pltf's. two leasehold houses & paid a deposit. Completion was fixed for Aug. 21, 1924. Under the lease the vendors were bound to do the inside & outside repairs. The conditions of sale provided that the purchaser should execute all necessary repairs. Requisitions on title were delivered, one of which asked whether any notices from landlords had been served on the property. The answer was that the vendors were not aware of any. The answer was made in good faith, but in fact the vendors had received landlord's notices on July 7, 1924, calling upon them, within three months of July 4, 1924, to make good the dilapidations found to have accrued on the premises "as per the schedule hereto annexed." On discovering their mistake the vendors, on Aug. 20, 1924, sent copies of the notices to the purchaser, who then declined to complete unless the vendors complied with the notices at their own expense. Condition (a) of the conditions of sale provided that the production of the last receipt for rent should be conclusive evidence that all the covenants had been complied with. Condition (b) provided that if any notices were outstanding they should be complied with at the expense of the purchaser. Pltf's. brought an action for specific performance of the contract by deft. Deft. counterclaimed for the rescission of the contract & the return of his deposit:—Held: (1) the notices contained material facts which it was the duty of the vendors to disclose, & that the non-disclosure deprived them of the right to the special relief of specific performance; that neither condition (a) nor condition (b) relieved the vendors from the obligation of disclosing the notices, because the former required the purchaser to assume to be true that which the vendors knew at the time of the sale to be untrue, & the latter only stated as a contingency that which the vendors knew to be a fact; (2) the purchaser having made out no case for the rescission of the contract it was good at law, & since the purchaser refused to complete according to its terms he was not entitled to the return of his deposit.—BEYFUS v. LODGE, [1925] Ch. 350; 95 L. J. Ch. 27; 133 L. T. 265; 41 T. L. R. 429; 69 Sol. Jo. 507.

2073. — Dropping of life.—(1) Where, in the particulars of sale, property was stated to be held under the C. estate upon three lives, & it appeared in an action to recover back the deposit, that one of the lives had dropped before the sale, & that the property was not held directly under the C. estate:—Held: deft. could not call the auctioneer to prove that he stated before the sale that the life had dropped; but deft. might give evidence to show that, before the sale, pltf. had read the original lease under which the property was held.

(2) A party recovering back a deposit paid on the purchase of real property is not entitled to interest.

(3) In an action against the vendor of an estate to recover the deposit on a contract for the purchase, if deft. on notice produce the contract, pltf. need not prove its execution.—BRADSHAW v. BENNETT (1831), 5 C. & P. 48; 1 Mood. & R. 143; 172 E. R. 872, N. P.

2074. — Liability to compulsory acquisition.—Certain leasehold houses were sold by auction, which were described in the particulars & conditions of sale as a well secured rental with reversionary interest, & as an eligible investment. By the provisions of a local Act, for the establishment of the South London Market co., the co. were authorised to treat for, purchase, & take the premises in question for the purposes of the Act. No notice was given of this liability in the particulars & conditions of sale; & the jury found as a fact that the vendee had no notice of the liability. The conditions contained no express warranty of title:—Held: (1) pltf. was not justified in stating this contract in the declaration, as a warranty of a clear title, free from all charges, incumbrances, & liabilities; (2) the purchaser was entitled to rescind the contract, on ascertaining that the premises were liable to be taken for the purposes of the Act.—BALLARD v. WAY (1836), 1 M. & W. 520; 2 Gale, 61; Tyr. & Gr. 851; 5 L. J. Ex. 207; 150 E. R. 540.

2075. — Unusual covenants.—Covenant not to assign.—A lease contained a covenant by the lessee "not to assign or part with the possession of the premises without the consent of the lessor, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld." An intending purchaser of the lease had signed an agreement with the lessee to purchase the lease from him, & had paid a deposit in pursuance of the agreement; but before the day fixed for the completion of the purchase the purchaser became aware of the existence of this covenant in the lease, & he refused to complete, on the ground that this covenant was not disclosed to him before he signed the agreement:—Held: this covenant was an "unusual" covenant, & as it was not disclosed to the purchaser before signing the agreement, he was justified in refusing to complete the purchase, & was entitled to recover back the deposit.—BISHOP v. TAYLOR & Co. (1891), 60 L. J. Q. B. 556; 64 L. T. 529; 55 J. P. 695; 39 W. R. 542; 7 T. L. R. 419, D. C.

2078. Non-disclosure on sale of freehold.—Restrictive covenants.—Where a vendor of freehold property mentioned to the purchaser that the property was subject to the same conditions as the adjoining property:—Held: (1) the purchaser was not fixed with constructive notice of restrictive covenants, & therefore specific performance was refused; (2) property described in a contract for sale as "freehold" means unincumbered freehold, & such a description does not properly describe freeholds subject to restrictive covenants; (3) there is an obligation on a vendor of freeholds to disclose restrictive covenants, & if he does not disclose them, the purchaser is entitled to a return of his deposit.—HONE v. GAKSTATTER (1909), 53 Sol. Jo. 286.

2080. — Right of way.—Trustees put up for sale by auction two adjoining freehold properties. Lot 2 was an hotel standing in its own grounds & approached from the main road by a carriage drive. Lot 3 was a house the only access to which from the main road was by a carriage sweep opening into the carriage drive of lot 2. Both properties were leased, & the lease of lot 2 reserved to the lessors a right of way over the carriage drive to get access to lot 3. By an error the particulars of sale of both lots 2 & 3 made no mention of the right of way, but on the sale plan, which formed no part of the contract, it was apparent that the only access to lot 3 was over the carriage drive. By the conditions of sale the properties were sold subject to all rights of way & other easements "whether or not the same shall be mentioned in or upon the Particulars . . . or the Sale Plan, if any, . . . but if there shall be found any such easement . . . not disclosed or partially or inaccurately disclosed in the Particulars or the Sale Plan, if any, such non-disclosure or partial or inaccurate disclosure shall be deemed to be an omission or error within the meaning of Clause 15."

By clause 15, "if any error, misstatement, or omission shall be discovered in the Particulars or Sale Plan, if any, . . . the same shall not annul the sale, nor shall any abatement or compensation be allowed or paid by the vendor or purchaser." The lease of lot 2 was produced to G., the purchaser, before the auction & was perused by his solr. G. was almost blind; but the particulars were read to him, & he bought lot 2 with the intention of building over the carriage drive. The abstract included the lease of lot 2, with a plan showing the carriage sweep to lot 3, but G.'s solr. made no requisition about it, & sent to the vendors' solr. a draft conveyance of the property unincumbered, in which the vendors' solr. inserted a reservation of the right of way to lot 3. G. refused to accept this addition. The vendors brought an action for specific performance with the reservation, or, alternatively, rescission & retention of the deposit. G. counterclaimed for rescission & return of the deposit:—Held: the condition as to errors only applied to errors which were not known to the vendors; & the purchaser was not bound to make a requisition as to the right of way, when the abstract showed a title to an unincumbered freehold; & the purchaser was entitled to rescission & return of the deposit.—*SIMPSON v. 2083. Sale of leasehold premises—Lease containing covenant to repair—Part of property pulled down before sale—Part pulled down not described in particulars.]—Where leasehold premises are sold by auction, & the lease containing the usual covenant to repair is produced & read to the bidders, if any of the buildings demised & described in the lease have been pulled down before the sale, the purchaser is not bound to complete the purchase, & may recover back his deposit, although the building pulled down be not described in the particulars of sale.—GRANGER v. 2084. Sale of licensed premises—Vendor unable to transfer license.]—Pltf. having agreed to assign an hotel, of which he was the proprietor, & the wine, beer, & spirit licenses, to deft., it was discovered when the agreement was to be executed, that he had omitted to renew his licenses at the previous annual licensing day, whereupon an agreement was entered into between pltf. & deft., that pltf. should deposit £150 as a security for the taking out of the licenses & that he would on or before Aug. 16, take or cause to be taken out & granted, the licenses, either in his own name or in that of deft., & in either case would transfer them to deft.; & further, that if same were not done so that deft. should be in a situation to enjoy the full benefit of the licenses, on or before Oct. 31, then & in such case pltf. should forfeit & pay to deft. the said sum of £150, & if the licenses should be procured & assigned, & deft. should exert himself, & be put to any expense in procuring, or endeavouring to procure the same, he should be entitled to be paid such expense out of the £150; & if the licenses were not obtained on or before Oct. 31, pltf. should allow deft. so much per week, as a remuneration for the loss occasioned by not obtaining the licenses by Aug. 16. On Aug. 16, an application was made by pltf. for licenses to the justices, who sent for deft., but, in consequence of his non-attendance, the licenses were not granted, the justices stating, that they would have granted them had he attended. The licenses were obtained in Nov., when pltf. & deft. both attended before the justices. In an action under Interpleader Act, 1831 (c. 58), to try the right to the deposit:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover, as the obtaining of the licenses was prevented by the act of deft., in not attending before the justices on Aug. 16.—BRYANT v. The business of the house had been carried on under the management & under a licence granted under Alehouse Act, 1828 (c. 61), in the name of the vendor's son A., as servant to his father. In Nov. 1866, A. went to America, & had not since been heard of, & since that time, but without any transfer of the licence from A., the business had been continued under the management of B., another son of the vendor:—Held: the vendor, not being able to obtain the indorsement of the licence by A., was not in a condition to perform his contract, & consequently the purchaser might recover back his deposit & the expenses which he had incurred in & about the purchase.—CLAYDON v. 2087. Vendor unable to procure lessor's consent to assignment.]—A purchaser of leasehold property, which the vendor cannot assign without a licence from his lessor, is entitled to damages, beyond return of the deposit, with interest & expenses, for loss of his bargain by reason of the vendor's omission to do his best to procure such licence.

A vendor agreed with a purchaser for the sale of a leasehold hotel, subject to the consent of the lessor being obtained to the assignment of the lease, & the purchaser paid a deposit on his purchase-money. The vendor died without having completed his contract, & the purchaser then brought an action against his legal personal representative for specific performance. Deft., being desirous of freeing the vendor's estate from the action, induced the lessor to refuse his consent to the assignment, which the lessor accordingly did, & the purchaser thus lost his bargain. Thereupon the purchaser amended his action by claiming damages & return of the deposit:—Held: pltf. was entitled, not only to the return of his deposit, with interest & costs of investigating title, but also to the damages he had sustained by the loss of his bargain, through the omission of deft. to obtain the lessor's consent.—DAY v. 2125. Election to repudiate or accept—Inclusion of covenants by vendor—Not acceptable to purchaser.—A purchaser contracted to purchase a piece of land. On the abstract it appeared that the land was subject to covenants. The purchaser tendered a draft conveyance, to which the vendors added similar covenants on the part of the purchaser. The purchaser refused to execute these covenants. The vendors thereupon filed a bill for specific performance:—Held: the purchaser could elect either to take a conveyance with the covenants, or to rescind the contract.—*LUKEY v. 2126. When right to repudiate arises—Conduct of vendor amounting to repudiation—Giving notice of intention to resell.—(1) Purchaser raised certain valid objections to his vendor's title, which the vendor refused to satisfy. The vendor gave notice, abandoned the contract, puts the purchaser's tenant off the land & takes possession thereof, such taking possession only constitutes an acquiescence in the abandonment of the contract by the purchaser, & if there was in fact no such abandonment such acquiescence in that supposed state of affairs cannot be turned into a repudiation of the contract so as to entitle the purchaser to repayment of his purchase-money if the vendor, on learning that there has not been an abandonment, has expressed his willingness to perform the contract.—*LAWTON v. The purchaser thereupon gave the vendor notice, that he should bring an action for the deposit, if the requisitions were not complied with within a week. The action was commenced, & the vendor some time subsequently agreed to satisfy the requisitions at the purchaser's expense. Upon the purchaser's refusal, a bill was filed by the vendor for specific performance:—Held: the notice by the vendor of an intention to resell, was equivalent to a declaration that he would not seek specific performance of the contract, & the purchaser's action to rescind was effectual, & the bill was dismissed, with costs.

2131. — — —.]—A tenant for life contracted to sell settled land under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), the purchase to be completed on Sept. 29, time not being of the essence of the contract. The purchaser objected that there were no trustees in existence for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), & the vendor, who had at first contested this view, on Oct. 6, took out a summons for the appointment of trustees for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), & informed the purchaser thereof. The purchaser replied, stating that as a good title had not been shown, & the day fixed for the completion was passed, the purchase was to be considered at an end. The trustees for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), were duly appointed on Oct. 29, & waived notice under Settled Land Act, 1884 (c. 18), s. 5 (3). In an action by the purchaser to rescind:—Held: the fact of there being no trustees in existence for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), was rather a defect of conveyance than a defect in the tenant for life's title to sell, it was not open to the purchaser forthwith to repudiate the contract, but he ought to have named a reasonable time within which to remedy the defect, & the defect having been so remedied, the contract must be enforced.

No doubt there are certain authorities which say that, where the defect is a defect of title, the purchaser is not bound to wait, after the day fixed for completion, for an indefinite time until the vendor can make a title to the thing he purports to sell: but I do not know that that doctrine has ever been carried beyond a case in which the defect is a defect of title: & that is why I have taken some pains to show that, in my opinion the defect is not a defect of title. I do not think that is the doctrine of this Ct. so far as I am aware, where the defect is a mere defect of conveyance

(2) A party to a contract who desires to avail himself of an act of repudiation by the other party must evidence his election to do so with every reasonable dispatch.

Accordingly, it is too late for a purchaser, who in his defence to an action by the vendor for specific performance has pleaded that he was willing to complete on the right interpretation of the contract, to seek at the trial to amend that offer & ask for rescission & recovery of his deposit, on the ground that pltf. by his conduct in insisting upon a wrong interpretation has repudiated the contract & had thereby given deft. the option to accept that repudiation.—*BERNERS v. 2143. Deed showing adverse claim—Untrue allegation by vendor that deed is forgery.]—In an action for money had & received to recover back the deposit money paid by pltf. on the purchase of an estate, a special case stated, that by the will of deft.'s father, the estate in question was devised to him after the death of his mother, & to his issue in tail, subject to a payment of £2 a year to his sister M., with remainder to testator's own right heirs. In the year 1817, & during the lifetime of his mother, deft., by lease & release, assigned the estate for his own life to his sister M., & R., upon trust to receive the rents & apply them to keep the tenements in repair, to pay to M. her annuity of £2 & to pay the residue to deft. After the mother's death, M., R. being dead, received one quarter's rent, since which the rents had been received by deft. In Feb. 1836, deft. advertised the estate for sale, & on the 25th of that month pltf. purchased it upon a contract stated in the conditions of sale. Amongst other conditions were the following: "That the premises are to be sold subject to a yearly rent of £2, payable during the life of M., the sister of deft., & which said M. having given notice that in consequence of a certain alleged indenture, bearing date Aug. 19, 1817, whereby she alleges deft. conveyed all his estate & interest, in the premises unto R., now deceased, & the said M. for the term of his the said deft.'s life, upon certain trusts in the alleged indenture contained, & that no conveyance of the premises could be made without the concurrence of her the said M., & who thereby declared she should refuse to execute any such conveyance, said deft. declared that the said alleged indenture is a fabrication, & has made a solemn affidavit that he never executed any such indenture, & that such indenture, as far as concerns any supposed signature or mark of him, deft., is a forgery, & the opinion of the A.-G. & K. have been taken as to the necessity of the said M.'s concurring in the sale, & were in favour of deft.'s being able, by virtue of the recent Act for abolishing fines & recoveries, to make a good title to the premises without the sanction & concurrence of the said M.; & the vendor is also prepared to prove that on the trial of an action of replevin of S. v. M. the presiding judge expressed himself favourably to the right of deft. to convey without the concurrence of the said M.; the purchaser therefore shall not make any objection on account of the said alleged indenture, nor be entitled to call for any sanction, concurrence, etc., by or from the said M.; but if the purchaser shall think fit, in order to indemnify him or her against all action, suits, & other proceedings, claims, & demands by the said M., a portion of the purchase-money, not exceeding £200, may remain as a charge by way of mtge. on the premises, at interest after the rate of 4½ per cent., & that such charge, at the option of the purchaser, shall remain on such security during the life of the said M., & for a period not exceeding twelve months after her decease." Pltf. paid the deposit now sought to be recovered. The jury, at the trial, found a verdict for pltf. for the amount of the deposit, & that the deed of Aug. 19, 1817, was the deed of deft.:—Held: (1) whether the representation of the deed being a forgery were a warranty upon which pltf. might maintain an action or not, pltf. had no right to rescind the contract because it turned out to have been untrue; (2) by the stipulation, "that the purchaser should not make any objection on account of the alleged indenture," every species of objection to the title on the part of the purchaser arising out of the alleged deed was interdicted, & he was precluded from insisting either upon the existence of the deed, or upon its legal effect & operation, as a defect in the title which he had agreed to take.—CORRALL v. CATTELL (1839), 4 M. & W. 734; 8 L. J. Ex. 225; 150 E. R. 1617; subsequent proceedings, sub nom. CATTELL v. CORRALL (1840), 4 Y. & C. Ex. 228. Annotation:—Mentd. Legg v. Pardoe (1860), 7 Jur. 2144. Vendor having no title to part of property.]—After the purchaser of an estate sold under a decree had approved of the title, a deed was discovered which showed that pltfs. could not make a title to more than a moiety of the estate. The ct. discharged the purchaser from his purchase.—WARD v. TRATHEN, Ex p. BAILEY (1844), 14 Sim. 82; 3 L. T. O. S. 157; 8 Jur. 303; 60 E. R. 288.

2145. —.]—A purchaser contracted to purchase a farm containing 41 acres, one of the parcels of which, according to the particulars, contained four acres, but according to the plan annexed to them it appeared to contain seven acres. The vendor was only entitled to four undivided sevenths of the 7 acres which, on the plan, appeared to be the parcel included in the sale. The situation of the parcel made it important to the purchaser to have the whole. The conditions of sale provided that misdescription should not annul the sale, & that no compensation should be allowed in respect of it, except such as the judge should direct:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to be relieved from his contract, on the ground of there being a failure in a substantial part of what he had contracted for, & he could not be forced to take compensation.—*Re ARNOLD, ARNOLD v. 2149. Sale of agreement for lease—Vendor having no agreement to transfer.]—A proposal had been made that two plffs. should buy a triangular field of about 3 acres, & that deft. should buy half an acre of it from them. One of plffs. & deft. met on the field; deft. wished to have a piece in one of the angles, & pltf. stepped so as to mark out where a base line would cut off half an acre. Some days afterwards same pltf. wrote to deft. asking her to let them have a letter agreeing to purchase the half acre she had selected for £350. She wrote back, not expressly referring to the other letter, that she was willing to take half an acre of the land as agreed upon for £350. Plffs. did not obtain a contract with the owner of the land for the purchase until Nov. 4, which was three months afterwards. On Nov. 13 deft. threatened to withdraw, & on Nov. 20 her solr. wrote that she did withdraw from the contract:—Held: though deft. might have withdrawn at any time before Nov. 4 when plffs. first became able to perform their part, she could not withdraw afterwards.

If a man contracts to sell an agreement for a lease, & it turns out that he has not got an agreement for a lease, the purchaser, when he finds that to be so, may say, "I will not enter into it; I am not repudiating the contract, for I never entered into it; I am entitled to be off & I am off; I

2151. Sale of freehold—Vendor not owner of minerals.]—On Apr. 17, 1889, deft. wrote to pltf.'s agent offering £800 for the freehold of a house at C. with possession at midsummer, assuming the title to be satisfactory. Pltf.'s agent replied on the 18th accepting the offer, subject to the owner's ratification, which was subsequently obtained. Further correspondence ensued, in the course of which pltf.'s solrs. sent to deft.'s solrs. a draft contract containing special conditions as to the title, which were objected to by the one side & insisted on by the other. On May 20 deft.'s solr. having discovered that pltf. was not the owner of the minerals under the house, repudiated the agreement. Pltf. offered to purchase the minerals before the time for completion, & to waive the special conditions, but deft. took no notice of this offer. Pltf. obtained a conveyance of the minerals in Sept. 1889. In an action for specific performance & damages:—Held: assuming the existence of a concluded contract, as to which quære, deft. was justified in repudiating before the time for completion, on the ground that pltf. was not the owner of the minerals.—*BELLAMY v. latter would only agree to a lesser amount remaining on mtge. Pltf. thereupon treated the contract as at an end. Subsequently, & before the date fixed for completion, deft. obtained the consent of the mtgee. to the full amount of the mtge. debt remaining on mtge., but pltf. refused to proceed with the purchase. In an action to recover the deposit:—Held: (1) in the absence of circumstances which would justify the pltf. in treating the refusal of the mtgee. as final, or of an agreement express or implied that it should be so treated, the deft. had until the date fixed for the completion of the contract in which to perform the condition by obtaining the consent of the mtgee.; that the contract had therefore gone off through the default of pltf.; & that he could not recover the deposit.

It was sought to establish an alternative right in pltf. to treat the contract as existing, & to succeed on the ground that deft. had not performed the condition by the date fixed for completion; but pltf. having finally renounced the contract & adhered to this throughout cannot be heard to say that he was ready & willing to complete (COLLINS, L.J.).

(2) It is reasonably clear that the vendor has until the time fixed for completion, or, if no time for completion is fixed, then a reasonable time, in which to procure the assent of the mtgee. to the acceptance of the purchaser as mtgor. (3) Though the condition is one that may be fulfilled at any time before completion, yet the purchaser is not always bound to wait till that date. I can suggest four such cases, though I by no means say that the list is exhaustive. One case is that the purchaser may be able to show by sufficient evidence that the condition cannot be practically fulfilled by the date fixed. (4) A second case is where the vendor has substantially admitted that the condition is incapable of fulfilment. (5) The third case is that there may be an agreement between the vendor & the purchaser that a particular refusal of the mtgee. to accept the purchaser as mtgor. should be taken as conclusive, & this agreement may be implied from the circumstances & need not be express. (6) The fourth case is that of a refusal by the mtgee. so treated by the vendor as to justify the purchaser in regarding the matter as at an end (ROMER, J.).

(7) All the cases that were cited were, with one exception, cases in which the purchaser ascertained before the time for completion that the vendor had not the title which he professed to have, & had no legal means then available to complete the contract. In such cases the purchaser is entitled at once to treat the contract as at an end because the vendor cannot ask the purchaser to wait on the chance that the former may acquire the property (ROMER, L.J.).—SMITH v. BUTLER, [1900] 1 Q. B. 694; 69 L. J. Q. B. 521; 82 L. T. 281; 48 W. R. 583; 16 T. L. R. 208, C. A.

(b) Possibility of Vendor Making Good Title.

2157. Effect of vendor obtaining title—After action brought.]—When a party sells an estate, or any interest, & at the time has no title, or not such as he sells; if he nevertheless obtains such estate or interest at any time before he is called upon, to complete the purchase, it is sufficient & if an action is brought, showing that the party had never been called upon, & had at that time a good title, is a sufficient answer to the action.—THOMSON v. Where the vendor is in a position to compel a conveyance to himself & time is not of the essence of the contract, the purchaser on paying his last instalment of purchase money cannot repudiate because the vendor has not title in himself at that moment, but must give him a reasonable time to obtain capable of being made good within a reasonable time; as to which the vendor will be put under terms.—COFFIN v. COOPER (1807), 14 Ves. 205; 33 E. R. 499, L. C.

A deficiency in the smallest portion of interest, in the subject of sale, either as to quantity or duration, is, at law, a total want of title.

Accordingly, a seller contracted to grant a lease for twenty-one years at a premium, part of which was to be paid on a given day; & on that day, he required payment, & he was then, on the other hand, required to show his title. He did not then show it; whereupon the purchaser abandoned the contract; & it turning out that a term of only five days was outstanding, of which the seller was not aware:—Held: the purchaser might recover back his deposit; though the title in other respects was good, & though the seller could, no doubt, have gotten in the five days time.—*ROPER v. 2165. — To register assignments of lease.—In an action for non-performance of a contract for the sale of a leasehold house, the declaration alleged that deft. had not lawful right & title to sell & assign the lease, at the time the contract was made. It was ascertained after the sale, that the assignments of the lease to the vendor, & to former assignees, had not been registered; & also that the vendor was restrained from assigning without a licence from the ground landlord; & that no such licence had been obtained at the time the contract was made:—Held: neither of these objections impeached the validity of the vendor's title, as the defects were capable of being remedied.—STOWELL v. ROBINSON (1837), 3 Bing. N. C. 928; 3 Hodg. 197; 5 Scott, 196; 6 L. J. C. P. 326; 132 E. R. 668.

Deft. repudiated the contract. Pltf. afterwards filed his bill for specific performance, & pending the suit, the landlord agreed to concur:—Held: the contract could not be enforced, & the bill was dismissed with costs.—*FORRER v. (2) I think that it is abundantly clear that if the vendor has not a title in himself & cannot compel third parties to supply him with the title, the moment the purchaser becomes aware of that fact, he is entitled to repudiate the contract, & he is under no obligation to give the vendor time to make good a title which is so imperfect at the date of the contract (EVE, J.).—Re HUCKLESBY & ATKINSON'S CONTRACT (1910), 102 L. The property passed under the will of M. in 1856 to J. & another, as tenants in common, in equal moieties, & the difficulty arose as to the moiety which passed to J. He by his will gave his property to trustees upon trust for sale & payment of debts, etc., & then to lay aside £12,000, which was to be invested for the benefit of his daughters & their children, & subject thereto to hold the residue for his son. J. died in 1876, & in 1880 two deeds were executed by which part of the property was mortgaged to the amount of £12,000 to two persons who were not trustees of the will. Later one of these persons was appointed a trustee of the will. These two persons purported to sell the property. Objection was taken on the requisitions that they could not give a good title, & notice to rescind was given. On a summons taken out by the purchaser claiming rescission:—Held: the defect could only be removed (a) by procuring the trustees of the will to be parties; (b) by obtaining the sanction of the ct.; & (c) by showing that the £12,000 had been properly invested; that, as to (a) & (b), neither on the day of the notice to rescind, nor on that fixed for completion, were the vendors in a position to remove the defect; as to (c), there was no evidence that the £12,000 could be so invested; &, in the absence of any such evidence, the notice to rescind must be deemed effectual.—Re COOKE & HOLLAND'S CONTRACT (1898), 78 L. C. Delay by Vendor.

2180. Time of the essence—Waiver—Vendor's conduct after notice.—Reference as to title, directed on motion after answer to a bill for specific performance by the vendor against the purchaser, notwithstanding the purchaser stated that his requisitions on the abstract had not been complied with, although the time for completion of the contract had long expired, & he had given notice of his intention to rescind the contract.

The purchaser cannot, owing merely to the delay of the vendor in complying with his requisitions, determine the contract without notice, or bring an action for his deposit before the termination of his notice, where time was not originally of the essence of the contract. Whether he can do so after the expiration of notice, where time has not been made of the essence of the contract, or, being of the essence of the contract, has been waived, depends upon the conduct of the vendor after notice.—WOOD v. MACHU (1846), 5 Hare, 158; 16 L. J. Ch. 21; 8 L. T. O. S. 210; 10 Jur. 1001; 67 E. R. 868.

£150, on Oct. 28, & 29, 1926, respectively. Pltf. as the deft. knew, intended to use the premises for the business of a garage proprietor, & deft. agreed to clear away the hedge & trees in front of the house before the time for completion, which was originally fixed as "on or about Dec. 6, 1926," but was subsequently extended to Dec. 15. On Dec. 10, it being apparent that deft. could not do the work he had undertaken by Dec. 15, pltf. rescinded the contract & claimed the return of the money:—Held: time was of the essence of the contract, & pltf. was entitled to recover the money.—*BERNARD v. 2186. Effect of continuing negotiations—Title not perfected within reasonable time—Purchaser in possession—Purchaser aware of objections to abstract.]—A purchaser cannot declare off a contract, on the ground of the vendor not having perfected the title within a reasonable time, where the former who was in possession had been aware, from an early period of the treaty, that there was some objection to the abstract, but has nevertheless continued to negotiate with the latter down to a recent period, & then on a sudden, a fortnight after the last act of negotiation, tells him, that he abandons the contract. An injunction will be granted to stay an action commenced at law by the purchaser to recover back whatever of the purchase-money has been previously paid under such circumstances, on motion, almost as of course; & if the case were made out, it would be sufficient on the hearing. Time is not of the essence of such a contract. Had the purchaser declared off, on delivery of the abstract, he might perhaps have got rid of it, & given up the possession.—WARDE v. JEFFERY (1817), 4 Price, 294; 146 E. R. 469.

b. Opportunity for purchaser to discover falsity of representation.]—It is no answer to an action for rescission of a contract for the sale of land on the

such a material discrepancy between the particulars & the lease, as to entitle a purchaser to rescind his contract.

Where the misdescription, although not proceeding from fraud, is in a material & substantial point, so far affecting the subject-matter of the contract that it may reasonably be supposed, that, but for such misdescription, the purchaser might never have entered into the contract at all, in such case the contract is avoided altogether, & the purchaser is not bound to resort to the clause of compensation. 2200. ——— Sale of leasehold including yard—Yard in fact held from year to year.]—Particulars of the sale by auction of a public-house, described the premises as being held for an unexpired term of years at a rent of £55; & as comprising, amongst other things, a yard. By the conditions the contract was to be completed on June 25, & any error or mistake in the description of the property was to be matter of compensation, to be fixed by arbn. In fact the yard was not held under the lease, but under a tenancy from year to year, at a further rent of £10; the vendors, however, procured a lease for the same term of the yard at an additional rent of £8 dated on June 23, but not, in fact, executed until long after June 25. The yard was essential to the enjoyment of the premises:—Held: this defect was not matter of compensation under the terms of the condition; but such a defect in title as justified the vendee in vacating the contract.—*DOBELL v. 2201. — Underlease described as lease.—Bill filed by a purchaser to rescind a contract, pltf. alleging that he had been induced to enter into it by fraud & misrepresentation: it appeared that the advertisement out of which the contract arose was of the sale of six houses, total rental £131 6s. per annum, lease about seventy-five years, at a moderate ground rent of £50 a year, but what pltf., who agreed to give £420 for the property, found himself liable to take was an underlease of the houses at a rent of £50. The Lord Chancellor, reversing the order appealed from, dismissed the bill without costs, being satisfied that though there was a misdescription of the property, there was no such substantial misrepresentation as called upon the ct. to exercise its jurisdiction.—BARTLETT v. SALMON (1855), 6 De G. M. & G. 33; 26 L. T. O. S. 82; 4 W. R. 32; 43 E. R. 1142, L. C.

2202. — Situation of house.—A. became the purchaser at a public auction of a freehold house, under particulars of sale which described it as "a freehold estate, being No. 58 on the north side of Pall Mall, opposite Marlborough House." No allusion was made in the particulars of sale to its being situated at the end of a long passage, variously stated as being sixty feet & seventy-three feet in length, or that it was actually not facing Pall Mall, but at the rear of No. 57, Pall Mall, which was so in fact. The solr. of A. inspected the title deeds in a part of the house which was the subject of the contract. The vendors themselves had only a right of way over the passage, which was supported on timber beams, & insufficient to support heavy weight:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to have the contract rescinded; the description of the premises in the particulars of sale amounted to misrepresentation, of which however, there was a waiver, the purchaser's solr. having inspected the title-deeds in the building itself; the access to the house was not such as the purchaser was bound to accept, having regard to the particulars of sale.—STANTON v. TATTERSALL (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 529; 1 Eq. Rep. 543; 21 L. T. O. S. 333; 17 Jur. 967; 1 W. R. 502; 65 E. R. 231.

2204. — Ground rents.—Pltf. purchased at a sale by auction certain property described in the particulars & conditions of sale as follows: "Four freehold ground rents of £10 4s. each, viz. £15 ground rent & £4 4s. garden rent, amounting to £76 10s. per year, arising from the four capital residences of the annual value of £384, held by four leases granted to W. for a term of ninety-five years each, wanting ten days, from Sept. 29, 1844, with reversion to the property in about eighty years." In accordance with the conditions of sale, pltf. paid deft., the auctioneer, the sum of £282 as a deposit & in part payment of the purchase-money. The vendors in making out this title produced a counterpart of a lease granted by one R. to one W., the other three leases being similar. This lease demised a piece of land, with a messuage erected thereon, at "the yearly rent of £15 of lawful money, payable," etc., & thereby "for the considerations agreed, & also in consideration of the further rent thereafter reserved, & of the covenants & agreements of W.," R. covenanted & agreed with W. that for the term of ninety-five years W. should "have the right to enter in & upon & use & enjoy as a pleasure ground or garden the piece of land adjoining," etc. The deed contained a covenant by W. to pay to R. the yearly sum of £15, & that he would also "pay the further yearly rent of £4 4s. for & in respect of the right of user thereinbefore granted of the said garden or pleasure ground":—Held: the garden rent of £4 4s. was not a freehold ground rent within the particulars of sale; & pltf., therefore, had a right to rescind the contract & recover back the deposit.—ROBINS v. EVANS (1863), 2 H. & C. 410; 159 E. R. 169; sub nom. EVANS v. ROBINS, 33 L. J. Ex. 68; 11 L. T. 211; 10 Jur. N. S. 473; 12 W. R. 601, Ex. Ch.

2207. Misrepresentation—Acreage—Purchaser able to ascertain extent of estate.—The owner of an estate agreed to sell it for £250,000, representing it to contain 1,530 acres. The purchaser agreed to sell it to a co. for £350,000, of which £150,000 was paid to him, £75,000 in cash, & bonds for £75,000, & he paid the vendor of the estate £50,000 as a deposit. It appeared that the estate contained less than 1,100 acres, & the co., having at the time only £1,536 in hand, complained to the purchaser of the deficiency, & he then wrote to the vendor declining to complete. The co. afterwards rescinded the contract, & the purchaser brought an action against the vendor for the deposit, which was compromised by the vendor repaying the deposit & rescinding the contract. The co. filed a bill against the purchaser & some other defts. who had agreed to share with him, for a return of the £75,000 & of the bonds:—Held: (1) although the financial position of the co. might render it convenient to them to rescind the contract, & though they might otherwise have been ready to take the smaller quantity of land, they were entitled to rescind the contract, as the purchaser was unable to complete with them; (2) the co. were entitled to rescind on the ground of misrepresentation though they might have been able to ascertain the extent of the estate; (3) the co. were entitled to repayment of what they had paid, & to a return of the bonds, & they had a lien on a portion of the £50,000 repaid to the purchaser, which had been paid into ct.

(4) One of the arts. of the contract provided that the estate as to extent of acreage should be taken to be conclusively shown by certain deeds:—Held: this was merely a conveyancing condition as to identify, & coupled with the representation as to the acreage, it did not estop the co. from rescinding on the ground of deficiency in acreage.

(5) The same relief was asked against the other defts. as against the purchaser. One of these defts. by his answer said that the suit was unnecessary & improper; another, that he was improperly made a party to the suit:—Held: they, whether necessary or not, were proper parties to the suit, but no relief in the shape of repayment could be given against them, & if they had merely submitted to any order which the ct. might make they would have been entitled to their costs, but as they had answered in this manner they would not have their costs.—*ABERAMAN IRONWORKS v. 2208. — Tenant described as “most desirable”

Tenant in bad financial position.—Pltfs. advertised for sale by auction an hotel, stated in the particulars to be held by a “most desirable tenant.” Defts. sent their secretary down to inspect the property & report thereon. The secretary reported very unfavourably, stating that the tenant could scarcely pay the rent, £100, rates, & taxes. Defts., however, relying on the statements in the particulars, authorised the secretary to attend the sale & to bid up to £5,000. The property was bought in at the sale, & the secretary purchased it by private contract for £4,700. It appeared subsequently that the quarter's rent previous to the sale had not been paid; the previous quarter had been paid by instalments, & six weeks after the sale the tenant filed his petition. It appeared, however, that the hotel business was as good during the last year as previously, & that the month of the tenant's failure was the best he had had. Pltfs. brought an action for specific performance, relying, in answer to the defence, & counterclaim for rescission on the ground of misrepresentation, on the fact that defts. had made their own inquiries:—Held: defts. were entitled to rescission of the contract.—*SMITH v. 2209. — Sale of land fit for building—Covenant restricting building purposes.—By an order, dated Jan. 25, 1905, the hereditaments comprised in lot 6 of the particulars & conditions of the sale held on July 7, 1905, were directed to be sold under the direction of the ct. The particulars of sale described lot 6 as valuable freehold land immediately ripe for development as a building estate which could be utilised for the erection of residences. By an indenture, dated July 29, 1887, one E., through whom the vendors claimed, had covenanted that he, his exors., administrators, & assigns, would forthwith erect almshouses on the piece of land thereby conveyed, & would not at any time use the land or the buildings, or suffer the same to be used, for any purpose whatever other than as almshouses. The conditions of sale provided that the vendors, if any purchaser should take any objection or make any requisition which the vendors were advised not to remove or comply with, might with the sanction of the judge by written notice, notwithstanding intermediate negotiation, rescind the contract for sale upon such terms as the judge should approve, & the purchaser should thereupon be entitled to receive back his deposit, & should accept the same in discharge of all claims for costs or otherwise. The purchaser, having by his requisitions taken the objection that the negative covenant in the deed of 1887 would bind any person purchasing with notice, the vendors, with the sanction of the judge, gave him notice to rescind the contract. On the purchaser's summons asking that he might be discharged from being such purchaser, & for a return of his deposit & for his costs, charges, & expenses occasioned by his bidding for lot 6:—Held: the vendors' notice to rescind the contract, whether served before or after the issue of the purchaser's summons asking for relief from his purchase, did not prevent the purchaser from recovering costs, charges, & expenses beyond the amount to which he would have been entitled under the condition, because the purchaser was entitled to rescind the contract on the overriding ground of misrepresentation, not merely on the terms of the condition.—*HOLLIWELL v. 2214. ——In an action for breach of contract, the declaration charged that deft. put up certain property for sale by auction, subject to certain conditions, by the fourth of which conditions it was provided that within twenty-one days after delivery of the abstract of title the purchaser should deliver in writing his objections & requisitions to or on the title as deduced by such abstract, & at the expiration of the twenty-one days, the title should be considered as approved, subject to such objections, etc., & that the vendor, in case any objection, etc., should be made which should be unable, or should not think fit, to answer or remove, should be at liberty to rescind the contract by notice in writing to the purchaser, notwithstanding any intermediate negotiation, or attempts to remove or answer such objections, etc. Averment, that pltf. became the purchaser, etc., & did all things necessary, etc. Breach, that defendant had not any title to sell & convey, & was not ready, willing, or able, & wholly neglected & refused, to sell or convey the property to pltf.; & allegation of damage thereby. Plea that after pltf. became the purchaser of the property objections, etc., were made, which the vendor was not able or did not see fit to answer or remove, & thereupon, by notice, etc., he rescinded the contract, & pltf. received back his deposit. Replication, that the objections & requisitions, which deft. was not able, or which he did not see fit, to answer or remove, were not objections, etc., to the abstract, or to the title as deduced by the abstract, "but were objections to the title of the vendor which were by deft. fraudulently concealed from pltf. & omitted from the abstract," & by reason of such fraudulent concealment & omission the negotiations, etc., were delayed, & the deposit was withheld for a longer time than it otherwise would have been, & the expenses, etc., were greatly increased :—Held : the replication was a good answer to the plea, & no departure.—COOKE v. MOORE (1866), 15 L. T. 409.

2215. Restrictive covenants—Covenant contemplated by agreement.—By a contract for the sale of a public-house, the vendor agreed to assign & the purchaser agreed to take the lease, "subject to the yearly rent of £90 & the performance of the covenants thereby reserved & contained, such covenants being common & usual in leases of public-houses." Upon investigating the title, the purchaser found that the lease under which the premises were held contained this clause :— "Provided always & these presents are upon this express condition, that all & every underlease, deed of assignment, etc., which shall be made & executed during the term, shall be left with the solr. of the ground landlord within two months of its date, for the purpose of registration, & a fee of one guinea paid for such registration," & a power of re-entry in case of "breach or non-performance of any of the covenants or other stipulations hereinbefore contained or referred to."

—The purchaser refused to complete, on the ground that this was not a common & usual covenant; & the jury so found :—Held : whether the proviso in the head lease was a "covenant" in the strict sense or not, it was at all events a covenant within the contemplation of the agreement, & the purchaser was not bound to complete.—BROOKES v. DRYSDALE (1877), 3 C. P. D. 52; 37 L. T. 467; 26 W. R. 331.

2216. — Believed by purchaser to be terminated—Vendor unaware of covenants.—Deft. contracted to purchase pltf.'s interest under an agreement for a building lease with a railway co. The property was purchased by the railway co. under their compulsory powers, subject expressly to certain restrictive covenants affecting the right of building & carrying on trades upon the property. Deft. required that the covenants should be released, but this being refused, he declined to complete. Pltf.'s action originally was for specific performance, but the pleadings were afterwards amended, & only damages for breach of the agreement were claimed. It was shown that, when the contract was entered into, deft. was aware of the existence of the restrictive covenants, but thought they had been put an end to by the compulsory purchase. The railway co.'s agreement with pltf. contained a clause prohibiting him from assigning his interest under it without the consent of the co., but such consent was not to be unreasonably withheld. When pltf. brought the action he had not obtained any licence from the railway co. to assign to deft. :—Held : pltf. being unaware of the restrictive covenants, & deft. thinking that they had been put an end to by the compulsory purchase of the land by the co., both parties had contracted on the footing that a good title should be shown, & the action must therefore fail.

Semble : the fact that pltf. had not procured from the co. a licence to assign did not entitle deft. to repudiate the contract, as at the date of already leased.—SHEPHERD v. AIKEN (1889), 7 N. Z. L. R. 382.—N. Z.

PART VIII. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 3.—E.

a. Sale for particular purpose—Knowledge of vendors of unfitness for purpose.—Deft. agreed for the purchase of a factory near a small stream, intending to carry on there his occupation of soap & candle manufacture. Afterwards deft. discovered that he would not have a right to throw the refuse of his factory into the stream, & without this privilege the property would be useless for his intended purpose, of which the vendors were aware when making the contract :—Held : the vendee was bound to complete the contract, although the vendors had not pointed out this fact at the time of the sale.—*JAMES v. b. Sale by land syndicate—Non-disclosure of interest purchased through syndicate as interest of syndicate.—

The promoters of a land syndicate held not to have been under an obligation to disclose to one who was purchasing an interest in the syndicate through them the fact that it was their own interest which was being sold to him; & such non-disclosure was held therefore not to be a ground for rescinding the purchaser's contract.—*YOUNG v. He thereupon brought an action for rescission of the contract, & return of the deposit made by him, with interest:—Held: the covenant was not limited to trades or businesses cjusdem generis as those specifically mentioned, the carrying on of a boys' school would come within the prohibition of the covenant, the agent's representation was as to a fact, & not a mere statement of law, & pltf. was entitled to succeed in his action.—*WATSON v. The vendor had previously mutually covenanted with the owner of the adjoining house not to do anything to prejudice the right of light to the windows of each other's premises:—Held: this restrictive covenant was a defect in the title.—*PENSEL & WILSON v. d. Sale of hotel property—Non-disclosure of indorsement on license.—On the sale of a hotel property the vendor did not disclose the fact that a conviction for breach of Licensing Act, 1908, s. 181, had been indorsed upon the license:—Held: the non-disclosure did not entitle the purchaser to rescind his contract, as the indorsement did not amount to a defect in title, the license, although indorsed, being perfectly valid.—KENNEDY v. BEVAN (1911), 30 N. Z. L. R. 925.—N.Z.

2226. Sale of licensed premises—Vendor not able to transfer license.—Upon the sale of a public-house as a going concern, time is of the essence of the contract. In the absence of express stipulation to the contrary, upon the sale of a public-house, the license of the house must be transferred under Alehouse Act, 1828 (c. 61) s. 11, & not under Alehouse Act, 1828 (c. 61), s. 14. Accordingly it being agreed, upon the sale of a public-house as a going concern, that the purchase should be completed on Nov. 21 & the vendors not being in a position to procure a transfer of the license under Alehouse Act, 1828 (c. 61), s. 11, upon that day:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to repudiate the contract.—*DAY v. The vendor is bound only to have a valid & effectual license existing at the date fixed for completion which he can indorse in the usual way, & upon or in respect of which the purchaser can apply at once for interim protection under Licensing Act, 1842 (c. 44), s. 1, at the next special sessions.—*TADCASTER TOWER BREWERY CO. v. A distress having been put in for rent due from the vendor, the purchaser gave the boarders notice to quit, & repudiated the contract:—Held: this circumstance was not so damaging or destructive to the subject-matter as to entitle the purchaser to repudiate.

The giving notice to quit was wrongful, as it was the purchaser's duty, even if entitled to repudiate, to take the best care of the subject-matter till the vendor had an opportunity of stated that it was in good order throughout. Pltf., relying upon this statement, purchased the house, but on going into possession found that repairs were required. In an action to recover the cost of the repairs on the ground of an innocent misrepresentation as to the condition of the house:—Held: though an innocent misrepresentation might justify a purchaser in not going on with the contract, yet, if he went on with it, he could not recover damages unless the innocent misrepresentation amounted to a warranty forming a contractual part of the bargain, & as an advertisement by house agents did not constitute a warranty in this sense, the action failed.—*LAWRENCE v. After a verdict for pltfs., on a motion in arrest of judgment, on the ground that pltfs. had not set out their title or tendered the conveyances to deft.:—Held: pltfs. were not bound to set out their title; & allegations, that they were ready & willing to convey, & that they were ready & willing, & actually offered to convey, were equivalent to a performance of the conditions on their parts.—*FERRY v. "were ready & willing, at the office of the steward of the manor of N., to receive the residue of the purchase-money, & then & there to surrender." This was denied by the plea:—Held: this allegation was proved by showing that pltfs. were ready & willing to 2258. Modern rule.]—Particulars of sale described the property to be sold as "All that well-accustomed inn, with the brewhouse, outbuildings, & premises known as 'The Ship,' . . . now in the occupation of K." A small garden at the back of the inn, but not belonging to the vendors, had been occupied for many years by K., to all appearance as though it formed part of one & the same holding with the inn. In the auction room the auctioneer called attention to two plans which, if carefully examined, would have shown that the garden was not included in the sale. No sale was effected at the auction, but afterwards deft., relying upon his own knowledge of the premises, agreed to purchase according to the same particulars & conditions. In an action by the vendors for specific performance, deft. swore that he had not known of the plans, though he had been present in the auction room, & that he bought in the bonâ fide belief that the garden was included in the sale:—Held: deft. having been misled solely through relying upon his own knowledge, specific performance could not be resisted.

When specific performance is refused in cases in which, under the old practice, the bill would have been dismissed without prejudice to pltf.'s right to bring an action for damages, the ct. ought now to proceed to consider the question of damages.—*TAMPLIN v. The statement of claim in the alternative claimed £100 as liquidated damages fixed by the contract for the refusal to perform the contract. The statement of defence alleged false representations by pltf. as to the character of the business, & denied that pltf. was able & willing to perform the contract. Pltf., after the close of the pleadings, gave notice to deft. that, unless deft. completed the purchase within a week, he should rescind the business, which he accordingly did. No amendment of the pleadings was then asked for by pltf., & the action went on to trial:—Held: in the absence of any amendment of the pleadings, which ought not at that stage of the action to be allowed, the action must be treated as one for specific performance with a claim for damages in the alternative as a substitute for specific performance, according to the practice existing before Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), in the Ct. of Chancery, & pltf., having by his own act rendered specific performance impossible, was not in such action entitled to damages.—HIGHGRAVE v. CASE (1885), 28 Ch. It has never been decided, so far as I am aware, that the equitable doctrine of part performance can be made use of for the purpose of obtaining damages on a contract at law (CHITTY, J.).—LAVERY v. PURSELL (1888), 39 Ch. D. 508; 57

The purchase was not to be completed till June, 1896. In the meantime no interest was to run, & the vendor was to be at liberty to remove the clay & make bricks on the land. In 1895 the property & liabilities of the board were transferred to the corpn. Shortly before the time for completion the corpn. applied to the Home Secretary for his approval of the land as a burial ground, which he refused to give. The corpn. then declined to complete, & the vendor sued for specific performance or damages:—Held: Burial Act, 1853 (c. 134), s. 6, did not prohibit the contracting to purchase land with the consent of the vestry for the purpose of a burial ground without the approval of a Secretary of State, & the contract was binding & the vendor entitled to damages for the breach of it, he not insisting on specific performance.—*WARD v. A. What may be Recovered.

(a) Damages for Loss of Bargain.

2273. General rule—Not recoverable.—Contractor for a purchase of a real estate, to which the title proves, without collusion, defective, is entitled to no satisfaction for the loss of his bargain.

These contracts are merely upon condition, frequently expressed, but always implied, that the vendor has a good title. If he has not, the return of the deposit, with interest & costs, is all that can be expected (BLACKSTONE, J.).

Upon a contract for a purchase, if the title proves bad, & the vendor is, without fraud, incapable of making a good one, I do not think that the purchaser can be entitled to any damages for the fancied goodness of the bargain, which he supposes he has lost (DE GREY, C.J.).—*FLUREAU v. good title; & A. before he examined it with the original deeds, contracted to resell several portions of the property at a considerable profit. Upon a subsequent examination of the abstract with the deeds A. discovered that the title was defective, & thereupon the sub-purchasers refused to complete their purchases & he refused to complete his purchase from B., & brought an action, wherein he claimed as damages the expense which he had incurred in the investigation of the title; the profit that would have accrued from the resale of the property; the expense attending the resale; & the sums which he was liable to pay to the sub-contractors for the expenses incurred by them in examining the title:—Held: he was entitled to recover only the expenses that he had incurred in the investigation of the title, & nominal damages for the breach of contract, as no fraud could be imputed to the vendor.

Here defts. undertook to make a good title, & they might honestly think that they should be able to do so. It turned out that they could not, & consequently the contract was broken, & they were liable to an action. Pltf., however, must show that the damages which he seeks to recover arose from the acts of deft. & not from his own haste . . . & further: if there were mala fides in the original vendor, but not otherwise, I am not prepared to say that the purchaser might not recover the profit which would have arisen from the resale (BAYLEY, J.).

In the absence of any express stipulation about it, the parties must be considered as content that the damages, in the event of the title proving defective, shall be measured in the ordinary way, & that excludes the claim of damages on account of the supposed goodness of the bargain (PARKES, J.).—*WALKER v. 2280. ———.—]—The general rule . . . is that when a contract is broken the injured person is so far as money can do it to be placed in the same position with respect to damages as if the contract had been performed. This is the amount of damages where the contract would give the actual enjoyment of a thing & it is immaterial whether the contract is as to real or personal property. But to this rule there is an exception as the law of real property is such that a vendor may well be in doubt whether he has a good title or not & therefore it is prudent for him when he is about to sell to make it part of the bargain that he shall not be liable to full damages but that the bargain may be off on repayment of the money paid & expenses (BLACKBURN, J.).—LOCK v. FURZE (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 441; Har. & Ruth. 379; 35 L. J. C. P. 141; 15 L. T. 161; 30 J. P. 743; 14 W. R. 403, Ex. Ch.

The purchaser was unable to grant the right of way or to make the road & sewers until long after the time fixed, & the vendor brought an action for specific performance & for damages, as the other land had remained unproductive until the road was made:—Held: judgment for specific performance with costs must be given, but no damages, as the contract was for a sale of real estate; there being no distinction between a contract to grant a right of way & make a road & sewers, & a contract to sell real estate.—ROWE v. LONDON SCHOOL BOARD (1887), 36 Ch. D. 619; 57 L. J. Ch. 179; 57 L. T. 182; 3 T. L. R. 672.

S. had instructed C. to sell for £515 & on hearing of the contract ratified it. The house belonged to S. & W. jointly as partners. S. acted bonâ fide, but it was not proved that by the practice of the partnership S. had authority to sell, & W. on hearing of the contract repudiated it. In an action against S. & W. for specific performance:—Held: as against S., C. had authority to sign an open contract on his behalf but not the particular contract entered into, it being no part of an estate agent's duty to deal with title, but S., having ratified the particular contract, was liable for breach of it, & pltf. was entitled to a return of, & interest on, the deposit, costs of investigation of title, & insurance paid, but not to damages for loss of bargain, nor to any costs of litigation as damages or any interest in respect of balance of purchase-money placed on deposit.—KEEN v. F., representing that he had authority from his co-owners to do so, contracted to sell the estate to pltf. & sent him an abstract of title. The co-owners repudiated the contract, & concluded a sale at a higher price to another person. Pltf. nevertheless, conceiving that the four owners had bound themselves by the terms of the advertisement which they had issued, sued them for breach of contract, & continued his action after they had all sworn in answer to interrogatories that F. had no authority to make the contract, & was nonsuited. In an action against F. for this misrepresentation of authority:—Held: the proper measure of damages was the costs of investigating the title; the costs of uncertainty as to whether a good title can be made by the vendor, & taking the property with that knowledge, the purchaser is not entitled to recover any loss on the bargain he may have made, if in effect it should turn out that the vendor is incapable of completing his contract in consequence of his defective title.—BOARDMAN v. —On Apr. 30, 1920, deft., vendor, agreed with pltf., purchaser, for the sale of a house, the contract providing that the conditions of the London Conditions of Sale should apply. Condition 4 of these conditions provided that if the purchaser should insist on any requisition as to the title which the vendor should be unable or unwilling to comply with, the vendor might, "notwithstanding any negotiation or litigation" in respect thereof, rescind the contract unless the requisition was withdrawn within seven days. The purchaser sent in a requisition that the property was subject to restrictive covenants, not disclosed by the contract, & that he reserved his right to object to the title on this ground. On July 22, 1920, the purchaser issued a vendor & purchaser summons for a declaration that a good title had not been shown & for a return of the deposit paid by him under the contract. On July 29, 1920, the purchaser's solrs. wrote repudiating the contract. In Oct. the vendor's solrs. wrote that she was not disposed to continue the litigation & giving notice of rescission under condition 4. Nothing further

(c) Other Cases.

2316. Preparation of conveyance.]—A purchaser at an auction cannot recover from the vendor the expenses of preparing the deeds of conveyance of the property, after he has refused to complete the purchase on account of the non-production of certain title deeds, though his attorney prepared the conveyances on the faith of a note written in the margin of the abstract by the vendor's solrs., stating that all the title deeds were examined by them on the original purchase, & that if it should be required, they would apply to the solr. for the original seller, in whose custody they were.—JARMAIN v. EGELSTONE (1831), 5 C. & P. 172; 172 E. R. 926.

2317. —.]—Where a vendor, from inability to make out a title, fails to complete a contract for the sale of an estate, the purchaser cannot recover as damages, expenses incurred previously to entering into the contract; nor the expense of a survey of the estate; nor the expense of a conveyance drawn in anticipation of a completion of the purchase; nor the extra costs of a Chancery suit touching the purchase, in which the vendor is defeated; nor losses sustained by the purchaser, in the resale of stock prepared for the estate. But he is entitled to recover the expense of comparing deeds, of searching for judgments, & of journeys for that purpose; & interest on his deposit money.—*HODGES v. 2325. —.]—M. agreed with F. to purchase land of him. On production of F.'s title, M. objected to it. F. insisted that it was good, & gave notice that he should sell at M.'s risk. M. then filed a bill against F. for a specific performance; & the question of title was referred by the Ct. of Ch. to a master, who reported that F.

had not a good title; whereupon the bill was dismissed without costs on either side; that being the practice of the Ct. of Ch. in such cases:—Held: M. could not recover from F., as damages for breach of the contract, costs incurred by M. in the Chancery suit.—*MALDEN v. 2327. Costs of negotiating purchase.]—An action for the non-completion of a purchase, the declaration alleging, by way of special damage, the expense of negotiating the purchase, & of investigating the title, was referred to arbn.; & the arbitrator awarded several sums under different heads; amongst others, for investigating the title, £30; but added that in that £30 he included the preparation of an assignment after objection made to the title, & also journeys for the purpose of taking, as well as the taking, of counsel's opinion on the course to be pursued by pltf. with respect to a suit in equity, & a contemplated action of ejectment:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to recover any of the charges in & about negotiating the purchase, nor any part of the £30 awarded in respect of the last-mentioned expenses; & the residue being less than the money paid into ct., deft. was entitled to the verdict.—WRIGHT v. CHATTERIS (1846), 7 L. T. O. S. 111.

2329. Improvements made by purchaser as lessee.]—It is the duty of a party entering into the possession of land, to ascertain, before he incurs expenses by making alterations & improvements, what the title is: & if he neglects to assure himself on that point, he must bear the consequences.

By agreement between pltf. & deft., certain premises were demised for a term of two years certain to pltf., who was at liberty, at his own expense, to make such alterations & additions to them, as he might think proper, the same being improvements; & pltf. "was to have the right of purchasing the premises, at the end of or at any time during the term, it being understood that deft. was possessed of the premises for his own life, & that, of M. & the survivor of them." Pltf. had possession, & laid out on the premises a large sum of money, & gave notice to deft. of his election to purchase: but deft. could not make good the title he had represented he could. Upon this pltf., at the expiration of his term, gave up possession, & sued deft. for the damage he had sustained, by reason of the non-performance of the contract by deft. At the trial, the judge, to prevent the cause going down again, left two questions to the jury: (a) what was the value of the lease without the improvements, at the time when pltf. gave notice of his election to purchase; (b) what was its value at that particular time with the improvements. The jury found that the value of the lease without the improvements was 40s.; & that it was worth, with the improvements, £100. Verdict was given for pltf. £102 with leave to move to reduce the damages to 40s. if the ct. should be of opinion that pltf. was not entitled to damages, in respect of the improvements. A rule nisi to reduce the damages having been obtained:—Held: pltf. could not recover the amount he had expended 2330. Expenses of attempt to obtain alternative property.—Where a vendor fails to make a good title pursuant to his contract, the purchaser, in the absence of fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the vendor, is not entitled to damages for the loss of his bargain.

A. agreed to sell to B. the shooting on the manor of C. It being afterwards discovered that A. had a mere equitable title, & C. refusing to confirm it, B. brought an action against A. for the breach of contract.—Held: he was only entitled to recover nominal damages & the expenses incurred in the investigation of A.'s title; but not damages for the loss of his bargain, or expenses incurred in obtaining shooting elsewhere, or in fruitless endeavours to substitute a new contract on the failure of the original bargain.—POUNSETT v. 2343. — Delay in completion.—On a contract for the sale of real estate with possession, subject to a condition that if from any cause whatever the purchase is not completed on the date fixed for completion "the purchaser in default" is to pay interest from that date on the balance of the purchase-money, a deposit having been paid, until completion, & the purchase is not completed for upwards of four months from the fixed date, not in consequence of any defect in title or conveyancing difficulties, but entirely owing to the default of the vendor in not having taken reasonable care to fulfil his contract, the purchaser is not "in default" within the condition, & the vendor is not entitled to interest.

In such a case the vendor, although acting in good faith, is liable to the purchaser for such damages as may reasonably be said to have arisen through delay & non-delivery of possession, or as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties as likely to arise from

Loss of profit on resale.—There is no understanding that a contract for the sale of real estate may fall because the vendor does not choose to go to the trouble or expense of obtaining title, & in such case the usual rule as to the measure of damages, does not apply; & if the purchaser has entered into an agreement to resell he may recover the loss of profit on such resale & the reasonable costs of defending his purchaser's action for rescission.—MORCHREY v. The breach which charged that the co. did not prepare the conveyance or pay the purchase-money, was, on general demurrer, well assigned; yet as the covenant provided that the conveyance should be at the costs & charges of the co., it lay on them to prepare it, such being the general course between vendor & purchaser.—THAMES HAVEN DOCK CO. v. sufficient to meet the incumbrances & interest thereon & the additional amount to meet the contingencies referred to in the sect., the amount to be paid in to meet the incumbrance is not necessarily merely the bare amount of the capital charge, but the ct. may direct payment into ct. of such amount as, when invested in govt. securities, it considers will be sufficient to meet the capital charge & interest thereon.

The object of above sect. is not to disturb any rights more than is necessary, but to enable a sale to be carried through notwithstanding there is an incumbrance which, but for the sect., would prevent a sale free from incumbrances. Although the purchaser gets the property unincumbered, the money paid into ct. is not substituted, as between the incumbrancer & the vendor, for the incumbered land as the sole security for the incumbrancer's money. The incumbrancer has an additional security on the purchase-money received by the vendor, who, in case of a depreciation in value of the govt. securities in which the money is invested, is bound to make good the depreciation to the incumbrancer, whereas any appreciation in value belongs to the vendor.—*Re WILBERFORCE'S TRUSTS, WILBERFORCE v. 2360. — Discharge of incumbrances by payment into court—Form of order.]—Under above sect., an order for the sale of land free from an incumbrance, the incumbrancer not being a party to the action, should follow the words of above Act, which are to be interpreted strictly, & after directing payment into ct. of the purchase-money, & setting apart a sufficient amount to meet the claims of the incumbrancer, proceed to declare that thereupon any person interested should be at liberty to apply in chambers for a declaration that the land is freed from the incumbrance. — DICKIN v. DICKIN (1882), 30 W. R. 887.

2361. — Payment inflicting hardship on vendor.]—A railway co. contracted to sell superfluous land, free from incumbrances, for £868. It turned out that the land was subject to a perpetual rentcharge for £63, which was unknown to the co.'s solrs. at the time of the contract. The purchaser insisted that the co. should make application to the ct., under above Act, for payment into ct. of a sum sufficient, out of the dividends to pay the rentcharge, with a further sum to meet contingencies, so that the ct. might declare the land free from incumbrances. The co. offered an indemnity, & stated that, if not accepted, they should rescind the contract. The amount which would have to be paid in was £2,300:—Held: the co. could rescind, the indemnity being refused.

The ct. will not compel a vendor to make payment into ct. under above sect., where the result would be to inflict hardship on the vendor.—Re GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. & SANDERSON (1884), 25 Ch. D. 788; 53 L. J. Ch. 445; 50 L. T. 87; 32 W. R. 519.

2362. — Jurisdiction to decide question of construction of will.]—Upon the sale of certain real estate a summons was taken out, under above sect., for leave to pay into ct. a sum of money in order to make provision for certain charges upon the property by the will of deceased testator:—Held: the ct. could ascertain, upon the construction of the will, what was the amount of the charges upon the property, notwithstanding that it involved the determination of interests in futuro.—Re FREME'S CONTRACT, [1895] 2 Ch. 256; *sub nom. 2363. — Discharge of annuities & legacies.]—Testator by his will charged his estate with the payment of certain annuities & legacies. In an administration action it was ordered (inter alia) that the trustees of the will should transfer certain sums in consols into ct. to answer the annuities & legacies, & liberty was given to the annuitants, in case the income of the fund should be at any time insufficient to meet the annuities, to resort to the capital of the fund to make good the deficiency. The residuary estate was directed to be conveyed to the parties entitled to it. These parties proposed to sell part of the real estate to certain purchasers, who, however, objected to the title shown, on the ground that the property, as forming part of the residuary estate of testator, was still, notwithstanding the order, subject to the annuities & legacies given by the will:—Held: the land comprised in the contract was still, despite the administration, subject to a charge in favour of the annuitants as legatees in the will mentioned, & the only way of getting over the difficulty would be by paying the money into ct. in the administration action & applying in that action for an order as provided by above sect.—Re EVANS & BETTELL'S CONTRACT, [1910] 2 Ch. 438; 79 L. SECT. 3.—PARTIES TO MAKE THE CONVEYANCE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

2365. General rule—All necessary parties must convey.—By a marriage settlement, reciting only the intended marriage, & that it had been agreed that the lady's property should be settled & assured to the uses after mentioned, freeholds were conveyed to the use of the wife for life, remainder to the husband for life, remainder to such uses & upon such trusts as the wife should appoint, & in default of appointment to uses in favour of the issue of the marriage. The wife covenanted to surrender her copyholds "to the uses hereinbefore expressed" concerning the freeholds. An appointee under the power was admitted to the copyholds & obtained an enfranchisement to himself:—Held: the concurrence of the customary heir of the settlor was a question of conveyance, & not of title, for that the heir clearly had no beneficial interest.

In a decree for specific performance, a direction that the vendor shall convey has the same effect as a direction that the vendor & all other necessary parties shall convey.—MINTON v. KIRWOOD (1868), 3 Ch. App. 614; 37 L. J. Ch. 606; 18 L. T. 781; 16 W. R. 991, L. J.

Annotation:—Mentd. Heasman v. Pearse (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 522.

2366. Duty of vendor—Concurrence of parties—Whether confined to necessary or proper parties—Special agreement.—It being one of the terms of a contract between vendor & purchaser, that certain parties were to join in the conveyance, the ct. would not enter into the question, whether they were necessary or proper parties.—BENSON v. LAMB (1846), 9 Beav. 502; 15 L. J. Ch. 218; 7 L. T. O. S. 385; 50 E. R. 438.

Annotation:—Mentd. Wells v. Maxwell (No. 1) (1863), 32 Beav. 408.

2367. — — — Parties whose concurrence can be enforced.—Semble: where the breach of the contract arises not from the vendor's inability, that is, not upon a question of title, but upon a question of conveyancing, as from his own refusal on the ground of expense, or from whatever other motive, to perform the contract himself, or to compel others whom he can compel to concur in conveying or in giving up possession, the proper remedy is by bill in equity to enforce him to complete, & to compel the completion of the contract.

Whenever it is a matter of conveyancing, & not a matter of title, it is the duty of the vendor to do everything that he is enabled to do by force of his own interest, & also by force of the interest of others, whom he can compel to concur in the conveyance (LORD HATHERLEY).—BAIN v. The purchaser repudiated the contract, on the ground of the absence of the three months' notice required by section 20 of the Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41). Subsequently the vendors offered to procure the concurrence of the second mtgees. & the trustee in bkpcy. of the mtgor.:—Held: the concurrence of the other parties did not prevent the title from being a title under a mtgee.'s power of sale; & the purchaser was bound to complete, notwithstanding the variation in the title offered.—Re THOMPSON & HOLT (1890), 44 Ch. Sect. 3 [of private Act] incorporated pltfs. for the above purposes, with power to purchase, take, hold, deal with, & dispose of lands & other property without licence in mortmain:—Held: this sect. merely gave the pltfs. a licence in mortmain, with possibly a power of sale without the consent of the Charity Comrs. under Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 124).—*Re VERRALL, NATIONAL TRUST FOR PLACES OF HISTORIC INTEREST OR NATURAL BEAUTY v. 2384. —[The Shakespeare Memorial Trust was established to erect & endow a Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre, with the object of performing Shakespeare's plays, reviving English classical drama, & stimulating the art of acting.

At the time when a donation of £70,000 was made to the charity, part of which was applied by the charity in the purchase of a site for the theatre, no annual subscription had been received, but within only nine days of that time the first annual subscription was received. On the subsequent sale of the site, the question arose whether, in those circumstances, the consent of the Charity Comrs. was required to the sale by the charity:—Held: notwithstanding that in the inception of its formation it was contemplated that the charity should be supported by annual subscriptions as well as by income from endowment, & notwithstanding that there was an interval of nine days only between the donation & the first of the annual subscriptions, the charity was not at the time when the donation was received a mixed charity within Charitable Trusts Act, 1853 (c. 137), s. 62, & as it was, therefore, not exempted from the jurisdiction of the Charity Comrs., their consent to the sale by the charity was required.—*Re SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL TRUST, LYTTON (EARL) v. 2402. ———. ———.]—By contract of Feb. 21, 1905 W. agreed to sell to P. "land situate in & fronting 133 feet upon" W. road, having a "depth next O. H. grove of 124 feet," more particularly delineated, together with the abutments, boundaries, & dimensions thereof, be the last named little more or less, upon the plan thereto. The plan showed a piece of land with a slightly rounded corner at the junction of W. road & O. H. grove with frontage lines, marked respectively 133 feet & 124 feet produced in a straight line so as almost to meet at the corner. On a vendor & purchaser summons:—Held: the purchaser, according to the representations in the contract, was entitled to a conveyance of land having 257 feet frontage, measured round the bend of the corner of W. road & O. H. grove, the vendor not being entitled to have the lines of frontage produced in straight lines to their point of intersection, outside the bend in measuring the 133 feet & 124 feet respectively. —Re WELLINGS & PARSONS' CONTRACT (1906), 97 L. T. 105.

2403. ———. ———.]—Particulars of sale comprised lot 1, pasture land as shown on plan, & lots 2 to 8, seven lots as shown on plan, all having frontages of 30 feet each to the road. T. agreed to purchase a piece of land, lots 2 to 8, & to complete the purchase according to the conditions. None of the lots had been marked out at the date of the contract, but the plan was that of an oblong field abutting on the road, P. lane, with eight oblong spaces of substantially equal widths marked off by straight lines parallel to each other & to the northern & southern boundary lines of the field, except that part of the northern boundary of the field & lot 1 inclined to the south west showing a narrower frontage where that lot abutted on P. lane than the frontages of the other seven lots. Each lot was marked with its number & "30 feet" & a note on the plan stated that it was for the purpose of delineation only. Condition 6 stated that the property should be taken to be correctly described & that the vendor should not be required to account for any discrepancies in the quantities. The total frontage of the field upon P. lane was in fact more than eight frontages of 30 feet & the vendor was willing to convey a frontage of 210 feet as stumped out by his agent in respect of the seven lots bought by T., but the purchaser claimed that as shown on the plan he was entitled to seven-eighths of the entire frontage: —Held: seven lots "as shown on plan" when read in conjunction with the sixth condition meant that the purchaser must take the lots as he found them whether having frontages more or less than 30 feet & the lines of the plan must be taken to be correct; the purchaser, therefore, being entitled to a conveyance of that proportion of the land which the seven lots bore to the property described in the plan.—Re FREEMAN & TAYLOR'S CONTRACT (1907), 97 L. T. 39.

2404. ———. ———.]—Where an estate is sold as shown upon a plan & there is no dispute as to the validity of the contract, the plan decides what is the extent of the estate sold; & this is so although the particulars given & taken as being particulars of what is comprised in the plan erroneously contained particulars which were not contained in the plan. Such erroneous misstatements may afford the buyer good ground for a reduction of the contract, but in the absence of any action for this purpose he cannot found on the misrepresentation with the object of obtaining an estate larger than that delineated on the plan.—GORDON-CUMMING v. HOULDSWORTH, [1910] A. C. 537; 80 L. J. P. C. 47, H. L.

2406. ———. ———.]—Plan annexed to particulars—Statement that accuracy not guaranteed.—L. put up for sale by auction a piece of land in four lots, which were described in the particulars as having each a frontage of 22 feet & a depth of 98 feet. The particulars stated, "a right of way will be granted to each purchaser over the path at the back." The conditions provided that the conveyance to each purchaser should contain a covenant that he would pay a fair proportion of the cost of maintaining the path at the rear of each lot. A plan was annexed to the particulars, intitled "Plan of four plots of land to be submitted by auction at the W. Hotel Margate" & upon the plan was printed a note "This plan is simply prepared as a guide to intending purchasers, & its accuracy in regard to area, measurements, abutments, or otherwise is in no way guaranteed." The plan showed four lots extending from a road called Northdown road to a line representing the boundary wall of the vendor's property, with figures showing depth & frontage, as stated in the particulars. A cross line was drawn across the lots 4 feet from the wall, but the space between this line & the wall was coloured with the rest of the lots, & the division lines of the lots were carried through this space to the wall. There was no express reference to the plan in the particulars or conditions. There was no actual path in existence, & nothing to show what the references to a path in the particulars & conditions meant, except the cross line on the plan. The whole four lots were purchased by two purchasers, who agreed that they did not wish for any right of way over each other's lots. The purchaser of two lots tendered a conveyance of the whole plots shown on the plan, including the space beyond the cross line. The vendor claimed to convey the land only up to the cross line, & to give a right of way over the strip beyond:—Held: notwithstanding the note on the plan, it formed part of the contract, & the purchasers were entitled to the conveyance of the whole plots coloured without the reservation of any right of way.—Re LINDSAY & FORDER'S CONTRACT (1895), 72 L. T. 832; 39 Sol. Jo. 449.

2407. ———. ———.]—Land was put up for sale by auction under particulars & conditions to which a plan was attached. The plan was a copy of the ordnance map, & upon it was a printed statement to the effect that it was for reference only & that there was no guarantee of its accuracy, but that it was believed to be accurate. The draft conveyance described the property by reference to a plan, which was a copy of the plan attached

1. Sufficiency of description.—A certificate given for a portion of a lot sold for taxes on Nov. 12, 1867, under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 53, stated it to be the "one-twenty-seventh part," without further describing it. The deed given on Apr. 19, 1871, described the land by metes & bounds:—Held: the deed was void.—WILLIAMS v. McCOLL (1873), 23 C. P. 189.—CAN.

to the particulars & conditions. The vendor proposed to insert the words "by way of elucidation & not of warranty," to qualify the reference to the plan:—Held: he was not entitled to do so, as the description of the property in the draft conveyance was insufficient or unsatisfactory without reference to the plan, in which no material error could be pointed out.—RE SPARROW & JAMES' CONTRACT (1902), [1910] 2 Ch. 60; 79 L. The contract did not refer to any plan, but at the time of signing the agreement, a memorandum referring to the agreement for sale was written on a plan of the property, which showed that a strip of the wharf was to be taken off & added to the towing path:—Held: this plan was made part of the agreement, so as to satisfy Stat. Frauds; & it controlled the description in the agreement.—NENE VALLEY DRAINAGE COMRS. v. DUNKLEY (1876), 4 Ch. D. 1; 41 J. P. 101, C. A.

2409. Exhibition of plan—Plan showing new street—Whether warranty that street will be made.]

—The mere exhibition of a plan of a new street, at the time of the sale of a piece of ground on which to build a house in the line of the intended street, does not of itself amount to a warranty or engagement that all that is exhibited on the plan shall be done, more especially where the purchaser has a distinct contract put into the solemn form of a charter, in which nothing is said about that which he claims merely on the foundation of its having been exhibited on the plan.—*HERIOT'S HOSPITAL FEOFFES v. particularly delineated in a map or plan thereof drawn in the margin of the said schedule." There were no general words. In an action brought to try the right to a slip of land, which was not mentioned either in the schedule or in the plan above referred to, evidence was offered on the part of deft. to show that the locus in quo had always been occupied with the closes mentioned & delineated in the schedule & plan, & treated as part of Gotton Farm:—Held: this evidence was not admissible, & that the deed was conclusive.—*BARTON v. 2414. Description of parcels—Right of purchaser to frame description—Subject to description giving effect to contract.]—A purchaser is entitled to say by what description he wishes to have the subject-matter of a purchase vested in him, but the description must give effect to the contract entered into. Under Michael Angelo Taylor's Act, 1817 (c. xxix), a borough council contracted to purchase from its owner a piece of land for street widening. The piece was coloured pink on a plan annexed to the notice to treat, & appeared to project into a street some 10 feet beyond a proposed new line of frontage of the street indicated by a red line. There were no figures on the plan, except a scale of feet, showing any dimensions. The vendor in his claim set out the length & breadth of the piece & its area in feet & inches, & required those dimensions to be inserted in the conveyance, whereas the council only proposed to describe the piece by reference to the plan:—Held: the dimensions as set out by the vendor must be inserted in the conveyance.—MONIGHETTI v. WANDSWORTH BOROUGH COUNCIL (1908), 73 J. P. 91.

2415. — — — — —.]—In simple cases a purchaser is entitled to have land conveyed to him by reference to a plan on his conveyance.

The purchaser is entitled to have an appropriate description of the property as at the date of the conveyance to himself, & it is a convenient practice, & one which I think the purchaser is entitled to insist upon, that the modern description shall be connected with the old description so that there shall be a continuous description of the property (SWINFEN EADY, J.).—Re SANSOM & NARBETH'S CONTRACT, [1910] 1 Ch. 741; 79 L. J. Ch. 374; 102 L. T. 677; 54 Sol. Jo. 475.

2416. Whether conclusive of property conveyed.—Small portion of additional land.—In vendor's possession.—Pltf. owned property A. over which an artificial watercourse or mill-race ran in open wooden troughs leading to a mill lower down on property B. belonging to defts. For a great number of years there had been & still were a fell-monger's yard & a stonemason's yard on property A., the tenants of both of which had in fact been accustomed to use water from the trough for the purpose of their respective businesses. Other acts of ownership of the watercourse had been exercised by the occupiers of the mill on property B. who were responsible for the repair of the troughs. For over a hundred years prior to 1907 property A. & property B. had been in common ownership, & it was during this time that the artificial watercourse had been made. In 1907 property A. was conveyed to pltf. without any mention of the water. Property B. was at the same time conveyed to defts. "together with full right of passage & running of water to the mill & premises as now & heretofore used & enjoyed therewith:—Held: on a conveyance of land, stated to contain 1542 square yards & said to be coloured on a sale plan, the conveyance would pass, as between the vendor & the purchaser, land of which the vendor was in fact in possession, but which was not apparently coloured on the plan & which included 140 square yards more than the 1,542 square yards specified in the parcels.—LEWIS v. MEREDITH, [1913] 1 Ch. 571; 82 L. J. Ch. 255; 108 L. T. 549.

2417. What passes by conveyance.—Whether fixtures pass.—The owner of a freehold house, in which there were various fixtures, sold it by auction. Nothing was said about the fixtures. A conveyance of the house was executed, & possession given to the purchaser, the fixtures still remaining in the house:—Held: (1) they passed by the conveyance of the freehold; & even if they did not, the vendor, after giving up the possession, could not maintain trover for them.

(2) A few articles, which were not fixtures, were also left in the house; the demand described them together with the other articles, as fixtures, & the refusal was of the fixtures demanded:—Held: upon this evidence pltf. could not recover them in this action.—COLEGRAVE v. DIAS SANTOS (1823), 2 B. & C. 76; 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 255; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 239; 107 E. R. 311.

2419. — — — Granary.—Under a conveyance of land, a farm house & fixtures:—Held: (1) rick straddles, which consisted of stone pillars mortised to a brick foundation let into the earth & stone caps mortared on the pillars passed either as part of the land or as fixtures; (2) a threshing machine fixed by bolts & screws to posts let into the ground, so that the machine could not be got out without disturbing some of the soil, also passed under the deed; (3) a granary which rested upon a wooden foundation, supported by straddles, & capable of being lifted by sufficient power from the straddles without disturbing them, was a mere chattel; & even if under the circumstances of the case it would pass as a chattel, the word "fixtures" being large enough to include movable chattels, still the removal of it during an outstanding term could not be made the subject of a count for injury to pltf.'s reversionary interest, or a count in trover, the possession being in the tenant.—WILTSEAR v. COTTRELL (1853), 1 E. & B. 674; 22 L. J. Q. B. 177; 20 L. T. O. S. 259; 17 Jur. 758; 118 E. R. 589.

The effect of the words "more or less" added to the statement of quantity has never been yet absolutely fixed by decision, being considered sometimes as extending only to cover a small difference the one way or the other, sometimes as leaving the quantity altogether uncertain & throwing upon the purchaser the necessity of satisfying himself with regard to it. In this instance the description is rendered still more loose by the addition of the words "by estimation" (GRANT, M.R.).—WINCH v. WINCHESTER (1812), 1 Ves. & B. 375; 35 E. R. 146.

2427.—Interpretation not affected by subsequent conveyance—To third person.—The conveyance to deft. described the land as containing the dimensions shown & delineated on a plan in the margin, "be the same a little more or less," & purported to convey it as it was then held & enjoyed by the vendor. The plan specified the dimensions in feet & inches, & the measurement corresponded with the actual measurement to a few inches:—Held: the description could not be controlled or affected by the fact that 6 feet of the part of the passage purporting to be conveyed to deft. was also included in the subsequent conveyance to pltf., & had been treated as part of No. 1 by being covered in & included in the curtilage.—Dodd v. Burchell (1862), 1 H. & C. 113; 31 L. J. Ex. 364; 8 Jur. N. S. 1180; 158 E. R. 822. Annotation:—Mentd. Hall v. Lund (1863), 1 H. & C. 676.

2428. "Clear yearly value"—What outgoings

etc. excluded.—From what charges the estate settled ought to be exempt? That depends on the words "clear yearly value."

... I am of opinion the words in this case do not extend to land tax. The word "clear" should be construed in the power, as it would in an agreement between buyer & seller: that is, clear of all outgoings, incumbrances, & extraordinary charges, not according to the custom of the country, as tithes, poor rates, church rates, etc., which are natural charges on the tenant (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—TYRCONNELL (LORD) v. Annotation:—Mentd. Saunders v. Shaffo, [1905] 1 Ch. 126.

2429. "Month"—Whether calendar or lunar.—The word month may mean lunar or calendar month, according to the intention of the contracting parties; therefore where upon a sale of land on Jan. 24 it was agreed by the conditions of sale that an abstract of the title should be delivered to the purchaser within a fortnight from the date thereof, to be returned by him at the end of two months from the said date & that a draft of the conveyance should be delivered within three months from the said date, to be redelivered within four months from said date and the purchase to be completed on June 24, making a period of precisely five calendar months from the date of the sale & conditions the word months was held to mean calendar & not lunar months, by reference to the whole period fixed for the completion of the contract. The condition for delivery of the draft of the conveyance within three months, was not a condition precedent with respect to its delivery within the precise time.—LANG v. 2436. What may be inserted in habendum — Saving clause in general terms—Sale subject to undefined conditions.]—Trustees for sale who sold under a condition that “the property is sold & will be conveyed subject to all free rents, quit rents, & incidents of tenure, & to all rights of way, water, & other easements, if any . . . without any obligation on the vendors to define any such rights or claims”:—Held: entitled to have a saving in general terms inserted in the habendum of the conveyance, although it was not shown or asserted that the property was subject to any of the liabilities so specified.—GALE v. SQUIER (1877), 5 Ch. D. 625; 46 L. J. Ch. 672; 36 L. T. 632, C. A.

2437. — Whether restrictive covenants not mentioned in abstract.]—Contract for purchase of lands, which afterwards proved to be subject to covenants, of which there was no notice on the face of the contract. Specific performance of such a contract refused as against the purchaser, on the ground that he could not be compelled to enter into similar covenants, or to have them recited in the deed of conveyance, but that he might elect either to rescind the contract or to accept a conveyance with the covenants.—LUKEY v. HIGGS (1855), 3 Eq. Rep. 510; 24 L. J. Ch. 495; 25 L. T. O. S. 7; 1 Jur. N. S. 200; 3 W. R. 306.

2438. — — —.]—A contract for sale of a freehold house provided that all objections & requisitions in respect of the title or the abstract or the particulars or anything appearing therein should be made within fourteen days from the delivery of the abstract, & by condition (a) that if any objection or requisition should be made which the vendors should be unable or unwilling to comply with, the vendors should be at liberty to rescind. The purchaser accepted the title as shown by the abstract, & forwarded draft conveyance to the vendors, which the vendors altered so as to show that the conveyance was made subject to certain restrictive covenants contained in a deed of earlier date than the commencement of the title. The purchaser, who was willing to take the property notwithstanding the restrictive covenants, of which she had had no previous notice, asked to see a copy of the restrictive covenants, & objected to the conveyance in the altered form, on which the vendors gave notice to rescind:—Held: the purchaser had not made any objection or requisition entitling the vendors to rescind within condition (a) & she was entitled to a conveyance according to the abstract delivered without reference to the restrictive covenants.—RE MONCKTON & GILZEAN (1884), 27 Ch. D. 555; 54 L. J. Ch. 257; 51 L. T. 320; 32 W. R. 973.

Annotation:—Mentd. Re Riley to Streatfield (1886), 34 Ch. D. 386.

2439. — Whether restrictive covenant mentioned in abstract—Not mentioned in particulars or conditions.]—A contract for the sale of some freehold land provided, by one of the conditions, that if any objection or requisition as to, inter alia, title or abstract, or evidence of title or conveyance, should be insisted on, & the vendors should be unable or unwilling to remove or comply therewith, they should be at liberty, by notice in writing, to annul the sale. When the abstract was delivered to the purchaser, it appeared that the conveyance to vendors' testator was of the land together with a wall fence on the east side of it, “which wall fence was to be for ever thereafter repaired & kept in repair” by testator, his heirs & assigns. This obligation was not mentioned in the particulars & conditions of sale, & the purchaser did not know of it until the delivery of the abstract. The purchaser accepted the title as shown by the abstract, & tendered to the vendors a draft conveyance which made no reference to the obligation to repair the wall fence. The vendors inserted the words “subject to & with the liability for ever to repair the wall fence” by the purchaser, his heirs & assigns. The purchaser objected to the conveyance in the altered form, whereupon the vendors gave notice to rescind the contract. The purchaser then brought an action for specific performance of the contract, claiming the right to a conveyance without the additional words:—Held: as (a) if the obligation to repair the wall ran with the land, it would bind the purchaser whether there was any reference to it in the conveyance to him or not, & (b) if it did not run with the land, the vendors, not having mentioned this obligation in the particulars, had no right to insert any words in the conveyance imposing it on the purchaser, they were not entitled to rescind the contract.—HARDMAN v. CHILD (1885), 28 Ch. D. 712; 54 L. J. Ch. 695; 52 L. T. 465; sub nom. Re HARDMAN & CHILD, 33 W. R. 544.

Annotation:—Consd. Re Glenton & Saunders to Haden (1885), 53 L. T. 434.

2440. — Whether restrictive covenant not mentioned in contract—Omission rendering vendor liable to action.]—Under a contract with a purchaser for the sale of land in fee simple free from incumbrances, with the exception of one specified restrictive covenant, the vendor is not entitled to insert in the conveyance a further restrictive covenant on the ground that he has entered into a prior contract with another which would render him liable to an action unless the further restrictive covenant was inserted, though the prior contract might be a good defence to an action for specific performance.

This [to purchaser's] liability, if any, under the covenant depends, not on its inclusion in the conveyance, but on his notice of its existence (KEKEWICK, J.).—Re WALLIS & BARNARD'S CONTRACT, [1899] 2 Ch. 515; 68 L. J. Ch. 753; 81 L. T. 382; 48 W. R. 57.

2441. Extent of liability of vendor—Whether absolute warranty.—A. after granting certain premises in fee to B., & after warranting the same against himself & his heirs, covenanted, that notwithstanding any act by him done to the contrary he was seised of the premises in fee, & that he had full power, etc. to convey the same; he then covenanted for himself, his heirs, exors. & administrators, to make a cartway, & that B. should quietly enjoy without interruption from himself, or any person claiming under him; & lastly, that he, his heirs, & assigns, & all persons claiming under him, should make further assurance:—Held: the intervening general words, “full power, etc. to convey,” were either part of the preceding special covenant; or, if not, that they were qualified by all the other special covenants against the acts of himself & his heirs.

If a man purchase an estate of inheritance & afterwards sell it, it is to be understood prima facie that he sells the estate as he received it: & the purchaser takes the premises granted by him with covenants against his acts. If the vendor has taken by descent, he covenants against his acts & those of his ancestor; & if by devise, it is not unusual for him to covenant against the acts of the deviser as well as his own. . . . If he has bought an estate in fee, & at the time of the resale has but an estate for life, it must have been reduced to that estate by his own act, & in that case the purchaser will be protected by the vendor's covenants against any act done by himself. But if the defect in his title depend upon the acts of those who had the estate before him, & he honestly but ignorantly proposes to another person to stand in his situation, neither hardship nor injustice can ensue (LORD ELDON, C.J.).

The covenant would then stand thus: The grantor covenants that notwithstanding any act done by him, he is seised of the estate, & hath good title to convey. The two clauses are synonymous (BULLER, J.).—BROWNING v. WRIGHT (1799), 2 Bos. & P. 13; 126 E. R. 1128.

(2) According to the usual course upon the conveyance of an estate, derived by descent, the covenants are against the acts of the ancestor, from whom it is descended. . . . & the acts of the party conveying; & if there should have been an intermediate heir, supposed to be dead, it is reasonable that the covenants should extend to his acts; but, if the sale takes place under such circumstances, that it is not known, whether there was an intermediate heir, & the consideration is reduced in proportion to the doubt upon the title in that respect, no one would think of making the party covenant against the acts of such intermediate heir, if there happened to be one; as then the conveyance would be all wrong; & whether the covenant is by a rich or a poor man cannot be taken into consideration (LORD ELDON, C.).—PICKETT v. PART IX. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 1.— G. (b) i.

2441 i. Extent of liability of vendor—Whether absolute warranty.—The provision of the Conveyancing Ordinance in reference to the implication of absolute covenants for title in a conveyance on sale does not affect the operation of a contract for the sale of real estate, & a vendor who is himself a purchaser for value is not bound, unless the contract of sale so provides, to give a purchaser absolute covenants for title, but may restrict the covenants for title to the acts & deeds of himself & those claiming under him.—CAMERON v. TUTCHEN (1883), 1 N. Z. L. R. 392 (S. C.).—N.Z.

On June 22, 1842, deft. then being the owner in fee of the messuage, etc., by an agreement in writing with the owners in fee of an adjoining building agreed that a certain cornice & certain spouts & pipes conducting the water into a spout belonging to the building, & the dripping of water from the eaves of the messuage, & the three windows on the east side of the messuage overlooking the building, were encroachments by deft. & should & might be used by him so long as the other parties to the agreement should consent thereto; & deft. paid to the other parties 5s. as an acknowledgment, & agreed to pay 5s. per annum so long as the cornice, spouts, pipes or windows should be used by him. At that time deft. had not acquired any easement in respect of the cornice, spouts, pipes or windows by the lapse of twenty years. Pltf., having been interfered with in the enjoyment of the easement by the owners of the adjoining building, brought an action against deft. for breach of covenant:—Held: deft. had conveyed the premises described so far as he possessed or could grant them; but the covenant for title was limited to that which he actually had, or but for his own act would have had, & the acknowledgment & payments were not an act within that covenant.—THACKERAY v. WOOD (1865), 6 B. & S. 766; 6 New Rep. 305; 34 L. J. Q. B. 226; 13 W. R. 996; 122 E. R. 1376, Ex. Ch.

2449. ——— Defects appearing on conveyance—Or otherwise known to purchaser.—Covenants for title & quiet enjoyment do not extend to protect a purchaser against defects of title, which the recitals in his own purchase deed are sufficient to disclose.

Therefore, where a vendor who, under a will, had only a fee subject to an executory devise over, which ultimately took effect, sold & conveyed to a purchaser as if absolutely entitled, though the covenant for quiet enjoyment by the vendor extended to meet adverse claims by persons claiming under the vendor's testator, & incumbrances, estates, etc., created by such testator, yet as the will was recited in the purchaser's conveyance:—Held: there was no breach of the covenant, which could not protect the purchaser against his own misconstruction of the written instrument under which he took.—*HUNT v. 2450. ———.]—A. P. agreed with a railway co. for the sale to them in fee of land to which she derived title under the will of X., & whether she could make a good title depended on the construction of that will. The sale was completed by a deed which fully recited the will of X., & by which she conveyed the land in the same way as an owner in fee would have done, & entered into the usual covenants for title extending to the acts of X., as well as of herself. The purchase-money was paid to her. After her death her children claiming under the will of X. obtained judgment against the railway co. for payment to them of the purchase-money, which had been paid to her. The co. then sued the representatives of A. P. under her covenant for title:—Held: (1) defects of title to the estate expressed to be conveyed by a purchase deed, if they come within the terms of the covenants for title, are not to be excluded from their operation on the ground that they appear on the face of the conveyance or are otherwise known to the purchaser; (2) the co. were entitled to recover on the covenants.—*PAGE v. 2451. Who may be required to give—Tenant for life—Sale by trustees on direction of tenant for life.—

(1) Estates were devised to A. for life remainder to B. for life remainder to his sons successively in tail male. A. & B. during the infancy of B.'s eldest son obtained an Act of Parliament vesting the estates in trustees in trust to sell:—Held: A. & B. must covenant with the purchaser for title. If settled estates are sold under a power to sell them with the consent of the tenant for life he must covenant for the title.

(2) A. being tenant for life of an estate, with remainder to his sons, successively, in tail male, entered into an agreement with B., by which it was stipulated that A. should procure an Act of Parliament to enable him to sell the estate to B.;

& that B. should bear all the expenses incident to & consequent upon his proposal to purchase the estate, together with the expense of obtaining the Act, of preparing the abstract, & showing a title to the estate & of & about making & completing the sale & conveyance to him, together with the expense of the agreement, & all other expenses whatsoever of A., in consequence of the sale, or arising out of or in anywise relating thereto, or to the proposal of B. A. accordingly obtained an Act for the sale of the estate to B., which directed the purchase-money to be invested in lands to be settled to the same uses as the estate stood limited to:—Held: B. was not bound to pay the expenses of the investment.—Re LONDON BRIDGE ACTS, Re WITTS' ESTATE ACT, Ex p. CLINTON (LORD) (1556), 2 Dyer, 139a; 73 E. R. 303.

2455. Conveyance as "beneficial owner"—Extent of implied covenants.—[Deft. granted a lease of land to B. for 99 years, & afterwards B. granted certain sub-leases by way of mtge. He then, for value, surrendered the term to deft., without disclosing the existence of the sub-leases. By a subsequent deed deft., for value, conveyed the fee simple, "as beneficial owner," to B., under whom pltf. claimed. Some time afterwards pltf. & deft. discovered the existence of the mtge. sub-leases; & pltf. then brought an action against deft. for damages for the breach of the implied covenant contained in his conveyance, as "beneficial owner," to B.:—Held: (1) the grant of the lease for 99 years to B., which was still outstanding for the benefit of the mtge. sub-lessees, was an act "done by deft." within the meaning of the implied covenant for right to convey; the creation of the mtge. sub-leases by B. was an incumbrance "made by a person rightfully claiming through deft." within the meaning of the implied covenants for quiet enjoyment & freedom from incumbrances; & pltf. was entitled to claim damages against deft. for breach of those covenants; (2) although deft. would have had a good defence against B. if he had brought an action for breach of the covenant, on the ground of B.'s fraud, he had no such defence against pltf., who had purchased without notice of the fraud, & was not affected by B.'s disability. (3) Semble: inasmuch as deft. was ignorant of the existence of the sub-leases, his omission to get them in was not in itself an act "omitted" by him within the meaning of the implied covenant for right to convey.

Although a vendor's covenant for title is not an absolute warranty of title, it is very wide. The acts & omissions covenanted against are reducible to four heads, viz. (a) the acts & omissions of the vendor himself; (b) the acts & omissions of persons through whom he claims otherwise than by purchase for value; (c) the acts & omissions of persons claiming through him; (d) the acts & omissions of persons claiming in trust for him (LINDLEY, L.J.).—DAVID v. SABIN, [1893] 1 Ch. 523; 62 L. J. Ch. 347; 68 L. T. 237; 41 W. R. 398; 9 T. L. R. 240; 37 Sol. Jo. 248; 2 R. 342, C. A.

The proper measure of damages in such a case is the difference between the purchase price & the value of the land as the vendor had power to convey it.—TURNER v. MOON, [1901] 2 Ch. 825; 70 L. J. Ch. 822; 85 L. T. 90; 50 W. R. 237.

2457. ———.—Purchaser with notice of prior rights.—[Deft. conveyed part of a building estate in fee simple as beneficial owner to pltf. Pltf. had notice both on the face of & outside the conveyance that previous purchasers of parts of the estate had rights of way over a road. As between pltf. & deft., however, the former were to take the land discharged from those rights. The conveyance contained no express covenants for title nor any qualification of the implied covenants. Pltf. entered on the land & blocked up the road & a previous purchaser claimed £5,000 damages from them for doing so. Pltf. gave notice to deft. & under protest went to arbn. An award was made giving the previous purchaser £510. Pltf. still disputed his right, & he brought an action in which, on a special case, pltf. were held liable to pay him the £510 & interest, & the cost of the arbn. proceedings & of the action. They paid these sums, & brought this action claiming from deft. repayment of the money thus paid & of their own costs of the arbn. & action:

PART IX. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 1.—G. (b) ii.

g. Conveyance as "beneficial owner."—[The vendor agreed with the purchaser for the sale of lands formerly held under lease, dated 1873, & now held under a judicial tenancy. S., the lessee in the lease of 1873, devised the lands to his son, J. S., & in the event of J. S. dying without issue, over. In 1910 J. S., as beneficial owner, assigned the lands to the vendor.

Sect. 5.—Form of conveyance: Sub-sect. 1, G. (b) ii., (c) & (d).]

—Held: plffs. were entitled to bring an action for damages under deft.'s implied covenants for title; their knowledge of the previous purchaser's rights did not prevent them from making this claim; deft. was liable to indemnify them, & must repay the £510 & interest & the costs which they had paid to the previous purchaser; & must also pay to them subsequent interest on the £510 & their costs of the arbn. proceedings as between solr. & client; but he need not pay their costs of the special case.

It was decided in Turner v. Moon, No. 2456, ante, that in an action for damages for breach of the covenant for title implied by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 7, which is the case, damages may be recovered for defect of title by reason of the existence of an undisclosed right of way (BUCKLEY, J.).—*GREAT WESTERN RY. 2458. ———.]—A vendor sold land as beneficial owner subject to rights of way, but in reply to a requisition as to whether there were in fact any rights of way, his solrs. replied "not to our knowledge." A public right of way having been successfully claimed, the purchaser sued him for damages by reason of the breach of his implied covenants for title under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 7, & the covenants for title being qualified, the question was whether the presumed dedication was prior or subsequent to 1782, the date of the last purchase for value by those for whose acts or omissions the vendor was liable. The purchaser produced two tithe maps dated 1802 & 1840, upon neither of which was the right of way indicated, as evidence that the dedication must have been subsequent to those dates.—Held: the tithe maps were made for a special purpose, & not for the purpose of showing public or private rights of way, or otherwise. They were therefore not prima facie evidence enabling the purchaser to contend that the dedication was at a later date, so as to shift the onus of proving that dedication was prior to 1782 on to the vendor.—STONEV. R. EASTBOURNE RURAL COUNCIL, [1927] 1 Ch. 367; 95 L. J. Ch. 312; 135 L. T. 281; 90 J. P. 173; 70 Sol. Jo. 690; 24 L. G. R. 333, C. A.

2459. ———.] (1) A vendor, who was entitled under an agreement to a lease of the lands therein described & coloured red on the plan annexed thereto, contracted to sell & subsequently as "beneficial owner" assigned to the purchaser all his "estate, term, & interest" under the agreement of & in the land coloured red on the plan annexed thereto. After completion it was discovered that previously to the contract for sale a small portion of the land coloured red had with the privity of the vendor been demised to a third party, & that consequently the vendor could not make a title to such portion. In an action by the purchaser for damages for breach of the vendor's implied covenants for title:—Held: there had been a breach by the vendor of such covenants, & he was liable for damages in respect thereof.

(2) In such an action the vendor is not entitled to adduce evidence to prove that the purchaser at the date of the contract knew of the diminution of the land, nor can the vendor, if counterclaiming for rectification, adduce evidence to prove mistake. Rectification in such circumstances would be in reality a transgression of the well settled practice that pltf. seeking specific performance cannot have specific performance with a parol variation.

(3) In order to obtain rectification there must be a mistake common to both parties, & if mistake is only unilateral, there must be fraud or misrepresentation amounting to fraud (FARWELL, J.).

(4) Rescission after conveyance of land can only be obtained on the ground of unfair dealing (FARWELL, J.).—MAY v. PLATT, [1900] 1 Ch. 616; 69 L. J. Ch. 357; 83 L. T. 123; 48 W. R. 617.

2460. Conveyance as personal representative.—Extent of implied covenants.—In 1922 defts. as exors. contracted to sell to plffs. a London leasehold house with stabling held by testator for the unexpired residue of a term of eighty years. By his will testator bequeathed these premises to defts. as his exors. & trustees upon trust to permit his wife to occupy the same during her life, she paying the rent, rates, & taxes & performing the covenants of the lease, & after her death to hold same upon the same trusts for the benefit of his son, deft., who was one of the exors., & his children & other issue as were therein declared of his son's share in the residuary estate. The exors. permitted the widow of testator to continue residing in the house for ten years until her death in Dec. 1921, she paying the rent & performing the covenants of the lease. The purchasers made a requisition on title to the effect that they knew that the house & premises had been occupied since testator's death by his widow, according to the trusts of the specific bequest, "which had been assented to," & the exors. could not sell until the death of the tenant for life; but the purchasers were willing to accept the title from the tenant for life under Settled Land Act. To this the reply was made that the tenant for life had died. Both parties acted on the assumption that the leasehold had fallen into the residue, & completed the purchase in 1922. Plffs. subsequently agreed to sell the stabling to a sub-purchaser, who took the objection that the exors. had no power to sell in 1922: no written or verbal consent to the specific bequest had been in fact given by the exors.

In an action by plffs. for damages for breach of an implied covenant for title by defts.:—Held: (1) plffs., as purchasers from the exors. in 1922, had actual notice of this assent by means of the requisition & answer, & were not therefore in the position of purchasers for value without notice of the defect; (2) the case came within s. 7 (1) (F), of Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 7 (1) (F), & plffs. were entitled to an inquiry as to damages for breach of the implied covenant for title.—*WISE v. 2461. Right of vendor to include—Building covenants affecting sold & unsold lots. Where, on a conveyance of building land, put up for sale in lots, the vendor takes a separate deed of covenant, the object of so doing is not to keep the notice of the covenant off the face of the title, but to obviate the necessity of executing the conveyance in duplicate. Where building land was put up for sale in several lots, two of which were purchased by defts., pltf., vendor, was, having regard to the conditions of sale:—Held: entitled to have it stated in the conveyances to defts. that they were bound, but he was not bound, by certain building covenants affecting the unsold, as well as the purchased, lots.—SIDNEY v. CLARKSON (1865), 35 Beav. 118; 14 W. R. 157; 55 E. R. 839; sub nom. SYDNEY v. CLARKSON, 13 L. T. 659.

2462. — — — Covenant to erect & maintain fences.—The object of having a deed of conveyance is not merely to vest the property the subject of it in the purchaser, but to embody covenants as to what must be done under the contract of sale after completion of the purchase. Therefore where a purchaser bought under a contract which made him liable to erect & for ever after maintain fences, as marked on the plan of property sold by public auction, the vendor was held entitled to have the obligations of the purchaser expressed in the conveyance to him of his lot.—Re COOPER & CRONDALE'S CONTRACT (1904), 90 L. 2463. Right of vendor—Sale of land subject to restrictive covenants—Indemnifying covenant by purchaser.—A vendor of freehold property, who, on his own purchase of it, had entered into a covenant to observe the covenants entered into with a former vendor, & which prohibited building on the land, put it up for sale, pursuant to particulars & conditions, noticing the existence of the covenant, but not stipulating that the purchaser should enter into any covenant on the subject. On a bill for specific performance, filed by the purchaser:—Held: (1) pltf. was not entitled to a conveyance, unless on the terms of giving or providing for the vendor a sufficient indemnity against any breach of the covenant on the part of pltf., his heirs, appointees or assigns; (2) a covenant on the part of pltf., his heirs, exors., administrators, appointees & assigns, with deft., his heirs, exors. & administrators, to the same effect, mutatis mutandis, as the covenant entered into by the vendor, on his own purchase, ought to be considered as a sufficient indemnity.—MOXHAY v. Inderwick (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 708; 63 E. R. 1261.

2464. — — — In an agreement for the sale of freehold land it was stated that the property was subject to restrictive covenants. The vendor had covenanted with his vendor to observe & perform those covenants & to indemnify his vendor:—Held: the purchaser ought to enter into a similar covenant with the vendor, but the covenant should be prefaced with the words "with the object & intention of affording to [the vendor], his heirs, exors., & administrators, a full & sufficient indemnity in respect of [the restrictive covenants], but not further or otherwise."—Re POOLE & CLARKE'S CONTRACT, [1904] 2 Ch. 173; 73 L. 2465. — — — Qualifying proviso.—The order of a judge settling the form of a conveyance is subject to appeal.

In a sale by the ct. the particulars of sale contained certain reservations & stipulations as to the property, & one of the conditions of sale provided that the conveyances should contain covenants by the purchasers for securing the liabilities & rights under such reservations & stipulations, the form of such covenants, in case of dispute, to be settled by the judge. A dispute having arisen between a purchaser & a vendor concerning the form of the covenant, the judge settled the covenant, adding a proviso that if the purchaser assigned his purchase, & the assignee entered into a similar covenant, the purchaser should be freed from further liability:—Held: the vendor was entitled to an unqualified covenant, & the proviso must be struck out.—POLLOCK v. RABBITS (1882), 21 Ch. D. 466; 47 L. T. 637; 31 W. R. 150, C. A.

2466. — — — When cause of action arises.—By a deed of Feb. 23, 1911, a parcel of freehold land forming part of a larger estate was conveyed to pltf. as purchaser & he covenanted with his vendor to observe & perform the stipulations in relation to the assured hereditaments contained in a schedule to the deed. Two of such stipulations were that no house to be erected on the land conveyed should be used for any purpose other than that of a private dwelling-house, & that no detached dwelling-house which should be built should be of less value than £800. By a deed of July 17, 1919, pltf. conveyed to deft. in fee a parcel of land being part of that conveyed by the deed of 1911, & subject to the restrictive covenants & stipulations contained in that deed so far as the same were subsisting & capable of taking effect, & deft., for herself, her heirs & assigns, with intent to bind the hereditaments thereby conveyed & all persons in whom the same should for the time be vested, but not so as to be personally liable

h. Absence of covenant by purchaser to pay purchase-money—Covenant implied.—Where, although an agreement for the sale of land did not contain an express covenant to pay the purchase-money, it described one of the parties as the purchaser, recited that "the vendor has agreed to sell & the purchaser has agreed to purchase" the land at a price stated payable in stated instalments, & also

under the covenant after she had parted with the same, did covenant with pltf., his heirs & assigns, that she would thenceforth observe & perform the restrictive covenants & stipulations so far as aforesaid. Deft. erected on the land conveyed to her a detached building or shed of a less value than £800, to be used as a classroom for boys. In an action by pltf. for a mandatory injunction to restrain the continuance of this building in breach of the restrictive covenants:—Held: the covenant in the deed of July 17, 1919, by deft. was a covenant to indemnify & nothing more, & in the absence of any proceedings taken or threatened against pltf. on the part of the original vendor to enforce the restrictive covenants in the deed of 1911, pltf. had no cause of action against deft. The rule of construction as to covenants of this character in reference to assignments of leaseholds applies also to similar covenants on a conveyance of freeholds.—*RECKITT v. 2470. — Right of purchaser of one estate.—Where there were certain title deeds common to two estates & held by third parties with no title to the properties, & one of the estates had been sold & an acknowledgment of the right to production, etc., given to the purchaser by each third parties, on a sale of the other estate by open contract:—Held: the purchaser could not insist that all the title deeds should be handed over on completion, but that the equitable right to production of the deeds was adequate under the circumstances.—Re JENKINS & COMMERCIAL ELECTRIC THEATRE CO.'S CONTRACT (1917), 61 Sol. A. Licence to Assign.

See, generally, LANDLORD & TENANT, Vol. XXXI., pp. 368–398.

2471. Duty of vendor to obtain consent.—It is incumbent on the vendor of a lease which contains a restriction against alienation, to prove that he has obtained the lessor's consent to the assignment.—MASON v. CORDER (1816), 7 Taunt. 9; 2 Marsh. 332; 129 E. R. 4.

Annotation:—Consd. Ferry v. Williams (1817), 1 Moore, C. P. 498.

2472. ——A lease contained a covenant not to assign without the licence of the lessor, with a proviso for re-entry on breach. The lessee became bkpt., & the assignees assigned to deft., who contracted to sell the term to pltf. Pltf. required deft. to obtain the licence of the lessor, which deft. failed to do:—Held: deft. was bound to obtain the landlord's licence to assign, as the assignment by the assignees was no breach of the covenant.—WINTER v. DUMERQUE (1866), 12 Jur. N. S. 726; 14 W. R. 699, Ex. Ch.

2473. — Whether vendor bound to take legal proceedings to obtain licence.—Where in a lease the lessee has covenanted not to assign without the previous consent in writing of the lessor, but it is expressly agreed that such consent shall not be withheld unreasonably or vexatiously, & the lessee enters into an agreement to assign "subject to the landlord's approval," & the landlord, being himself desirous of buying up the leases of his property, refuses his consent to an assignment upon that & no other ground, the lessee is bound only to show that he has bonâ fide pressed for the consent, & done all he could to procure it, & he is not bound to take legal proceedings to compel the landlord to grant it.—LEHMANN v. MCARTHUR (1868), 3 Ch. App. 496; 37 L. J. Ch. 625; 32 J. P. 669; 16 W. R. 877; sub nom. LECHMANN v. MCARTHUR, 18 L. T. 806, 1. J. J.

2474. — Repudiation by purchaser before time for obtaining licence.—A railway co. agreed to demise to E. for building purposes certain lands which they had acquired under their compulsory powers. E. was restrained from assigning without licence. The property had formerly belonged to a building society which had sold it in lots, each purchaser entering into restrictive covenants for the benefit of the owners of the other lots & the conveyance to the co. was expressly made subject to these covenants. E. agreed to sell his interest under the contract to R. R. at the time of the contract knew of the restrictive covenants but believed that the compulsory purchase by the railway co. had extinguished them. E. did not know of their existence. R.'s solrs. having discovered the existence of the covenants objected to the title. E.'s solrs. replied that the compulsory purchase had extinguished them. R. then refused to proceed with the purchase. E. brought a bill for specific performance but having afterwards resumed possession & built in order to avoid a forfeiture the action came on as an action for damages. E. had never obtained a licence to assign. Semble: R.'s objection on the ground that a licence to assign had not been obtained was not valid inasmuch as he had repudiated the contract before the time had arrived at which it was necessary for the vendor to produce a licence.—ELLIS v. ROGERS (1885), 29 Ch. D. 661; 53 L. T. 377, C. A.

2475. —.]—A purchaser of leasehold property, which the vendor cannot assign without a licence from his lessor, is entitled to damages, beyond return of the deposit, with interest & expenses, for loss of his bargain by reason of the vendor's omission to do his best to procure such licence.

A vendor agreed with a purchaser for the sale of a leasehold hotel, subject to the consent of the lessor being obtained to the assignment of the lease, & the purchaser paid a deposit on his purchase-money. The vendor died without having completed his contract, & the purchaser then brought an action against his legal personal representative for specific performance. Deft., being desirous of freeing the vendor's estate from the action, induced the lessor to refuse his consent to the assignment, which the lessor accordingly did, & the purchaser thus lost his bargain. Thereupon the purchaser amended his action by claiming damages & return of the deposit:—Held: pltf. was entitled, not only to the return of his deposit, with interest & costs of investigating title, but also to the damages he had sustained by the loss of his bargain through the omission of deft. to obtain the lessor's consent.—DAY v. SINGLETON, [1899] 2 Ch. 320; 68 L. J. Ch. 593; 81 L. T. 306; 48 W. R. 18; 43 Sol. Jo. 671, C. A.

2476. Covenant for payment of rent & performance of covenants—Sale in lots at apportioned rent.—Exors. sell by auction, in nine lots, sundry houses, which testator, during his life, held by lease under the Crown, & of which they, after his death, obtained a new lease, subject to one entire rent of £243; the printed particulars mention that the sale is by exors., & that the nine lots are all held under one lease, & at one entire reserved rent: Decreed, upon a bill filed by the vendors, & an answer, submitting to perform the contract upon an indemnity being given, that the purchaser of one lot, with respect to which the particulars stated that the apportioned rent for it was £52, was entitled to have an indemnity from the exors. against his liability for the whole reserved rent, & the breach of any of the covenants in the original lease. In such a case deft. is entitled to have his costs, up to & including the hearing.—WEST v. WILD (1824), 3 L. J. O. S. Ch. 15.

2477. — Sale by executor.—Under a contract for the assignment of a term, whether from the original lessee, or a mesne assignee, the purchaser must covenant for indemnity against payment of rent & performance of covenants; though he cannot have a covenant for the title from the assignor; as being an exor.; & also by express stipulation.—STAINES v. MORRIS (1812), 1 Ves. & B. 8; 35 E. R. 4, L. C.

Upon a sale by the trustees:—Held: the owner was entitled to the usual covenant of the purchaser for payment of the rent & performance of the covenants during the continuance of the lease.—MORLEY v. CLAVERING (1861), 30 Beav. 108; 7 Jur. N. S. 904; 9 W. R. 801; 54 E. R. 830.

WILLIAMS* (1823), 1 L. J. O. S. Ch. 151.

C. Sale in Lots.

2481. Some lots unsold—Vendors granting underleases in place of purchaser of largest lot.—Under the usual clause in conditions of sale by auction that "if any of the lots remain unsold, the vendors shall stand in the place of the purchaser of the largest part in value" to grant underleases. Some of the lots were unsold at the close of the auction, but were afterwards sold:—Held: this clause having come into operation the purchaser of each lot had a right to have this condition personally performed by the vendors: & it was not competent for them to assign their estates to any one of the purchasers & to compel the other purchasers to take their underleases from such purchasers.—BROWNE v. PAULL (1856), 26 L. T. O. S. 232; 2 Jur. N. S. 317.

2482. — Sale by trustees for sale.—Trustees for sale put up for auction five leasehold houses, held under one lease, in five separate lots, subject to a condition that if all the lots were sold at the present sale, the purchaser of the largest lot in value should execute an underlease for the whole of the term, less one day, to the respective purchasers of the other lots at an apportioned rent; but that if any of the lots remained unsold, which happened, "the vendors will grant to the purchaser or respective purchasers of the lot or lots sold such an underlease as aforesaid of each of the lots sold":—Held: a valid exercise of the trust for sale.—Re JUDD & POLAND & SKELCHER'S CONTRACT, [1906] 1 Ch. 684; 75 L. J. Ch. 403; 94 L. T. 595; 54 W. R. 513; 50 Sol. Jo. 389, C. A.

2483. — Consolidation of actions against separate purchasers.—Where different lots are sold at an auction for different sums the contracts are separate, both in law & fact. In a special action for refusing to adhere to the conditions of sale, pltf. cannot consolidate the two contracts.—JAMES & CHAPMAN v. SHORE (1816), 1 Stark. 426; 171 E. R. 518, N. P.

2492. ——— Expense of fine on new admittance—Occasioned by death of trustee for sale.]—Where, between the date of the contract & conveyance, any deterioration to the property occurs from accident, without the fault of either party, the loss falls on the purchaser. But where, without any improper neglect or delay, a purchase could not be completed for three years, & the death of a trustee for sale occasioned the expense of a fine on a new admittance, although by the contract the conveyance was to be at the expense of the purchaser:—Held: the extraordinary expense of the fine should be borne by the trust estate.—PARAMORE v. GREENSLADE (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 541; 23 L. J. Ch. 34; 22 L. T. O. S. 182; 17 Jur. 1064; 65 E. R. 237.

condition to that effect.—WEISS v. CRAFTS (1874), 6 P. R. 151.—CAN.

1. ——— Costs of deed & mortgage.]—Where in an administration suit property was sold upon credit, part of the purchase-money to be paid down & the balance secured by mtge., the sale being under the ordinary condition that the purchaser should prepare the conveyance at his own expense:—Held: the purchaser must bear the expense of both deed & mtge.—FAHNER v. RAN, 1 Ch. Ch. 246.—CAN.

m. Guardian's costs.]—The ct. will direct the costs of a guardian to be paid before granting a vesting order to the purchaser.—THORNE v. CHUTE (1867), 2 Ch. Ch. 221.—CAN.

2493. — Mortgagee concurring in conveyance—Production of deeds in mortgagee's possession.]—A vendor agreed to sell to a purchaser a certain house " & the inheritance thereof in fee simple in possession, free from incumbrances," except certain restrictive covenants; & the contract provided that the vendor, & "all other necessary parties if any," should make & execute to the purchaser a proper assurance, & that "such assurance, & every other act & thing required by the purchaser for perfecting or completing the vendor's title or otherwise," should be "prepared, obtained, made, & done at the expense of the purchaser." When the abstract of title was delivered, it appeared that the property was subject to a mtge. effected by the vendor. A summons was taken out by the vendor, under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), claiming, first, that the expenses of the production & inspection required by the purchaser for the verification of the abstract, of the deeds & documents in the abstract, referred to, which were in the possession of the vendor's mtgee., should be borne by the purchaser, pursuant to Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 3 (6); & secondly, that the expenses of the concurrence of the vendor's mtgee. in the conveyance to the purchaser, should be borne by the purchaser, pursuant to the terms of the contract:—Held: (1) under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 3 (6), the costs in question were expressly thrown upon the purchaser; & there was nothing in the terms of the contract to bring the case within the exception contained in Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 3 (9); (2) the costs of obtaining the concurrence of the mtgee. were clearly within the terms of the contract.—Re WILLET & ARGENTI (1889), 60 L. Annotation:—As to (2) Distd. Re Sander & Walford's Contract (1900), 83 L. T. 316.

2494. — Perusal & execution on behalf of mortgagee.]—A condition in a contract for sale of land that the assurance & every instrument required for completing the vendor's title or for any other purpose is to be "prepared" by & at the expense of the purchaser is not sufficiently wide to throw the costs of perusing & executing the conveyance on behalf of a mtgee. who concurred in the conveyance on the purchaser.—Re SANDER & WALFORD'S CONTRACT (1900), 83 L. T. 316.

Where a vendor refuses to complete a sale unless his solr.'s bill of costs is paid, the purchaser is entitled to taxation of the bill after payment.—Re PARKER TO GEORGE (1883), 32 W. R. 222.

2497. Under covenant to convey.]—If a man covenant to convey lands, it ought to be done at the charge of him that covenanteth to do it, except the contrary be agreed (per CUR.).—SHANN v. BILBY (1651), Sty. 280; 82 E. R. 710.

2498. Property sold subject to tenancies—Stamping of tenancy agreement.]—An agreement for the sale of freehold property provided that the property was sold subject to all tenancies, & also for apportionment of outgoings. Upon investigation of the title the purchaser discovered that an agreement with a yearly tenant of part of the property was unstamped, & required the vendor to stamp it before completion of the purchase. The vendor refused, & commenced proceedings for specific performance against the purchaser:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to have the agreement stamped at the vendor's expense.—COLEMAN v. COLEMAN (1898), 79 L. T. 66.

2499. Recovery by purchaser—Refusal to complete—Non-production of deeds promised to be produced.]—A purchaser at an auction cannot recover from the vendor the expenses of preparing the deeds of conveyance of the property, after he has refused to complete the purchase on account of the non-production of certain title deeds, though his attorney prepared the conveyances on the faith of a note written in the margin of the abstract by the vendor's solrs., stating that all the title deeds were examined by them on the original purchase, & that if it should be required, they would apply to the solr. for the original seller, in whose custody they were.—JARMAN v. EGELSTONE (1831), 5 C. & P. 172; 172 E. R. 926.

SUB-SECT. 2.—GETTING IN LEGAL ESTATE.

2500. Liability for costs—Costs of assignment from trustees.]—On the sale of an estate under an order of ct., one of the conditions provided that if the purchaser should require the conveyance of any outstanding legal estate which should not have been referred to or noticed in any of the abstracted deeds or documents, dated within the last thirty years, or of any outstanding term, all the expenses attending the getting in & conveyance of such estate should be borne by the purchaser. The estate in question had been assigned to trustees for a term of one thousand years, to secure the payment of a sum of money, the payment of which was afterwards provided for by order of ct. The person in whom the term was vested was a party to the deed of sale:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to have an assignment of the term; by the costs of which, not having been provided for by the conditions, were to be borne by the vendors.—STRONGE v. HAWKES (1856), 27 L. T. O. S. 150; 2 Jur. N. S. 388.

2501. — Duty of vendor to assist in getting in.]—By the conditions of sale of the property of a co. in the course of being wound up it was stipulated that the purchaser should accept a conveyance from the official manager under the powers of Winding-up Acts, 1848 & 1849, or one of them, without requiring the concurrence of any of the shareholders or any other person; but that, if the purchaser should consider the legal estate outstanding & should require a conveyance thereof, he should bear the expenses of obtaining such conveyance or conveyances as he might require & all other expenses incident to getting in such legal estate:—Held: on the general scope of the conditions, the purchaser was to be at the risk of getting in the legal estate, & the vendor was entitled to a specific performance on executing a conveyance of the equitable interest & undertaking, at the expense of the purchaser, to obtain all such conveyances & render all such assistance to the getting in of the legal estate as the purchaser should require & as the vendor was able to obtain or give.—*SHEERNESS WATERWORKS CO. 2502. — Costs of deducing title to outstanding estate.—The condition of sale provided that every deed or instrument which should be necessary for getting in any outstanding estate or interest or for completing the vendors' title should be prepared by & at the expense of the purchaser, who should also bear the expense of the doing of every act needed for perfecting the assurance by all parties other than the vendors:—Held: this condition did not relieve the vendors from the expense of deducing the title to the outstanding legal estate.—Re ADAMS' TRUSTEES' & FROST'S CONTRACT, [1907] 1 Ch. 695; 76 L. 2512. — Bankruptcy of principal.]—M. & J. were carrying on business in partnership. In Sept. 1869, J. gave to A. a power of attorney, authorising him to sell certain property of J., including a particular ship which was in fact partnership property, & then went abroad. In Nov. a mtge. deed was executed, by which, after reciting that the partners & each of them were indebted to S. in an amount not ascertained, M. & J. purported to convey to S. property which formed nearly the whole assets of the partnership, to secure all moneys which then were or might thereafter become due to S. from the partners or either of them. At the same time a bill of sale was executed, by which J., with the concurrence of M., purported to assign the ship to S. absolutely at a certain price, subject to the incumbrances thereon. These deeds were executed by M. & A. as attorney for J. In Apr. 1870, M. & J. were adjudged bkpts.; the act of bkpcy. by J. being his leaving England in Sept. 1869, with intent to defeat or delay his creditors:—Held: (1) the mtge. was wholly void as against the trustee, for that by it M., knowing the firm to be insolvent, attempted to make the partnership property a security for separate debts of himself & J., which was a fraud on the creditors of the partnership & an act of bkpcy.; (2) although a power of attorney is not for all purposes revoked by an act of bkpcy., & a sale under it to a purchaser who had no notice of an act of bkpcy. would be good as against the trustee under a subsequent adjudication, the bill of sale was void, for that S. knew facts which were sufficient to inform him that J. had committed an act of bkpcy., & he could not escape the consequence by saying that he had not drawn this inference from them.—Re DOUGLAS, Ex p. SNOWBALL (1872), 7 Ch. App. 534; 41 L. J. Bey. 49; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786, L. J.J.

2513. — Principal becoming alien enemy—Subsequent to execution of power.]—The fact that the principal is an alien enemy does not avoid a contract for the sale of land made by his attorney appointed by an irrevocable power of attorney before he had assumed enemy character.

Deft., who was of German nationality, had carried on business & owned a leasehold house in England. On May 20, 1915, under a power of attorney declared to be irrevocable for twelve months, he appointed a solr. to be his attorney to sell the leasehold house & execute the necessary deeds. On May 27, under a permit, he left England for Germany. On June 2, the house was bought by pltf. without knowledge of deft.'s nationality. On discovering the facts, he brought an action for a declaration that the contract was dissolved or void, & for a return of his deposit:—Held: although the inference should be drawn from the facts that deft. had returned to Germany, & was an alien enemy on June 2, neither the making nor the completion of the contract involved any intercourse with the enemy, as the irrevocable power of attorney to the solr. empowered him to convey the property & receive the purchase-money without communicating further with deft.—TINGLEY v. MÜLLER, [1917] 2 Ch. 144; 86 L. J. Ch. 625; 116 L. T. 482; 33 T. L. R. 369; 61 Sol. Jo. 478, C. A.

2519. — Reservation of right of way.]—From 1867 to 1902 farms called "White Lodge" & "Coxhill" had been owned by the same person, & during all this time the tenants of Coxhill had by leave, either asked for or not, used a way over White Lodge. In 1902 the owner of the farms agreed to sell White Lodge, the agreement stating that there were reserved "to the vendor, his heirs & assigns, the owners & occupiers for the time being of" Coxhill, "& their servants & others authorised by them, all rights of way hitherto exercised by them in respect of" Coxhill "over any portion of" White Lodge. The conveyance contained a similar reservation, but was not executed by the purchaser, who, however, took possession of White Lodge:—Held: the purchaser & his successors in title, taking with notice, were bound to give effect to the reservation.—MAY v. BELLEVILLE, [1905] 2 Ch. 605; 74 L. J. Ch. 678; 93 L. T. 241; 54 W. R. 12; 49 Sol. Jo. 651.

SUB-SECT. 3.—PURCHASE-MONEY.

A. In General.

2520. What is "purchase-money"—Whether bonus payable under Act of Parliament included.]—

Sect. 8.—Completion: Sub-sect. 3, A. & B. (a), (b) & (c) i. & ii.]

"Purchase-money" is the money which a purchaser pays to the vendor for the estate which he is buying, & does not include money paid by a third party to the vendor in order to induce him to sell to the purchaser at a certain price. Therefore the percentage or bonus payable out of the Irish Land Purchase Fund under Irish Land Act, 1903 (c. 37), s. 42, in certain cases, to a vendor of land in Ireland does not form part of the "purchase-money" of that land in the ordinary sense of that term.—*Re OLIVER, RAMSDEN v. B. Payment of Purchase-Money.

(a) In General.

2523. Payment to trustees—Personal attendance of trustees at completion—Or payment into joint account.]—On a sale of land by trustees for sale, the purchaser made a requisition, which was in accordance with the usual practice of conveyancers, that the vendors should, on completion, either attend personally to receive the purchase-money, or should give the purchasers a written authority to pay the purchase-money into some bank to their joint account; but the vendors' solrs. claimed to have the purchase-money paid to them on production of the executed conveyance with a receipt indorsed:—Held: as a general rule, under ordinary circumstances, trustees are not justified in authorising their solr., or other agent to receive purchase-money which ought to be paid to them personally; & therefore, the purchasers were entitled, as a matter of prudence, to insist on the requisition.—Re BELLAMY & METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1883), 24 Ch. 2524. ———.]—On a sale of land by trustees with power of sale the purchasers made a requisition that either the vendors should attend personally to receive the purchase-money, or the purchase-money should be paid into a bank to the joint account of the vendors under a written direction to be signed by them & given to the purchasers. The vendors refused to comply with the requisition, alleging that it was inconvenient so to do, & proposed that one of them should attend & receive the purchase-money under a written direction to that effect to be signed by them all:—Held: the purchasers were entitled to insist upon their requisition.—Re FLOWER & METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1884), 27 Ch. D. 592; 53 L. J. Ch. 955; 51 L. T. 257; 32 W. R. 1011.

2525. Set-off—Purchase-money & costs of specific performance action—Due in different rights.]—A purchaser obtained judgment for specific performance of a contract of sale against his vendor with costs. The vendor could only make title as administratrix of intestate. The vendor was entitled beneficially as next of kin of intestate to a portion of the proceeds of sale. On motion to retain the costs of the action out of the vendor's beneficial interest in the purchase-money:—Held: the ct., having no power in this case to administer the estate of intestate, pltf. purchaser could not bring into account all, or any part of an unascertained sum to which deft. might be beneficially entitled in the administration of intestate's estate as against the purchase-money which was due to deft. in her representative capacity.—PHILLIPS v. HOWELL, [1901] 2 Ch. 773; 71 L. J. Ch. 13; 85 L. T. 777; 50 W. R. 73; 46 Sol. Jo. 12.

Besides L.'s mtge., there were equitable charges in the hands of a second & third incumbrancer. On the same day, Saturday Aug. 4, O. handed to T. a cheque, drawn by the firm of which he was partner, upon their private bankers, for the amount of the purchase. Afterwards, fearing that the insurance might not have been paid, or that interest on L.'s mtge. might be in arrear, O. stopped payment of the cheque before the following Monday morning. On Aug. 8, however, O. was induced to withdraw his countermand, & the money was paid on the same day. On the day before, Aug. 7, O. had been made acquainted with the existence of the second & third incumbrances. The bill was filed by the third incumbrancer, praying to be allowed to redeem the first & second, & that O. might redeem him. Pltf. contended that the purchase was not

P. became the purchaser from N. of a piece of land, the purchase-money to be paid in the years 1852 & 1855, as mentioned in the agreement. N. retained the title deeds of the land, & in 1851 deposited them with pltf. to secure the payment of a sum then advanced. Between deft., P. & N. there were various cash dealings, & in 1848 the amount due by P. in respect of the purchase-money, etc., was, by means of the money due to him, reduced. The accounts between the parties continued unsettled, & no appropriation of the balance due to P. was made by him by way of satisfaction of the residue of the purchase-money due to N., who in Dec. 1855, was adjudicated bkpt. The evidence as to when P. received notice of pltf.'s equitable mtge. was conflicting:—Held: pltf. was entitled to a decree against P. to the extent of the equitable interest which N. had in the land, no appropriation of the debt due to P. having been made before he had notice of the equitable lien of pltf.—*RAYNE v. Periodical payments were also made by the purchaser to the assignee to be applied for a specific purpose. There was a failure of consideration on the part of the vendor which would have entitled the purchaser to repayment from him:—Held: the purchaser was not entitled to repayment from the assignee of the money paid by common consent or of the periodical payments in so far as they were in fact appropriated to the specified purpose.—*MACKUSICK v. Trustees of real estate with a power to sell & give receipts, sold the estate. The purchasers required that the vendors should attend in person to receive the purchase-money, or should authorise the purchaser to pay it into a bank to the joint account of the vendors. The vendors insisted that the money should be paid to their solr. on his producing the conveyance duly executed. They gave no special reason why the money should be paid to the solr., but relied 2535. ——— What amounts to production — Having deed in office not sufficient.—A solr. producing a deed containing a receipt must, in order to discharge a person paying him, be acting for the person sought to be charged, & having the deed in his office is not equivalent to production of it.

In my opinion that refers to a solr. acting in some way for the party sought to be charged, & does not mean that where a mtgor. has no solr. acting for him, the solr. of the mtgee. can, by producing the deed to the mtgee., give a discharge on the mtgors.' behalf (NORTH, J.).—*DAY v. That proposition seems to be sound, for, if it were not so, it is obvious that the person to whom the deed is produced might be put in the very awkward position of having to choose between the risk of losing his money, & the risk of having to pay the costs of an action for specific performance, if the ct. should hold that he ought to have accepted the deed produced by the solr. as giving authority for payment to the solr. 2538. ——— Under power of attorney—On behalf of trustee.—On Sept. 14, 1892, vendors contracted to sell a piece of freehold land subject to the condition, that "if from any cause whatever other than the wilful default of the vendors" the purchase should not be completed by the day fixed for completion, the purchaser should pay interest on the purchase-money until completion. The property was subject to a mortgage to two trustees, one of whom, P., a solr., had gone abroad before the date of the contract, having given to his partner a general power of attorney, authorising him to execute deeds & transfer any property held by P. as trustee or mtgee. The vendors knew that it would be difficult to communicate with P., but, relying on the sufficiency of the power of attorney, they fixed Nov. 10, 1892, for the completion of the purchase. The purchaser, however, declined to complete without a conveyance from P. himself, alleging that, notwithstanding Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 2, there was no person to whom the mortgage money could safely be paid. A conveyance from P. was ultimately obtained; but owing to the delay thus caused the purchase was not completed until Mar. 1, 1893, & the vendors claimed interest on the purchase-money from Nov. 10, 1892:—Held: (1) the case was not within Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 2, & the purchaser was justified in refusing to complete without a release from P.; & (2), the delay in completion was attributable to the wilful default of the vendors, & they were not entitled to any interest on the purchase-money.

I have no doubt myself that a trustee can execute a deed by an attorney & can empower that attorney to receive, or join in receiving trust money, & that s. 2 of Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 2, will protect a purchaser in paying money to a person so authorised to act. But the power of attorney executed by P. in 1890 had no reference whatever to this particular transaction & was as regards all trust matters, a delegation of his duty to his various cestuis que trust (LINDLEY, L.J.).—Re HETLING & MERTON'S CONTRACT, [1893] 3 Ch. 269; 62 L. The defence set up by the mtgees. being that the administrator had no right to redeem, on the ground that the original exor. had assented to a bequest made by testator of the property, the administrator refused to prosecute the suit, or to permit the purchaser to do so. A bill was then filed by the purchaser against the administrator to compel him to put him, the purchaser, in a situation to prosecute the suit against the mtgees., & it was ordered, on the application of pltf. for leave to prosecute that suit, etc., that pltf. should be at liberty to pay his purchase-money into ct.; & that deft. should concur in paying the deposit into ct., & should execute an assignment to pltf.; & that deft. should dismiss the bill in the suit to redeem, at his own expense; & pltf. should be at liberty to institute a suit against the mtgees. to redeem them.—*BIRCH v. It appeared that the father's will did not give a tenant for life or in tail any power of leasing, selling, or exchanging; but gave trustees full power to sell & exchange the hereditaments therein comprised, & to give receipts for the purchase-money:—Held: tenant for life in possession of the estate devised by testatrix had the same powers of selling & exchanging that estate as were by the father's will given to the trustees, but such powers did not extend to giving receipts.

Semble, the difficulties which might be met with in exercising such power of sale in the absence of a power to give receipts, might be removed by paying the money into ct. under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96; & upon such payment, the purchaser might safely complete.—*Cox v. Receipt of one trustee only.]—Lands devised to three trustees, upon trust for sale, were sold & the purchase-money paid to one of them, who was a solr., & acted in the matter of the sale as solr. for himself & the other trustees. The money having been retained by him & lost after his decease:—Held: it must be taken to have been received by him not in his capacity of solr., it being no part of his duty in that capacity to receive it, but in his capacity of trustee; & the survivor of the three could not, upon a common decree for an account, be held liable for its loss.—Re FRYER, MARTINDALE v. PICQUOT (1857), 3 K. & J. 317; 26 L. J. Ch. 398; 29 L. T. O. S. 86; 3 Jur. N. S. 485; 5 W. R. 552; 69 E. R. 1129.

The money having been lost to the estate by the insolvency & death of the trustee to whom it was paid:—Held: the receipt of one trustee only, though also an exor., was not a sufficient discharge to the solrs. for the money which they had received by the authority of the two, & they were personally liable to make good the loss which had resulted to the trust estate from such improper payment.—*LEE v. 2561. Receipt by all—Payment to one.]—Trustees with a power to sell, & to invest the proceeds in Govt. or real securities, sold the estate, & received only part of the purchase-money, but executed a conveyance to the purchaser, on the back of which was indorsed a receipt for the whole sum, which was signed by them all. This deed, & the other title-deeds, they retained as a security for the unpaid purchase-money with interest, & they entered into a written agreement with the purchaser that the deeds should remain with them as such security, & that he should, if required, execute a proper mtge. This agreement was signed by the purchaser, & by the trustee in whose custody the deeds were placed. Eight years afterwards the purchaser paid the principal & interest of his debt to this trustee, & received from him the deeds, including the conveyance with the receipt indorsed:—Held: by such payment the purchaser did not discharge himself of his liability incurred by participation in the breach of trust, & the trustee who received the money having misapplied it & absconded, the purchaser was made to pay it over again.—*WEBB v. D. Application of Purchase-Money.

(a) In General.

2562. Whether vendor bound to apply in payment of incumbrances.]—It is not a rule of equity that, upon the purchase of property, subject to incumbrances, for its full value, the vendor is bound to apply the purchase-money in payment of the incumbrances according to their priorities. Such a duty can only be the result of express agreement, or of a contract to be implied from the circumstances of the case.—A.-G. v. COX, PEARCE v. A.-G. (1850), 3 H. L. Cas. 240; 10 E. R. 93, H. 2584. What must be registered—Vendor's lien.]

—A vendor of land in a register county, part of whose purchase-money remains unpaid, is under no obligation to register a memorial of the vendor's lien, but is entitled to rely on his equitable lien against sub-purchasers who have notice of it actual or constructive. Land belonging to the trustees of a charity, situated in the West Riding of Yorkshire, was sold by the trustees to R. & W., who were estate agents, & bought the land with the intention of selling it in lots for building purposes. Part of the purchase-money remained unpaid, & the vendors retained the deed of conveyance in their possession, but, at the request of the purchasers, the vendors' solr. registered a memorial of it in the West Riding registry. The vendors took no written security for their unpaid purchase-money, but relied on their equitable lien. R. & W. sold the land again in lots. P., one of the sub-purchasers, who took a mtge. on a small lot, made no inquiries himself, but left it, as he said, to R. & W. to "manage the business" for him, & they prepared the conveyance to him. The original vendors having brought an action to enforce their lien for the unpaid purchase-money against some of the sub-purchasers:—Held: there was no obligation on the original vendors to register a memorial of the vendor's lien.—*KETTLEWELL v. 2577. — Deeds merely collateral to title—Inspection by purchaser—Delivery of attested copies.]—(1) E. K., a tenant for life under a settlement, had a power to release the settled estates from charges, & to substitute other lands, & subject them to the charges, with the consent of the two trustees of the settlement, "to be signified by some deed to be duly executed by them respectively, & not otherwise." E. K. contracted to sell part of the settled estates called M. to O., & he conveyed the same to him by deed, to which the two trustees were made parties, for the purpose of signifying their consent to the charges being transferred to other lands in exoneration of M. In fact, this deed was executed by one trustee, under a power of attorney, dated six weeks after the date of the deed, & by the other trustee nine months after the same date. O. contracted to sell the land called M. to H., who objected to the title on the ground that the power of substitution in the settlement was not well exercised. O. filed a bill to enforce specific performance, & produced an affidavit showing that both the trustees had seen the draft of the deed before its execution, & were acquainted with & had consented to its contents:—Held: the due execution of the power had been sufficiently shown, & the purchaser must accept the title.

(2) H., the purchaser, also objected that the vendor did not hand over three of the title-deeds, nor offer to covenant to produce them, but the ct. held that, as in this case the deeds in question were only collateral to the title, & as the purchaser had inspected the three deeds, & had been furnished with attested copies of two of them, & had had an undertaking that an attested copy of the third should be produced, he must complete the purchase.—OFFEN v. Agreement to deliver to purchaser—Covenant for production—“Proper” & “sufficient” production.]—An agreement on the sale of an estate that the title deeds should be delivered to the purchaser on the completion of the contract; but, as the deeds related also to other property belonging to the vendors, the purchasers should enter into, or procure to be entered into, one or more proper & sufficient covenant or covenants with the vendors for the production & delivery of copies of such deeds. The purchasers were trustees, & entered into the contract in pursuance of the directions in the will of their testator for the investment of his personal estate in the purchase of lands, to be settled to certain uses creating estates for life, with remainder over in strict settlement. The estate was conveyed by the vendors to the purchasers to the uses declared by the will of their testator:—Held: the agreement to enter into a proper & sufficient covenant for the production of the deeds did not mean that the vendors should be entitled to a covenant which would secure to them their production at all times & under all circumstances; the word “sufficient” was connected with the word “proper”; the extent & sufficiency of the covenant must in a great degree depend on the mode in which the conveyance was taken; releasees to uses do not stand in a worse position than trustees, who, according to the ordinary rule of the ct., are required to covenant for their own acts only; & the ct. would not compel the purchasers, who were only releasees to uses, especially after the uses were executed by the statute, to enter into such covenants.—ONSLow v. LONDESBOURGH (LORD) (1852), 10 Hare, 67; 68 E. R. 812.

2588. ——— Meaning of “part of estate”—Estate in land.]—Above rule that “where the vendor retains any part of an estate to which any documents of title relate he shall be entitled to retain such documents”:—Held: to apply only to land, including leaseholds.

When a mtge. comprised land & policies of insurance on the life of the mtgor.:—Held: on a sale of the land by the mtgee., he retaining the policies, the purchaser was entitled to have the mtge. deed delivered to him.

Apart from above Act, it is clear that the right to the deed would go with the land. . . . Above rule when it speaks of the vendor retaining part of an estate clearly refers to part of an estate in land, that is, land with the enlarged meaning given to the word by Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), s. 3, namely a freehold, copyhold or leasehold estate in land. In the present case the vendor does not retain any part of such an estate, & therefore he is not entitled to retain the mtge. deed. The deed must be delivered to the purchaser, & she must give the vendor the acknowledgment prescribed by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 9 (NORTH, J.).—Re WILLIAMS & NEWCASTLE'S (DUCHESS) CONTRACT, [1897] 2 Ch. 144; *sub nom. 2593. Right of purchaser—Sale by assignees of bankrupt—Limited to continuance as assignees.]—Where title deeds cannot be delivered, assignees must, like any other vendor, give attested copies of them at the expense of the estate; but their covenant, for the production of the deeds, should be confined to the time of their continuance as assignees (LORD ELDON, C.).—Re LEICESTER, Ex p. STUART (1815), 2 Rose, 215, L. C.

2594. — Deeds not in possession or power of vendor.]—(1) The right of a purchaser to a covenant for the production of documents constituting part of his title does not extend to copies of court rolls or indentures of bargain & sale enrolled, unless they are in the possession or power of the vendor.

(2) A purchaser is not entitled as a matter of course to a covenant for the production of all documents contained in the abstract of title, which are not delivered to him, but only of those which are necessary to make out a good sixty years' title.—COOPER v. EMERY (1844), 1 Ph. 388; 13 L. J. Ch. 275; 2 L. T. O. S. 437; 8 Jur. 181; 41 E. R. 679, L. C.

2595. ——By conditions of a sale of land, it was stipulated that the vendors should within ten days deliver an abstract of title, & should not be required to produce any deeds not in their possession; & that all deeds of covenant for production of any deed, etc., whether referred to in the abstract or not, which the purchaser should require for verifying the abstract, or for any other purpose, & other evidence which, but for the condition, might be required to prove anything whatsoever, also all searches & inquiries for the purpose of ascertaining where such deed, etc., or evidence was to be found, & expenses incidental thereto, should "be respectively paid, made, searched for & obtained by & at the expense of the purchaser requiring the same":—Held: the vendor was not bound to procure covenants for production from parties holding deeds referred to in the abstract & not in the hands of the vendors.—GABRIEL v. SMITH (1851), 16 Q. B. 847; 20 L. J. Q. B. 386; 17 L. T. O. S. 61; 15 Jur. 1124; 117 E. R. 1107.

2597. Costs of procuring covenant.]—The costs of covenants to produce title deeds which cannot be delivered up fall, by the practice of conveyancers, on vendors; yet where, by the conditions of sale of property, in lots, under an order of the ct., provision was made for the largest purchaser to have the deeds, & to covenant to produce them, or give copies thereof, to the purchasers of smaller lots, without reference to the manner in which the costs were to be paid, each purchaser, & not the estate, was ordered to bear his own costs of such covenants.—*STRONG v. 2601. Whether running with land—Necessity for privity of estate.]—If mtgor. & mtgee. make a lease, in which the covenants for the rent & repairs are only with the mtgor. & his assigns, the assignee of the mtgee. cannot maintain an action for the breach of these covenants, because they are collateral to his grantor's interest in the land, & therefore do not run with it.

If tenant for a term of years lease for a less term, & assign his reversion, & the assignee take a conveyance of the fee by which his former reversionary interest is merged, the covenants incident to that reversionary interest are thereby extinguished.

It is not sufficient that a covenant is concerning the land, but, in order to make it run with the land, there must be a privity of estate between the covenanting parties (KENYON, C.J.).—WEBB v. RUSSELL (1789), 3 Term Rep. 393; 100 E. R. 639.

2602. Covenantee must be interested in neighbouring land.]—An owner of land, deriving title under a person who has entered into a restrictive covenant concerning the land, which covenant does not run with the land at law, is not bound in equity by the covenant even if he took the land with notice of its existence, if the covenantee is not in possession of or interested in land for the benefit of which the covenant was entered into.

The owner of certain land in the county of London applied to pltf.s., the London County Council, under London Building Act, 1891 (c. cexiii), s. 7, for their sanction to his laying out a new street on the land. Pltf.s. agreed to give their sanction on condition that the owner entered into a covenant not to build on a plot of land which lay across the end of the proposed street, so as to afford facilities for the continuation of the proposed street. The owner accordingly executed a deed whereby he covenanted with pltf.s. for himself, his heirs & assigns, & other the persons claiming under him, & so far as practicable to bind the land into whosoever hands same might come, not to erect or cause or permit to be erected upon the plot any building, structure, or other erection without the pltf.s.' consent. Pltf.s. did not possess nor were they interested in any neighbouring land for the benefit of which the covenant was imposed. It was admitted that the covenant did not run with the land at law. The owner subsequently sold the plot to deft. who had notice of the restrictive covenant. Deft. proceeded to build houses upon the land without pltf.s.' consent:—Held: pltf.s.' were not entitled 2609. Whether runs with land—Covenants concerning railways—To stop trains at station.—Pltfs. had constructed a railway which joined defts.' railway & also the G. W. Ry.: & by their Act, if they abandoned any part of the railway, or if after its completion it ceased to be used for three years, then the land purchased under the Act was to revert to the owners of the adjoining lands. An agreement was entered into between pltfs. & the G. W. Ry. co., by which the latter covenanted to construct a station at the point of junction of the two railways, & to stop their trains at this station. An Act of Parliament was obtained, which empowered pltfs. to lease to defts. their railway, stations, etc., & all their rights, powers, & privileges in relation thereto. A lease was accordingly executed, in which there was a covenant that defts. should "efficiently work & repair the railway & works demised, & indemnify pltfs. against all liabilities, loss, charges & expenses, claims & demands, whether incurred or sustained in consequence of not working, or in any manner connected with the working of the said railway & works." An action was brought upon this covenant, in which the issue raised was, whether

defts. had efficiently worked the railway or not :—Held : rights of plffs., under the agreement with the G. W. 2610. — — — — —.]—A "first class station" means a station at which all trains other than express, mail, or special trains are in the habit of stopping.

Where, therefore, a railway co. had taken land with respect to which there was a covenant existing "that the land should for ever thereafter be used as a goods depôt, & as a first class station for taking up & setting down passengers travelling along the co.'s line of railway"; & the co. had only allowed third class or merely local trains to be advertised to stop at the station built on the land, & there was no goods depôt provided :—Held : the co. was bound by the covenant; & an injunction granted to restrain them from allowing the ordinary fast trains to pass the station.—*FLOOD v. By a deed in 1823 W. assigned all his interest in the box to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, & pltf. was the present trustee under that deed. A subsequent assignee of the lease, deft. L., took a renewal lease, settled by one of the masters in a suit, of the theatre in 1845, & the new lease empowered L. to dispose absolutely of forty-one boxes, to be selected by him, but it contained no reservation of the box 124. The lease contained a power of re-entry by the lessor, if L. disposed of more than forty-one boxes. L. accordingly selected & disposed of forty-one boxes, not including No. 124. In 1856 L. assigned the lease to the other deft., but he retained some interest therein & continued to conduct the theatre. Pltf. filed his bill, asserting his right to the box in question, or to a compensation in money; defts. resisted the claim, on the ground that having already disposed of forty-one boxes, they should, by appropriating another, forfeit their lease. The judge decided that pltf. was entitled to the decree asked, & granted an injunction to restrain defts. from preventing pltf.'s enjoyment of the box. Both defts. appealed from this decree :—Held : the pltf. was entitled to the relief prayed, & a declaration was made that he was entitled in equity to the reservation mentioned.—*HELLING v. —Lands situated below the level of the sea in Broomhill Level, Guildford Level, & Walland Marsh, were, previously to 1794, held in undivided shares. In that year these lands were partitioned by a deed containing a covenant that the expense of keeping & maintaining the walls & gutts of & belonging to the lands thereby divided, should be borne by the owners thereof & should be payable out of the said lands by an acre-scut. Declaration that defts. were liable to contribute to the repair of a sea wall along the sea boundary of Broomhill Level, with consequential relief, although defts. were also liable to contribute to the maintenance of sea walls along the boundaries of the levels in which their lands were situated. Seemle : the covenant was one which would run with the land, although the assigns of the covenantors were not named.—*MORLAND v. P. in fee for £100, & G. P. covenanted with the co. that he, his heirs or assigns, would at any time thereafter whenever the land might be required for the railway or works of the co., & whenever thereunto requested by the co. on a six calendar months' notice, & upon receiving £100, reconvey the land to the co. In 1879 deft. purchased the land from G. P.'s heir, with notice of the above covenant. In 1880 the co. gave deft. notice to reconvey the land, & upon his refusal to do so this action was brought for specific performance of the covenant. The co. had power in 1865 by their special Act to purchase land by agreement, though not compulsorily, & that power was extended to the present time by subsequent Acts :—Held : (1) the covenant in the deed of 1865 reserved to the co. an interest in the land, & the sale was ultra vires & void, for under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 127, land sold by a co. as superfluous land must be sold absolutely without reserving any interest to the co.; (2) as the covenant gave to the co. an executory interest in land to arise on an event which might occur after the period allowed by the rules as to remoteness, it was invalid on the ground of remoteness; (3) the doctrine of Tulk v. Moxhay, No. 2667, post, only applies to restrictive covenants & not to covenants to do acts relating to the land.—LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. v. GOMM (1882), 20 Ch. D. 562; 51 L. J. It was further provided that the expression "Firelighter co." should, where the context so admitted, include their assigns. In Jan. 1905, the Firelighter co. passed a winding-up resolution, & appointed a liquidator, & thereafter the whole assets of that co., including the benefit of the covenants in the agreement of Mar. 24, 1903, were assigned to Quicklit, Ltd. The Firelighter co. had not been dissolved. In 1908 the interests of Quicklit, Ltd., in the covenant passed to the Brith Oil co. Quicklit, Ltd., had been dissolved. The footbridge had not been erected :—Held : the covenant in the agreement of March 24, 1903, to erect a footbridge was a covenant which ran with the land & the benefit of it was assignable.—HUBBARD v. WELDON (1909), 25 T. L. R. 356.

2620. — — —.—In 1777 an Act of Parliament was passed for making a canal. It incorporated a co. by name of the co. of Proprietors of the Basingstoke Canal Navigation, authorised them to construct the canal, & make bye-laws, demand tolls, & acquire land. All persons were to have the right to use the canal on payment of tolls. The co. were to make & maintain bridges. Throughout the Act in conferring rights or imposing obligations on the co. the words "their successors & assigns" were added. The canal was made & navigation carried on till 1866, when a winding-up order was made. In 1874 the liquidator with the sanction of the judge sold the canal to S. A. The word "undertaking" was not used in the conveyance, but possession was taken, & tolls levied & received. In 1878 the co. was dissolved by an order of the ct. S. A. sold various portions of the land, & the last purchaser of the canal & undertaking was the L. & S. W. Canal, Ltd., which executed a mortgage thereof to W. Carter. The canal bridges fell into disrepair, &

the Woking Urban District Council obtained an Act of Parliament in 1911 which authorised them to do the repairs & recover the costs from "the co." :—Held: the co. had no power to assign their undertaking; nothing passed to S. A. by the conveyance of 1874, on the dissolution the land of the co. reverted to the original grantors, & they having made no claim to it their right of entry had been barred by Stat. Limitations; S. A. had thus acquired the legal fee simple in the canal free from any of the obligations or rights of the co.; the L. & S. W. Canal, Ltd., were owners of the canal, but were not bound to keep it up or do repairs, & could not demand tolls; the Act of 1911 did not impose any fresh liability; & no liability attached upon either the L. & S. W. Canal, Ltd., or Carter.—Re WOKING URBAN COUNCIL (BASINGSTOKE CANAL) ACT, 1911, [1914] 1 Ch. 300; 83 L. J. Ch. 201; 110 L. T. 40; 78 J. P. 81; 30 T. L. R. 135; 12 L. G. R. 214, C. A.

2623. — — — Against assignee of purchaser.—In 1873, the L. L. Railway Act, 1892, transferred the undertaking of the L. co. to the C. co., "subject to the contracts, obligations, debts, & liabilities" of the L. co. By the same Act provision was made for the dissolution of the L. co., & "claims & demands" not made within a certain time, & unknown to them, were to be barred. Ptff. made no claim under this sect., but sued both cos. for specific performance of the covenants which remained unperformed, & damages:—Held: ptff. was entitled to specific performance of all the covenants against the C. co.—*FORTESCUE v. B. Personal Covenants.

2624. On whom binding—Covenant by vendor in relation to adjoining land.—Two vendors, in 1883, sold Verulam House for use as a fever hospital, & each of them, for herself & himself, covenanted with the purchaser that she or he would not, either alone or jointly with any other persons, commence or prosecute any proceedings for the purpose of preventing the house from being used by convalescent fever or other patients. Verulam House was accordingly opened as a fever hospital. Afterwards, in 1884, the same vendors sold the adjoining property to ptff. who, though aware that Verulam House was then opened as a fever hospital, had no notice of the covenant. In an action to rescind the contract on the ground that ptff. would be bound by the covenant:—Held: the covenant was a personal covenant on the part of the vendors only, & would not in any way affect ptff. & specific performance was decreed.—*GROVES v. 2625. — Covenant restricting right of building — Not expressed as binding on assignees.—Certain freehold property, described as all that messuage or dwelling-house, with the buildings, yards, & premises, late in the occupation of F., & containing 1,372 square yards, was put up for sale by auction subject to conditions of sale, one of which provided that if any error or misstatement or omission in the posters, plans, or particulars should be discovered, the same should not annul the sale, but, if pointed out before completion of the purchase, compensation should be allowed. The particulars & conditions contained no notice of the property being subject to any restrictive covenants. The purchaser objected to the title on two grounds: First, that the conveyance of the property to a predecessor in title of the vendors contained a restrictive covenant by him against building. This covenant in the conveyance was not expressed as binding on his assigns, whereas other covenants entered into by him were so expressed. Secondly, that the particulars had misdescribed the property in stating that it contained 1,372 square yards, whereas in fact it only contained 1,033:—Held: the restrictive covenant was a personal covenant, & did not run with the land, & would not prevent the purchaser from building as he liked.—*Re FAWCETT & HOLMES' CONTRACT (1889), 42 Ch. 2630. ————Pltfs., in 1867, bought part of a building estate from trustees for sale, subject to certain restrictive conditions as to building, which provided that all the plots were sold subject to the general stipulations contained in a deed poll which had been, or was intended to be, executed by the trustees & would be executed by each of the purchasers. The deed poll was executed by the trustees & pltfs., & some sixty-six purchasers in all, from time to time down to 1889. It recited that it was intended to be a part of all future contracts for sale that the purchasers respectively should execute the deed & should thereby be severally bound by the stipulations thereof, & it witnessed that each of the purchasers covenanted with the other purchasers & the trustees to build only one house or two semi-detached houses on each lot. The trustees had recently divided fifteen lots remaining unsold into 101 lots, & offered them for sale for the erection of continuous rows of artisans' cottages, & pltfs. brought this action to restrain them from so doing:—Held: the trustees were bound either by actual covenant or by implied agreement not to deal with the land in violation of the scheme, & an injunction was granted restraining them from authorising any purchaser from them to build more than one house or two semi-detached houses contrary to the terms of the scheme.—*MACKENZIE v. 2631. ———— Purchaser's right to have covenants inserted in conveyances.]—Where a vendor puts up building land for sale in lots subject to restrictive covenants, it is a question of fact to be deduced from all the circumstances of the case whether the restrictions are merely matters of agreement between him & his vendees, imposed for his own benefit & protection, or are meant by him & understood by the buyers to be for the common advantage of the several purchasers; & the retainer by the vendor of some part of the property is only an element, though an important one, to be taken into consideration with other circumstances in ascertaining the intention; for though the vendor may not part with his whole estate, there may be circumstances which show that the intention was that each purchaser should be entitled to enforce the restriction against the vendor himself as well as against purchasers.

A land co. put up freehold building sites for sale by auction in lots, subject to particulars & conditions of sale which, in the view of the ct., constituted an invitation to the public to come in & purchase on the footing that the whole of the property offered for sale was to be bound by one general law affecting the character of the buildings to be erected thereon. At the auction some of the lots were sold & some were not, & after the sale the vendors claimed the right to sell the unsold lots free from the restrictive covenants in case they desired to do so:—Held: a purchaser who had bought one of the lots sold at the auction, but had not completed his purchase, was entitled to the benefit of a contract by the vendors implied in the conditions of sale, that the vendors would, as to the lots unsold at the auction, observe stipulations similar to those which the purchasers of those lots, had they been sold, would have been bound to covenant to observe; & the purchaser was entitled to have such obligations of the vendors expressed in the conveyance to him of his lot.—Re BIRMINGHAM & DISTRICT LAND CO. & ALLDAY, [1893] 1 Ch. 342; 62 L. 2632. ———— Corporation selling with sanction of Treasury.]—In Mar. 1888, a municipal corpn. offered for sale by auction, in lots, some of their corporate land, subject to special conditions restricting the right of each purchaser to build on his lot. At the auction none of the lots were sold. In June, 1888, pltf. entered into a contract to purchase two of the lots, subject to the conditions. The proper steps were taken to obtain the approval of the Treasury, which is required by Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 30), ss. 108, 109, to enable a municipal corpn. to sell their corporate land; & that approval was given in the ordinary way by two Lords of the Treasury joining in the conveyance to pltf. The conveyance contained a covenant by pltf. in the terms of the restrictive conditions, but there was no reference to those conditions, or to the previous abortive sale. There was no covenant by the corporation binding them by the conditions as regarded the unsold lots, & the Treasury were not, before they gave their approval, informed that the corpn. would be liable to any such restriction. The corpn. afterwards contracted with the trustees of a church to sell to them two others of the lots, & authorised them to build on those lots in a manner inconsistent with the conditions:—Held: if the corpn. had been ordinary individuals, they would have been bound by the original building scheme, & they, & the trustees, who had purchased with notice of the scheme, must have been restrained from building or permitting building on the lots purchased by the trustees, in a manner inconsistent with the conditions, but the Treasury had only given their approval to what was to be found in the conveyance, & they had not sanctioned the disposition by the corpn. in favour of pltf. of any right over other land than that which was conveyed to him, & consequently that neither the corpn. nor the trustees could be restrained from violating the conditions.—*DAVIS v. 2633. Existence of scheme—Whether to be implied.]—If a vendor prepares a plan of a building estate showing lots with houses marked on them, & an intending purchaser is shown that plan, & his agreement with regard to a plot purchased by him happens to be on a printed form with written alterations, the purchaser is not entitled to assume that the whole estate is governed by a building scheme that each plot shall, without variation, be built on strictly in accordance with the indications on the plan, & shall of necessity be governed by the printed portions of the agreement.

V. & S. offered a landed estate, belonging to them, in plots as building sites at fee-farm rents. A plan, prepared originally for the approval of the local sanitary authority, showed the estate cut up into plots of even size, on each of which the ground plan of one house, & no other building, was delineated.

During negotiations for a conveyance of some of the plots, H. was shown a tracing of the plan, by reference to which he selected his plots, & was informed by the vendors that the houses were to be of a superior class, & worth at least £800 each, & that on certain plots pointed out the erection of stables would also be permitted.

H. signed an agreement to take conveyances of four plots the principal parts of which agreement were printed; & one of the printed clauses provided that the grantee should not erect on any plot any dwelling-house or building, other than a dwelling-house worth £800, except a greenhouse of a specified description.

H. erected a dwelling-house of the required value on each of his plots, & took a conveyance of each plot, by which he covenanted not to alter the external elevation of his buildings, & not to erect any other building except a greenhouse.

V. subsequently acquired the interest of S. in other plots, facing those of H., & erected thereon a billiard-room, conservatory, & stables as adjuncts to his own house; but his conveyance contained no restrictive covenant except that he would not erect any building without the approval of S., which he obtained before proceeding to build:—Held: H. had no cause of action in respect of the erection of the buildings of V.—TUCKER v. VOWLES, [1893] 1 Ch. 195; 62 L. J. Ch. 172; 67 L. T. 763; 41 W. R. 156; 3 R. 107.

2634. — Admissibility of evidence.—A vendor, the owner in fee of an estate, conveyed part of it to D., who, for himself, his exors., administrators, & assigns, entered into certain restrictive covenants with the vendor, his heirs & assigns. About the same time the vendor conveyed two other portions of the estate to two other purchasers, subject to restrictive covenants similar to D.'s covenants. The vendor subsequently sold the remainder of the estate in lots by auction subject to restrictive stipulations binding on each purchaser, similar to D.'s covenants. The auction sale plan showed the whole estate sold & unsold. An action was brought by the assigns of purchasers at the auction sale to enforce against a lessee of an assign of D. the covenants entered into by D. with the vendor. The benefit of these covenants had never been expressly assigned to the purchasers at the auction sale:—Held: there was a general building scheme affecting the whole estate; D. was not bound by it for want of reciprocity; but the plan & particulars of the auction sale raised an irresistible inference that the vendor intended the purchasers at that sale to have the benefit of D.'s covenants so that the purchasers at that sale could enforce D.'s covenants as assigns of the vendor.

Where a vendor sells land & retains other land & imposes on the purchaser a covenant, it becomes a question of fact what the effect of that is. That being a question of fact, it must be decided by the light of evidence as are all other questions of fact. But if you find that a building scheme exists, proof of that building scheme may be given. It is only a matter of evidence, & it is perfectly competent to prove by other evidence, if you can find it, whether or not the building scheme applies (COLLINS, L.J.).—*NALDER & COLLYER'S BREWERY CO., LTD. v. 2641. Rights of purchasers inter se.—S. purchased from comrs. by several conveyances the fee simple of several houses forming one block of buildings upon a site laid out in accordance with a building scheme, each conveyance containing a covenant by S. not to carry on or permit to be carried on upon the premises conveyed any trade or business, but to keep the house as a private dwelling-house only, & not to do or suffer to be done upon the premises conveyed anything which might grow to the annoyance of any person who might be or become the owner, tenant, or occupier of any part of the premises then or later belonging to the comrs. S. afterwards granted to resp. a lease of one of the houses containing a restrictive covenant of the same nature & a block plan of the houses. During the negotiations for the lease statements were made by S.'s solrs. to resp. whereby he became aware that similar restrictive covenants were contained in all the leases granted by S. of houses in that block & also became aware of the terms of the conveyances of resp.'s house from the comrs. to S.:—Held: although the statements made to resp. did not amount to a collateral contract with him as to the future management of the estate, resp. was from the nature of the transaction entitled to an injunction restraining S. from authorising any of the other houses in the block to be used for the purpose of trade.

This restriction was obviously for the benefit of all the lessees on the estate; they all had a common interest in maintaining the restriction. This community of interest necessarily, I think, requires & imports reciprocity of obligation (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—SPICER v. MARTIN (1888), 14 App. Cas. 12; 58 L. J. Ch. 309; 60 L. T. 546; 53 J. (b) *Reservation of Power to Vary.2643. Effect of reservation on liability of vendor.]

—Building land was sold in a number of lots, subject to certain conditions as to fencing, repairing the roads, & to restrictions as to the class of houses to be built. The conditions also provided that statements to this effect should be inserted in the conveyances. By condition 15, the vendor reserved the right of selling the unsold lots under different arrangements, “& either subject to or not subject to the stipulations as to fencing & other stipulations contained in the particulars or the conditions”:—Held: as to the unsold lots the vendor was subject to none of the restrictions.—*SIDNEY v. 2644. —.—A corpn. having acquired land to widen a street sold surplus land by auction under conditions requiring the purchasers to observe the bye-laws as to building.

The corpn. reserved the right to waive or alter any stipulations as to any land not sold at the sale or, with the consent of the purchaser, as to any land so sold. The corpn. consented to alter the plans of a purchaser so that the air space required by the byelaws was provided out of a square, & not out of land sold at the sale. The square was a cul de sac, but not separated by any bar from the highway. It had never been paved or repaired by the local authority:—Held: there was under the circumstances no building scheme which the corpn. was not at liberty to alter, & although a cul de sac may be a highway, no dedication of the square to the public had been proved, & the user proved was only that of private rights of way to the houses in the square.—*A.-G. & LONDON PROPERTY INVESTMENT TRUST, LTD. v. 2645. —.—Pltf. was the owner of a house built on a plot which formed part of an estate laid out by a building society in accordance with a scheme. On the sale of this plot by the society to pltf.'s predecessor in title, it was shown on a plan of the estate as bounded on one side by a vacant space, which, though not named in the plan as a road, had been in fact roughly made up by the society as a road. This road ran from a street on which pltf.'s house fronted to a level crossing on a railway over which there was a private right of way for the benefit of the owners of a field on the opposite side of the line. The building society having acquired the field & released the right of way, fenced, off the road & sold the site to deft.'s predecessor in title. All the plots on the building estate were conveyed subject to a condition reserving to the building society the power of allowing variation in the plans & conditions. In an action to restrain deft. from digging up the road on the ground that it was a violation of the building scheme, & that the road had been dedicated to the public by user:—Held: under the conditions the society had an absolute power to alter the building scheme by closing the road, & there was no sufficient evidence of user or dedication to entitle pltf. to succeed.—WHITEHOUSE v. HUGH, [1906] 2 Ch. 283; 75 L. J. Ch. 677; 95 L. T. 175; 22 T. L. R. 679; 50 Sol. Jo. 615, C. A.

2646. —.—A building society purchased the F. estate in 1860. A sale plan was then prepared, on which the estate was plotted out into lots, & the conditions which were to affect the different lots were printed. Among these were conditions that each purchaser should execute a deed of covenant for regulating building on his lot & securing performance of the conditions therein contained; & that no hotel should be built on any lot & no building used as such without the vendors' consent. At the end was a proviso that the vendors should have power to deal with any part of the estate not disposed of without reference to the restrictions. In Jan. 1861, the estate was conveyed to trustees for the building society.

A deed was then prepared, purporting to be made between the purchasers whose names were set out in the second schedule of the first part & the trustees of the second part. It contained covenants by the purchasers with each other & the trustees to observe the restrictions contained in the first schedule. These restrictions were the same as those on the sale plan. This document was engrossed, dated Jan. 16, 1861, & stamped, but it was never executed either by the trustees or any purchaser. A printed form of conveyance was prepared for the society which contained a covenant by the purchaser to observe & perform the restrictions & covenants contained in an indenture dated Jan. 16, 1861, & expressed to be made between the persons whose names were subscribed in the second schedule of the first part & the vendors of the second part. Defts. were owners of two lots conveyed to their predecessors in title by deeds in the printed form on Dec. 27, 1861, & Apr. 19, 1866, on which they had recently erected a building which they were using as an hotel. Pltfs. were the owners of three plots conveyed to their predecessor in title on Dec. 27, 1861, & brought this action to restrain defts. from carrying on the hotel. The several conveyances under which pltfs. & defts. claimed were executed by the vendors only, not by the purchasers:—Held: notwithstanding the reservation of a dispensing power to the vendors & the non-execution of the deed of covenant, there was a general building scheme for the benefit of the purchasers inter se as well as of the vendors, & the covenants could be enforced at the suit of pltfs.—ELLISTON v. REACHER, [1908] 2 Ch. 665; 78 L. J. Ch. 87; 99 L. T. 701, C. A.

2647. —.—W., the owner of an estate, laid it out for building subject to seventeen stipulations, of which the eighth provided that the houses to be erected on the estate should be of uniform elevation in accordance with drawings to be approved by “the vendor's” surveyor; the eleventh provided that no trade or business of any kind should be carried on upon any lot except those marked “shop lots”; & the sixteenth reserved to “the vendor” the right of allowing a departure from the stipulations in any one or more cases.

In 1895 W. sold & conveyed several lots of the estate, none of which were “shop lots,” to pltf. subject to seventeen scheduled stipulations, which were identical with the original stipulations, & pltf. covenanted to perform & observe the scheduled stipulations. In 1898 pltf. sold & conveyed six of the lots he had purchased to G. subject to seventeen stipulations scheduled to G.'s conveyance which were identical with the original stipulations, & G. covenanted to observe & perform the scheduled stipulations. In 1910 G.'s successors in title sold & conveyed one of the six lots to the predecessors in title of P. subject to the stipulations scheduled to the deeds of 1895 & 1898 so far as then subsisting.

W. was a party to the deed of 1910, & for valuable consideration released the lot thereby conveyed from the eighth stipulation with liberty to build on it as if it were a "shop lot," & in 1913 this lot was sold & conveyed to P., who with W.'s approval, built a motor garage upon it & his tenant commenced to carry on business there. In an action by pltf. against P. & his tenant, alleging that the word "vendor" in the stipulations scheduled to the conveyance of 1898 meant pltf. & not W., that defts. had without his, pltf.'s, consent committed a breach of the eighth & eleventh stipulations, & claiming an injunction:—Held: the word "vendor" in the stipulations scheduled to the conveyance of 1898 meant W. & not pltf.; & W. having under the sixteenth stipulation released defts.' land from the eleventh stipulation, pltf. had no cause of action.—*MAYNER v. D. Restrictive Covenants.

See Sub-sect. 4, post.

SUB-SECT. 4.—RESTRICTIVE COVENANTS.

A. In General.

2648. Covenant must be precise in terms.—Land was sold by the mtgees. of B., consisting of a circular plot, surrounded by a ring called the Park Drive. It was stipulated that if used for building, villas of a certain size were to be built; that the ground between the villas & the Park Drive should be laid out in lawn or pleasure grounds down to the Park Drive; that a footpath of the width of 15 feet should be laid out round the whole of the northern, southern & western boundaries of the land. The Park Drive round the circular piece belonged to B., the part outside had originally been his, but, with a small exception had been sold by him:—Held: the condition about the footpath was too vague to be enforced, & the purchaser was not bound to make it & could not be restrained from using the land in any way inconsistent with making it.—TAYLOR v. GILBERTSON (1854), 2 Drew. 391; 61 E. R. 770.

2649. —.]—An agreement not to erect "unseemly" buildings is too vague & indefinite to be capable of being enforced by the ct. as a permanent restraint upon the use of land.—MURRAY v. DUNN, [1907] A. C. 283; 97 L. T. 112, H. L.

2650. —.]—Land was conveyed to J., resp.'s predecessors in title, by a deed which contained the following clause: "under the declaration that it shall not be lawful to J. or his foresaids to sell or feu any part of the ground occupied as the lawn between the ground feued by me to W."—applt.'s predecessor in title, "& the present mansion house of E. park excepting" under certain conditions as to building on the land therein set out," which restriction shall also be a real burden affecting the lands. & shall operate as a servitude in favour of the W. & his foresaids in all time coming":—Held: the clause did not operate to prevent any singular successor from building as he pleased on any part of the ground, & in any case it was not sufficiently precise to create a real burden.—ANDERSON v. DICKIE (1915), 84 L. J. P. C. 219, H. L.

2651. —.]—When a landowner purports to impose restrictive obligations on the use of various portions of his land, after alienation, for the common benefit of himself & of the various purchasers inter se, there need be no mutual covenants if mutual obligations are clearly intended &, provided that the geographical area within which the mutual obligations are intended to operate can be ascertained with reasonable definiteness, a ct. of equity will in such a case give effect to the common intention. If no such geographical area is ascertainable, such restrictions will be unenforceable.—TORBAY HOTEL, LTD. v. JENKINS, [1927] 2 Ch. 225; 96 L. J. Ch. 415; 137 L. T. 248; 71 Sol. Jo. 471.

2653. —.]—Covenant to use land for railway station only.—By a special Act a railway co. were authorised to acquire certain land for the purpose of enlarging their stations " & for other purposes of & connected with their undertaking." Under this power the railway co. acquired the land by voluntary agreement & covenanted in their conveyance that they & their assigns would at all times hereafter use the land for a passenger station " & for no other purpose." Afterwards the railway co. contracted to sell part of the land that they did not require, & the purchaser required the covenant to be released:—Held: the covenant was ultra vires the railway co., & they could sell free from the restrictions contained in it.—*Re SOUTH EASTERN RY. 2654. Whether void for remoteness.—LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. v. GOMM, No. 2617, ante.

2655. Whether implied.—Grant to defts. of a piece of foreshore "to be by them used for the benefit of the public only for purposes of recreation & health":—Held: certain buildings contemplated would be a breach of such covenant.—WILLIAMSON v. SUNDERLAND CORPN. (1892), 9 T. L. R. 143.

2656. —.]—Building land described as adapted for shops & business premises was put up for sale by auction subject to a condition that the purchasers of certain specified lots should respectively covenant with the vendors to erect within a given time on each of the lots respectively purchased by them a shop & dwelling-house of a given minimum value, but the lots in question remained unsold:—Held: having regard to the absence of any express provision as to the maintenance of the contemplated buildings when erected as shops & dwelling-houses, no negative stipulation ought to be implied that nothing but shops & dwelling-houses should be erected on the lots in question; the vendors could not be restrained, at the instance of the purchaser of an adjoining lot, from erecting on the unsold lots a fire engine station of a value exceeding the aggregate value

2658. Mutually dependent covenants.]—The owner of certain marsh lands sold them in lots by auction, the conditions of sale providing that the purchaser of lot 19, on which there was a steam mill, should be bound for ever to keep the mill in an efficient state for draining the other lots, & that the purchasers of those lots should enter into covenants to pay a rentcharge of 4s. an acre, & to keep their ditches, dykes, & drains properly cleansed & scoured. Deft. purchased lot 19, & pltf.'s predecessor in title & other persons purchased the other lots. The purchasers executed a drainage deed, by which deft. covenanted that "while & so long as" pltf.'s predecessor in title should perform his covenants he would keep the mill in good condition & would, when requisite, work it for the purpose of drainage; & pltf.'s predecessor in title covenanted to keep his ditches, dykes, & drains properly cleansed & scoured & to pay the rentcharge to deft. Pltf. did not keep his ditches, etc., properly cleansed & scoured, & deft. did not work his mill for the purpose of keeping pltf.'s marshes from being flooded, when it was requisite that he should do so. In an action for damages for breach of deft.'s covenant to work the mill:—Held: the intention of the parties was that the covenants should be dependent covenants, & pltf. could not recover.—*KIDNER v. 2661. ———.]—Land was limited under a settlement to the joint appointment of two persons; & in default of such joint appointment upon certain trusts. A power of sale was also contained in the settlement to be exercised by the trustees, with consent of the tenant for life. The land was laid out for building purposes upon a scheme, with a condition that no building should be erected within 6 feet of a certain road. A. purchased a piece of the land in 1816, under the power of appointment, the agreement containing a stipulation against building within the prescribed limit, although in the conveyance actually executed the space was left in blank. B. purchased a piece of the land in 1853, under the power of sale, & covenanted against erecting any building within the prescribed limit. A. had in 1847, commenced building a wall, 5 feet high, within the limit, which he was now proceeding to carry higher:—Held: B. was entitled to an injunction to restrain A. from building this wall, the covenant entered into by A. with the donees of the power operating for the benefit of those in remainder & their assigns.—*CHILD v. 2662. ———.]—G. & C. having a power to appoint in fee simple over lands near a town, which stood limited, subject to such power of appointment, to G. & C. successively & in strict settlement, & there being also a power of sale over all the property, to be exercised at the request of G. & C. & the survivor, G. & C. appointed in 1845 a plot of land to deft. in fee, with a covenant by deft., his heirs & assigns, with G. & C., their heirs & assigns, not to build within — feet of a particular line. In the contract for sale, which preceded the conveyance, the distance was stated to be 6 feet. In 1853, C. having died, an adjoining plot, in a line with the first, from which it was separated by a narrow street, was conveyed, under the power of sale, by the direction of G., to pltf. in fee, under a like covenant not to build within 6 feet of the front line. In 1855 pltf. opened a window into the street which separated his plot from deft.'s plot, thereby commanding deft.'s front door. Deft. thereupon commenced raising a wall which he had already, before 1853, built to the height of 5 feet, intending now to raise it to 15 feet. It appeared that pltf. had built his own house so that the foundations, to the height of a foot from the ground, encroached on the distance of 6 feet mentioned in his own conveyance, & the ornamental work at his main door encroached 1 foot on the 6 feet. On a bill by pltf. to restrain the further raising the wall in question to 15 feet:—Held: the right to enforce in equity the benefit of a covenant affecting the enjoyment of land will pass to the alienee of that land, without being specifically mentioned in the instrument of alienation.—*CHILD v. Sect. 2.—Rights and liabilities in relation to covenants: Sub-sect. 4, B.]

2663. ——— Meaning of "assign."—Deft.'s predecessor in title purchased certain land, & covenanted for himself, his heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, with the vendors & their assigns, & with the owners of adjoining lots, their heirs & assigns, not to carry on a certain trade. Pltf. was lessee of one of such owners, & brought this action for an injunction to restrain deft. from committing a breach of the covenant:—Held: pltf. was an "assign" within the meaning of the covenant, & was entitled to the injunction.—TAITE v. GOSLING (1869), 11 Ch. D. 273; 48 L. J. Ch. 397; 40 L. T. 251; 43 J. P. 508; 27 W. R. 394.

2664. ——— ]—When the benefit of a restrictive covenant has been once clearly annexed to one piece of land, there is a presumption that it passes by an assignment of that land, & it may be said to run with the land in equity as well as at law, without proof of special bargain or representation on the assignment of the land. The covenant in such a case runs with the land because the assignee has purchased something which inhered in or was annexed to the land which he bought. The purchaser's ignorance of the existence of the covenant does not defeat the presumption, though it may be rebutted by proof of facts inconsistent with it.

The owners of building land & their mtgees. conveyed a plot of the land in fee to a purchaser, who entered into a covenant with the mtgors., but not with the mtgees., that no more than one messuage or dwelling-house should at any one time be erected or be standing on the plot, & that such messuage should be adapted for & used as & for a private residence only. The conveyance stated that the covenant was entered into with intent that it might so far as possible bind the premises thereby conveyed & every part thereof, into whosoever hands the same might come, & might enure to the benefit of the mtgees., their heirs & assigns, & others claiming under them to all or any of their lands adjoining or near to the premises.

The mtgors. afterwards conveyed another plot of land near to the first in fee to a purchaser who had no knowledge of the covenant entered into by the purchaser of the first plot:—Held: (1) assigns of the second plot could enforce the restrictive covenant against an assign of the first plot; (2) the erection on the first plot of a large block of buildings, which were to be occupied as residential flats, would be a breach of the covenant.

The covenant having been released by the mtgors., so far as they lawfully could, as regarded the number of houses to be erected, the purchaser's devisee covenanted with the mtgors. that every messuage to be erected on the land should be adapted for & used as & for a private residence only:—Held: the erection of the proposed building would be a breach of the covenant also.

An injunction was accordingly granted to restrain the assign of the first plot from erecting such a block of buildings upon it.

These [ordinary covenants for title] undoubtedly run with the land, & each purchaser of each portion of the land gets the benefit of the covenants so far as they relate to the land purchased by him (FARWELL, J.).—ROGERS v. ROSEGOOD, [1900] 2 Ch. 388; 69 L. J. Ch. 652; 83 L. T. 186; 48 W. R. 659; 16 T. L. R. 489; 41 Sol. Jo. 607, C. A.

2665. ——— ]—In order to establish the existence of a building scheme there must be definite reciprocal rights & obligations extending over a defined area.

If on a sale of part of an estate the purchaser covenants with the vendor, his heirs & assigns, not to deal with the purchased property in a particular way, a subsequent purchaser from the same vendor of another part of the estate does not take the benefit of the covenant unless he is an express assignee thereof, or unless the covenant is expressed to be for the benefit & protection of the particular parcel purchased by the subsequent purchaser. The benefit of a covenant capable of being annexed to land, but not expressed to be so annexed, either by the deed containing the covenant or by some subsequent instrument executed by the covenantor, does not pass as an incident of land on a subsequent conveyance.

By a deed dated in 1840 deft.'s predecessor in title bought a piece of land, part of an estate comprising about 64 acres on the outskirts of Liverpool, which was vested in trustees for sale, & for himself, his heirs & assigns, covenanted with the vendors, their heirs & assigns, to observe certain restrictions relating to building on the land purchased. The trustees subsequently sold other portions of the estate to the predecessors in title of pltf., who entered into similar restrictive covenants affecting the land purchased by them. There was nothing to show whether pltf.'s predecessors were aware of the existence of the covenants of 1840, & there was no reference to them in their conveyances. The trustees at intervals before & after 1840 sold other plots of the estate to various purchasers who entered into varying covenants of a like nature, & eventually the whole estate was disposed of & became a residential quarter. In an action by pltf. to restrain deft. from building in breach of the covenants contained in the deed of 1840:—Held: (1) pltf. had failed to establish the essential requisites of a building scheme, namely, definite reciprocal rights & obligations extending over a defined area; (2) inasmuch as the benefit of the covenants in the deed of 1840 was not expressly assigned to pltf.'s predecessors, nor so annexed to the land of which they were the assigns as to pass by mere conveyance, pltf. were not entitled to succeed.

If on a sale of part of an estate the purchaser covenants with the vendor, his heirs & assigns, not to deal with the purchased property in a particular way, a subsequent purchaser of part of the estate does not take the benefit of the covenant unless (a) he is an express assignee of the covenant, as distinct from assignee of the land, or (b) the restrictive covenants is expressed to be for the benefit & protection of the particular parcel purchased by the subsequent purchaser (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—REID v. BICKERSTAFF, [1909] 2 Ch. 305; 78 L. J. Ch. 753; 100 L. T. 952, C. A.

2669. — — — — — Non-disclosure ground for repudiating purchase.—On an open contract for the sale of freehold property the vendor supplied an abstract showing a title for twelve years, & alleged that the purchasers had notice at the date of the contract of his inability to give an absolute title; he also set up a waiver by the purchasers of their right to a full forty years' title by a letter written by the purchasers. Part of the property was subject to a restrictive covenant not to carry on any trade or business on the premises. When the purchasers made inquiries as to restrictive covenants, they were informed that such covenants did not affect the user of the property for business purposes.—Held: if it is shown on the signing of a contract that a forty years' title was not able to be given, the purchasers cannot have it, but in this case the purchasers refused to take a shorter title, & the contract being silent on that point, the purchasers were entitled to their full forty years' title. The whole correspondence showed that the purchasers all along insisted on a forty years' title, & the letter referred to could not be held to be a waiver of itself. The restrictive covenants were perfectly good objections to the title, & notice of them had not been received by the purchasers, who were told there were no such restrictive covenants.—Re JUDGE & SHERIDAN'S CONTRACT (1907), 96 L. 2672. — In favour of adjoining owners—Land sold in lots.—(1) Where an estate is vested in trustees who sell plots for building subject to restrictive covenants, each purchaser has an equity against the other purchaser to compel the observance of the covenants. Such equity may be lost by acquiescence.

(2) In a suit to enforce such an equity the trustees are necessary parties, & the remaining purchasers ought to be represented on the record.—EASTWOOD v. LEVER (1863), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 114; 3 New Rep. 232; 33 L. J. Ch. 355; 9 L. T. 615; 28 J. P. 212; 12 W. R. 195; 46 E. R. 859, L. J.J.

2673. — Repurchase of lot sold subject to covenants.—A. sold part of an estate to B., who entered into restrictive covenants for himself, his heirs & assigns, with A., his heirs, exors., & administrators, as to buildings on the purchased property; but A. did not enter into any covenants as to the land retained. After this A. sold to other persons various lots of the part retained, but nothing appeared as to the contents of their conveyances, nor was there any evidence that they were informed of the covenants entered into by B. After this A. bought back from B. what he had sold to him:—Held: the benefit of B.'s covenants did not in equity pass to the subsequent purchasers of other parts of the estate from A., & A., after the repurchase, could make a title to the repurchased land discharged from the covenants.—KEATES v. LYON (1869), 4 Ch. App. 218; 38 L. J. Ch. 357; 20 L. T. 255; 33 J. P. 340; 17 W. R. 338, L. J.J.

2674. — Question of fact.—Where a property is put up for sale by a vendor with the intention of selling the whole in lots, & restrictive covenants are entered into with the vendor by each of the vendees, it is a question of fact whether the purchasers of the different lots intended to covenant in favour of the other purchasers. If such was, in fact, their intention, the ct. will enforce those covenants between the different purchasers & their assigns.—NOTTINGHAM PATENT BRICK & TILE Co. v. BUTLER (1886), 16 Q. B. 2675. — Original estate of covenantor ceasing to exist.—Purchasers, of land sold in plots for building in 1880 entered into restrictive covenants with the tenant for life of a settled estate, who had the legal estate therein, & the trustee, who had only a power of sale. There was no general building scheme applicable to the estate as a whole, but similar covenants were entered into by purchasers of property in the same road:—Held: the benefit of the covenant ran with the land in equity in the same manner as a negative easement, & an adjoining owner was entitled to enforce the covenant against a purchaser & his tenant, although the original legal estate of the covenantee had ceased to exist.—LONG v. GRAY (1913), 58 Sol. Jo. 46, C. A.

C. Particular Covenants.

(a) Covenants in relation to Building.

i. Against Building.

2676. Whether enforceable against assignee.—A. being seised in fee of a house & a piece of open land near to it, sold & conveyed the house to B., & covenanted, for himself, his heirs & assigns, with B., his heirs & assigns, that no building whatever should at any time thereafter be erected on the piece of land. He afterwards sold & conveyed the piece of land to M. in fee, & took a covenant from him in the terms of that which he himself had entered into with B. The house, after divers mesne conveyances, became vested in X. in fee; & the piece of land, after one mesne conveyance, became vested in Y. in fee. Y., before the land was conveyed to him, had notice of the covenant; but, notwithstanding, he began to build upon the land. The ct., at the suit of X., restrained him from continuing the building.—

2674 i. — In favour of adjoining owners—Land sold in lots—Question of fact.—The fact of several fears of neighbouring plots of building land in the same street holding from a common superior does not, by itself, entitle one of those fears to claim the benefit of restrictions contained in the feu contract of another, unless some mutuality & community of rights & obligations is otherwise established between them.—HISLOP v. LECKIE (1881), 6 App. Cas. 580.—SCOT.

Equitable

Deft. having in 1924 purchased a vacant lot of land from B. with full knowledge of the existence of a covenant made by B. in 1919, when the land was conveyed to B. by pltf., "not to erect on the said premises a house or workshop & to use the said lands as a residence only," was held bound by the covenant. Pltf. at the time of the making of the covenant, although not the registered owner of the adjoining land, had an equitable interest therein, & took the covenant from B. to protect that interest, & not as a collateral & personal contract.—BESINNETT v. WHITE, [1926] 1 D. L. R. 95; 58 O. L. R. 125.—CAN.

PART XI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 4.—C. (a) i.

2676 i. Whether enforceable against assignee.—A restrictive covenant in regard to building, contained in a deed of conveyance of land, creates an equitable interest analogous to a negative easement, requiring for its creation & continuance a dominant & servient tenement. If there is a dominant tenement, the owner, & he alone, can claim the benefit of the covenant. If there is not such a tenement, the claim upon the covenant, as against subsequent assignees or purchasers entirely ceases.—Re HUNT & BELL (1915), 8 O. W. N. 424, 581;

2677. —J.—TULK v. MOXHAY, No. 2667, ante.

2678. —J.—In 1916 premises were conveyed to T., who covenanted for himself & his assigns with the vendors & their assigns that no building should be erected on the premises which would materially restrict or interfere with the free access of light & air to the windows then existing in an adjoining cottage belonging to the vendors. The premises so conveyed were important business premises. In June, 1920, T. formed a co. to take over his business, of which he remained managing director. The co. carried on its business upon the premises, but they were not conveyed to the co. In Jan. 1926, T. informed S., the person who collected the rents for A., who had purchased the adjoining cottage, that he intended to raise the height of his stables. S. was not the agent of A. & did not give any valid assent. The raising of the wall to a height of 19 feet 6 inches was completed in Apr. 1926, when A. first knew of it. She & her tenants commenced an action against T. for a mandatory injunction to pull down so much of the wall as materially restricted or interfered with the access of light & air to the windows. She did not know of the existence of the co. until the action had been commenced, but afterwards joined them as defts. At the hearing A. refused to accept damages in lieu of an injunction:—Held: the co. being in possession of the premises with notice of the covenant & being in the position of assignees with notice, were responsible for the breach of the covenant; though pltf.'s premises were small & defts.' premises an important building, pltf's. were entitled to a mandatory injunction if they required it, & they could not be compelled to accept damages in lieu thereof.—ACHILLI v. TOVELL, [1927] 2 Ch. 243; 96 L. J. Ch. 493; 137 L. T. 805; 71 Sol. Jo. 745.

2679. Construction of covenant—Land opposite land conveyed.—The purchase deed of a house in a terrace contained a covenant on the part of the vendor, unexplained by any recital, that no building should be erected on any part of the land of the vendor lying on the east side of the said terrace & opposite to the plot of land thereby conveyed. The owners of the other houses had also similar covenants:—Held: the latter words were not merely descriptive of the position of the land, but restricted the general meaning of the former words; & the covenant applied only to that part of the land which lay immediately opposite, & was of the width of the plot conveyed.

The general rule that the construction must be taken most strongly against the grantor, modified by the necessity of giving effect to every word of the instrument, if it can reasonably be done.—PATCHING v. DUBBINS (1853), Kay, 1; 23 L. J. Ch. 15; 22 L. T. O. S. 116; 17 Jur. 1113; 2 W. R. 2; 39 E. R. 1; affd., 2 Eq. Rep. 71; 23 L. J. Ch. 19, L. JJ.

2680. Validity of covenant.—The owner of some land sold a part of it, & entered into an agreement with the purchaser that an adjoining plot of land 'should never be hereafter sold, but left for the common benefit of both parties & their successors':—Held: this was merely an agreement that the plot of land should be left open, in the state in which it then was, for the common advantage of both parties, & such an agreement did not contravene any rule of law, but gave the person who might hold the vendee's land the right to enforce the obligation against the person who might hold the vendor's land. Thus the former might apply to a ct. of equity to order the removal of a structure that had been placed on the plot in violation of the agreement.—MCLEAN v. MCKAY (1873), L. R. 5 P. C. 327; 29 L. 2681. What amounts to breach—Excavation containing urinal.—A vendor covenanted with his purchaser that a piece of land belonging to the vendor which adjoined the property conveyed to the purchaser 'should for ever thereafter be kept open & unbuilt upon' by the vendor. The vendor subsequently excavated part of this piece of land & constructed therein a covered urinal, the roof of which projected very slightly above the adjoining surface:—Held: this was not a breach of the covenant.—GRAHAM v. A lessee from one of the purchasers of two lots had erected along the boundary of the land where it adjoined pltf.'s plot a hoarding of a permanent nature, 156 feet long & 15 feet high, & covered the hoarding with advertisements. removal of this hoarding:—Held: this hoarding was, within the meaning of the above covenant, a "building" upon which the trade of bill-posting was carried on, & this was an "offensive" trade to the owners of the adjoining plots, & consequently, pltf. was entitled to a mandatory injunction.—*NUSSEY v. ii. Restriction as to Character of Buildings.

2684. Whether binding—On subsequent purchaser of unsold lots—Effect of delay.—On an agreement to sell part of a vendor's land, the vendor & purchaser entered into mutual covenants prohibiting building except in a specified manner, on the sold & unsold parts, with a stipulation for payment of liquidated damages in case of breach of covenant:—Held: (1) a subsequent owner of the unsold part, claiming through the grantor by means of deeds, one of which referred to the deed containing the prohibitory clause, but not to that clause, was bound by the prohibition in equity; (2) the circumstance of the grantor not having performed a covenant, to obtain for the grantee a direct covenant from the former purchaser, did not constitute a defence, it not appearing that any application had been made to the grantor for that purpose; (3) notice of a right to prevent building, & of an intention to enforce it, given before any expense was incurred, followed by a bill for an injunction, though not filed till four months afterwards, was sufficient to exclude a defence on the ground of laches, it appearing that pltf. could not sooner establish his right to enforce the prohibition; (4) the clause as to liquidated damages did not exclude the interference of the ct. by interlocutory injunction.—*COLES v. The same vendors afterwards sold the residential estate to pltf.'s predecessors in title. The conveyance contained no reference to the restrictive covenants, nor was there any contract or representation that the purchasers were to have the benefit of them:—Held: *pltf.*s. were not entitled to restrain defts. from building in contravention of the restrictive covenants entered into by their predecessors in title.

2687. ——— On purchasers inter se—Where covenant for benefit of vendor only.—Sites of a row of houses in a town were conveyed by the same vendors to various persons all about the same time, & the conveyances were substantially all in the same form. In each case a rentcharge was reserved, & the purchaser covenanted that he would build the houses agreeable to such order of building as was described in a plan drawn for & signed by as well the purchaser as the vendors; & that the outside or form of building of the house should not after the same was finished be ever altered.

The assignees of a purchaser were making an addition to the front of their house, & the assignees of the purchaser of the adjoining house sought to restrain that as being contrary to the covenants under which the property was held.

On no one of the conveyances produced was there any plan indorsed, & no plan signed by any of the purchasers was forthcoming at the trial:—Held: it was a question of fact in each case whether the restrictions were merely matters of agreement between the vendor & the several purchasers for the protection of the vendor, or were intended to be for the common advantage of the several purchasers, & in this case it was not shown that they were intended to be otherwise than for the benefit of the vendor, & *pltf.*s. could not enforce them.—*SHEPPARD v. k. ————In 1909, a co., the owner of a block of land, conveyed to G. certain lots shown on a plan of the block. The deed contained a cove-that the purchaser would not "without the consent in writing of D., his heirs or assigns," erect any building on the land conveyed, other than that which was to be built, according to the agreement, before the conveyance was executed.

In 1890, D. having died, deft., with the consent in writing of his successors in title, the owners of such part of the B. estate as had not been conveyed in plots, erected further buildings on his land.

Some hundreds of houses had then been erected on the B. estate, but a large portion of it still remained, unbuilt on, in the hands of D.'s successors in title:—Held: assuming pltf. was entitled to enforce the restrictive covenant, in deft.'s conveyance, against building, there had been no breach of such covenant; because the consent, required & obtained, was that of the owner of the B. estate in its popular & broad sense, & not of such owner & of all lessees & purchasers acquiring title after the date of the conveyance to the deft. Semle: pltf. was not entitled to enforce the covenant.—EVERETT v. REMINGTON, [1892] 3 Ch. 148; 61 L. J. Ch. 574; 67 L. T. 80.

2689. Covenant not to build except to plans to be approved — By principal engineer.—A railway co., having constructed a tunnel proceeded to dispose of the ground under which the tunnel ran, & contracted on June 5 to sell a portion to B., subject to the condition that he was to erect no buildings nor make any excavations, etc., but according to a specification approved in writing by the principal engineer. B. entered immediately, & sent in plans in Aug. to the resident engineer, for the approval of the principal engineer. The resident engineer never submitted them to the principal, but told B. verbally that he might proceed. B. thereupon proceeded till Oct. 26, when the conveyance was completed & the co.'s solr., finding him carrying on building operations, asked if he had the approval in writing of the principal engineer, & told him he must procure it. The principal engineer then for the first time saw the plans of the proposed buildings, & immediately condemned them as dangerous to the tunnel, & therefore, of course, also dangerous to the proposed houses. B. insisting on proceeding, the co. caused an information to be filed to restrain him, on the ground of danger to the public. A counter-information was thereupon filed against the co. to restrain them from running their trains on the same ground of danger to the public. The fact of danger to the public by the continuation of B.'s plans was fully made out. An injunction had been obtained on the first information, & refused on the second:—Held: the approval of the co.'s resident engineer was not binding on the co., deft. B. having been allowed to continue his works from Aug. to Oct. 26 was, under the circumstances, not such an acquiescence on the part of the co. as to exempt B. from being restrained from further prosecuting his building.—A.-G. v. BRIGGS, A.-G. v. BIRMINGHAM & OXFORD JUNCTION RY. CO. (1855), 1 Jur. N. S. 1084.

2690. — Liability for fees.—A conveyance of part of an estate at Reading contained a covenant by the purchasers not to erect any building otherwise than in accordance with such drawings & specifications as might be previously approved of in writing by the vendor's surveyor:—Held: on the construction of the conveyance, the purchasers were not liable to pay the fees of the vendor's surveyor for approving the plans.—READING INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. v. PALMER, [1912] 2 Ch. 42; 81 L. J. Ch. 454; 106 L. T. 626.

2691. — Covenants relating to height & width.—The E. Railway co. obtained a conveyance for the purposes of their railway of certain land from C., & in the conveyance the co. bound themselves to erect & maintain a bridge over the road leading to C.'s property, which was to be according to the plans 35 feet wide, & leaving a road under it of 15 feet wide. Afterwards this bridge was made, but the E. co. some years later amalgamated with the H. co., & the latter co.'s Act authorised a junction with the E. railway at a point near this bridge. The two cos. then agreed as to the mode of effecting the junction, & part of the plan was to widen the arch or bridge over C.'s road so as to extend the bridge from 35 feet to 55 feet wide, thereby darkening the road beneath. C. applied for an injunction to restrain the cos. from carrying out this plan:—Held: the E. co. having in the first instance obtained the conveyance from C. on certain conditions as to the width of the bridge were bound not to depart from those conditions, & the H. co. were equally bound as claiming under the E. co., for it was part of the consideration to maintain the bridge of the height & width originally fixed.—EDINBURGH & GLASGOW RY. CO. v. CAMPBELL (1863), 9 L. T. 157, H. L.

2692. — — ——A railway co., in purchasing land, covenanted with the owner not to build upon it above a certain height. They afterwards obtained an Act of Parliament, empowering them to widen their line:—Held: on the construction of the covenant it would prevent them from building so as to widen the line.—LOYD v. LONDON, CHATHAM & DOVER RY. CO. (1865), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 568; 6 New Rep. 51; 34 L. J. Ch. 401; 12 L. T. 363; 29 J. P. 743; 11 Jur. N. S. 380; 13 W. R. 698; 46 E. R. 496, L. J.J.

2693. — — ——The conveyance of part of a residential estate contained a covenant by the grantee that any "building" which should be erected on the land should be of a certain height & have a stuccoed front & slated roof, & be used only as a dwelling-house:—Held: the erection of an advertisement hoarding was not prohibited by the covenant.—FOSTER v. FRASER, [1893] 3 Ch. 158; 63 L. J. Ch. 91; 69 L. T. 136; 57 J. P. 646; 42 W. R. 11; 9 T. L. R. 502; 37 Sol. Jo. 561; 3 R. 635.

2694. — — ——The D. harbour board were the owners of some property adjoining a house of which they were also the lessors. X. was the assignee of the lease of the house. The lease contained a covenant on the part of the lessors that they "shall not nor will at any time or times during the continuance of the term hereby granted, demise, or lease all or any part of the ground between C. crescent, aforesaid, & the sea for the erection of any building or buildings whatsoever other than public baths with or without reading rooms or libraries, nor permit or suffer any such buildings or any part of such buildings to be thereon erected nant on the part of G., although the deed was not executed by him, not to erect any building on the lots other than of the kind & description specified in the covenant:—Held: although which shall be of a greater height than 15 feet 7 inches above the ground floor of the centre houses in C.-crescent aforesaid." Some years after the date of the lease the board let the adjoining property to the D. corpn. The agreement between the board & the corpn. contained a provision that the corpn. should keep in repair a bandstand on the property. This bandstand was subsequently removed by the corpn., & a new bandstand exceeding 15 feet 7 inches in height was erected by them in its place. Pltf. brought this action against the corpn. & the board for an injunction for the removal of the bandstand & for damages:—Held: the operation of the covenant only extended to buildings for the erection of which the board was entitled to demise or let the land, & there was no covenant by the board not to permit any building whatever to be erected in excess of the specified height; no evidence was adduced of any arrangement between the board & the corpn.; the board could not have authorised the corpn. to erect a bandstand, though they could have erected one themselves; & pltf. had not succeeded in proving that there had been a breach of the covenant by the board.—PALLISER v. DOVER CORPN. (1914), 110 L. T. 619; 58 Sol. Jo. 379; 78 J. P. Jo. 123.

2695. — Covenants as to situation.]—A. purchased a building plot of G., & covenanted to build on it a dwelling-house of the value of £250 at least, under the inspection & to the satisfaction of G.'s architect, in twelve months. The twelve months expired, & A. proceeded to build a house of the required value, but as to situation contrary to the opinion of the architect:—Held: it was a breach of the covenant, & the injunction granted.—*GOOLDEN v. 2697. — Covenant against buildings other than shelters.]—A landowning co. conveyed land to a municipal corpn. The conveyance contained a covenant by the purchasers that no buildings or erections of any kind were to be put upon the land conveyed, except "such structures as summer-houses, a bandstand, or shelters, 12 feet in height, for the accommodation & convenience of the public." The corpn. proceeded to erect lavatories, calling them a "shelter" with a public convenience at each end, contending that they had a statutory right to override the covenant:—Held: the building was not a "shelter" within the meaning of the covenant; the covenant was binding upon the corpn.; & what they were doing was plainly in contravention thereof.—STOURCLIFFE ESTATES CO., LTD. v. BOURNEMOUTH CORPN., [1910] 2 Ch. 12; 79 L. J. Ch. 455; 102 L. T. 629; 74 J. P. 289; 26 T. L. R. 450; 8 L. G. R. 595, C. A.

iii. Restriction as to Number of Dwelling-Houses on Site.

2698. What constitutes breach—Restriction to single dwelling—Block of flats.]—A building containing several residential flats constitutes only one house within the meaning of the word "house" in a covenant not to erect more than a certain number of houses, unless there is some context which cuts down or alters the popular interpretation of the word.—KIMBER v. ADMANS, [1900] 1 Ch. 412; 69 L. J. Ch. 296; 82 L. T. 136; 48 W. R. 322; 16 T. L. R. 207; 44 Sol. Jo. 260, C. A.

iv. Covenants as to Value of Dwellings.

2702. Whether binding on purchasers—Land sold in lots.]—An estate was laid out for building, & a great part of it had been sold. In 1882, some of the unsold part was put up for sale by auction with a condition that the purchaser of certain lots was to covenant to expend on each of the dwelling-houses built not less than £1,200. As to some lots there were other restrictions; & some were free from restriction. One of pltf's. bought some of the free lots, & also a restricted lot, not being one of the first-named. Next year the unsold lots, together with another piece of land forming together the whole of the unsold parts of the estate, were put up for sale, with similar conditions as to the first-named lots; but as to other lots free from restrictions. All the lots were then sold, except the first-named lots, both pltf's. being purchasers of free lots. The first-named lots were in the following year sold to deft., who entered into a covenant with the vendors not to build houses of less value than £1,200. He now proposed to build houses of less value:—Held: the doctrine of Nottingham Patent Brick & Tile Co. v. Buller, No. 2674, ante, ought to be extended to cover the present case, & pltf's. were entitled to restrain deft. from building houses of less value.—COLLINS v. CASTLE (1887), 36 Ch. 2703. — — — — — One lot with lodge built on it.]—Parts of a building estate were, in 1875, offered for sale by auction, in lots, as a residential property, according to a plan & particulars & conditions of sale. This plan showed a private road, terminated at its east end, where it joined a public road, by a gate. On one side of the private road were shown large residential lots: on the other side, smaller lots, called "stable plots," to go with the residential lots. On the east corner of the private road a piece of land with a lodge on it, marked "lodge," was shown. Each purchaser of a residential lot & a stable plot covenanted to build one dwelling-house only of a certain value on his residential lot, & to keep up an ornamental screen

Erection of building other than dwelling-house.]—A covenant whereby the covenantor agreed that "any building or dwelling-house" which he might erect on his lot should be of the value of at least $2,500 & placed at least 20 feet back from the street line:—Held: not to prohibit the construction of any building other than a dwelling-house.—SMITH v. EGGERTSON, [1922] 1 W. W. R. 1089; 66 D. L. R. 774 32 Man. L. R. 94.—CAN.

on his stable plot. In 1882, & again in 1883, the two residential lots & stable plots which still remained unsold were (with other parts of the estate) put up for sale by auction, according to a plan & particulars & conditions of sale. Each of these plans showed the corner piece of land with the lodge on it, marked "lodge." In 1885 deft. purchased by private contract these two residential lots & stable plots; & he at the same time bought the corner piece of land marked "lodge." Deft. bought with notice of the three estate plans. In 1890 he commenced building cottages on the corner piece of land. Thereupon purchasers of some of the other residential lots brought an action for an injunction to restrain him from using the site for any purpose other than a lodge & garden thereto:—Held: as deft. bought with notice that the three estate plans were put forward as part of a general scheme, with the intention of representing to purchasers that the corner piece of ground was appropriated as a lodge, an injunction must be granted restraining him from building, or permitting to remain on the piece of ground, the cottages which he had commenced to build thereon, or from using the site for any purpose inconsistent with the scheme disclosed by the three estate plans.—TINDALL v. CASTLE (1893), 62 L. J. Ch. 555; 37 Sol. Jo. 326; 3 R. 418.

2704. What amounts to breach of the covenant—Stable with room over—Leaving room for erection of house of stipulated value.—A covenant to the effect that private houses only, of a certain minimum value, are to be built on certain plots of land, is not broken by the erection on one of them of a stable with a bedroom over it, of such dimensions & in such a position that it would still be possible to build a house of the stipulated value upon the plot.—RUSSELL v. BABER (1870), 18 W. R. 1021.

2705. Houses connected together—Being substantially two houses.—Land was subject to a covenant that no house should be erected on any part thereof of a less value than £400. The purchaser of the land proceeded to erect thereon two houses, which were afterwards thrown together in the following way: There was a communication between them on the ground floor; there was only one yard in the rear, one watercloset, one ashpit, & one kitchen. There were, however, separate doors opening on to the street, separate shop-windows fronting the street, & separate staircases. Each of the two houses so thrown together was of less value than £400, but the two together were of greater value than £400:—Held: the two houses so thrown together were substantially two & not one within the meaning of the covenant, & there had therefore been a breach of the covenant.—SNOW v. WHITEHEAD (1884), as reported in 53 L. J. Ch. 885; 51 L. T. 253; 33 W. R. 128.

v. Restrictions against Buildings Other than Private Dwelling-Houses.

2706. Who may be bound—Vendor—Representation that all leases will contain covenant.—SPICER v. MARTIN, No. 2641, ante.

2707. Purchaser—Taking possession on bankruptcy of lessee—Breach by lessee of purchaser.—The purchaser of part of a freehold building estate covenanted with the vendor for himself & his assigns to erect no other than private residences & to submit plans for approval before commencing to build. The purchaser granted a building lease with covenants similar to those in his conveyance; the lessees, without submitting plans for the vendor's approval, commenced a building which was alleged to be & was held a breach of the covenant. The lessees became bkpt., & their trustee having disclaimed the lease, the purchaser took possession of the land & offending building. The vendor having sold the rest of the estate to pltf. with the benefit of the purchaser's covenants, & pltf. brought an action against the purchaser to compel removal of the building, & for damages:—Held: there was no continuing breach, the covenant having been broken once for all when the building was erected contrary to it; the breach was committed not by the purchaser, but by his lessees, & he had not by his conduct rendered himself liable for the violation of the covenant; & neither at law nor in equity was pltf. entitled to any relief.—POWELL v. HEMSLEY, [1909] 2 Ch. 252; 78 L. J. Ch. 741; 101 L. T. 262; 25 T. L. R. 649, C. A.

2708. Purchasers inter se—In absence of building scheme.—In 1903, 14 acres, forming part of the D. estate, were conveyed to H., who covenanted with the vendor & the owner for the time being of the estate to observe certain restrictive conditions under which only dwelling houses were to be built on the land, so as to bind the hereditaments thereby conveyed into whosoever hands the same should come. H. caused himself to be registered in the Land Registry as proprietor of the 14 acres. The restrictive conditions were not entered at that time, but on Apr. 6, 1905, they were entered on the register as affecting the whole of the land comprised in the title. On the same day Holmes transferred a plot of land, forming part of the 14 acres, to pltf. who covenanted to observe the conditions. In 1907, H. conveyed the plot adjoining pltf.'s plot to four purchasers, who built a church thereon. Pltf. brought an action against H. & the four purchasers for an order directing them to pull down the church, & for damages:—Held: the registration of the restrictive conditions did not entitle one purchaser from H. to enforce the conditions against another purchaser or against the common vendor, in the absence of proof of a building scheme, & the action failed.—WILLÉ v. ST. JOHN, [1910] 1 Ch. 325; 79 L. J. Ch. 239; 102 L. T. 383; 26 T. L. R. 405; 54 Sol. Jo. 269, C. A.

2709. What amounts to breach—Vinery—& heightening of wall for vinery.—Pltf., in 1866, took a conveyance of a piece of land bounded by a road, from a vendor, who covenanted that "no buildings" except dwelling-houses, not to cost less than £200 each, to front with the road, should be erected on the opposite side of the road to pltf.'s land. Deft., in 1869, agreed to purchase from the same vendor the land on the opposite side of the road to pltf.'s land; he also agreed to make a permanent fence around the land so agreed to be purchased, either by railing or walling, from 4 to 7 feet high; & he further agreed to enter into a covenant with the vendor similar to that which had been entered into by pltf. Afterwards deft., having thrown the land so agreed to be purchased into pleasure ground, built a garden wall alongside the road, 8 foot 6 inches high; & in one part 11 feet high; behind which part he also erected a vinery, with a roof leaning against the wall:—Held: (1) the building of the wall to the height of 8 feet 6 inches was not a breach of the covenant; (2) the building of the wall to the height of 11 feet, & the erection of the vinery were breaches of the covenant.—BOWES v. LAW (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 636; 39 L. J. Ch. 483; 22 L. T. 267; 34 J. P. 436; 18 W. R. 640.

2710. — Charitable home.]—(1) The erection of a building, to be used for the education & lodging of one hundred girls in connection with a charitable institution for the daughters of missionaries, supported by voluntary contributions:—Held: to be a breach of a covenant entered into by the purchaser that "no house or other building to be erected or built upon the land shall be used or occupied otherwise than as & for a private residence only, & not for any purpose of trade."

(2) Where all the purchasers of an estate were bound by restrictive covenants not to use their houses otherwise than as private residences, & the vendor had given permission to one of the purchasers to open a school in his house:—Held: not to be a waiver of the covenant as to another purchaser whose house was at some distance.—GERMAN v. CHAPMAN (1877), 7 Ch. D. 271; 47 L. J. Ch. 250; 37 L. T. 685; 42 J. P. 358; 26 W. R. 149, C. A.

2711. — Art studio.]—A conveyance in fee of building land was made to a purchaser, subject to a restrictive covenant contained in a collateral deed binding the purchaser & his assigns not to erect upon the land any building other than a private dwelling-house. The land was afterwards leased, & the lessee erected upon it a corrugated iron building as an art studio for ladies. In an action by the original vendor, against the lessee:—Held: the erection was an infringement of the covenant, as being in no way appurtenant to a private dwelling-house, & any representation by the lessor to the lessee that there was no restrictive covenant did not protect the lessee from being affected with constructive notice of the lessor's title.—*PATMAN v. PART XI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 4.—C. (a) v.

2712 i. What amounts to breach—Stables appurtenant to dwelling-house.]—The owners of two adjoining parcels of land sold & conveyed one, the deed containing a covenant by the purchaser not to "erect or build more than one house upon the property hereby conveyed." The parcel first sold became vested by various mesne conveyances in defts., who built a stable upon part of it, sufficient space being left for the erection of a house in the terms of the covenant, which defts. asserted they intended to build:—Held: defts. had the right to build the stable as appurtenant to the house to be erected afterwards.—HIME v. LOVEGROVE (1905), 11 O. L. R. 252; 7 O. W. R. 4.—CAN.

o. — Covenant for erection of single house—Erection of duplex house.]—An agreement of sale & purchase was conditioned upon the right of the purchaser to erect a duplex house thereon. The land was subject to a covenant restricting erections to such as are "for the purpose of a private dwelling-house & residence only":—Held: under the covenant but one private dwelling was permitted, & the purchaser could not erect a duplex house.—Re JAMES & CUTTS, [1923] 4 D. 2713. — Boarding house for scholars—School kept by owner of house.] A covenant not to use a house "for any trade or manufacture, or for any other purpose than a private residence," is broken by using it as a boarding house for scholars attending a school in the neighbourhood kept by the owner of the house is question.

2717. By whom enforceable—Purchaser.]—The purchaser of a plot of land, part of an estate laid out for building, covenanted with the vendors, who were the mtgees. in fee in possession of the estate, their heirs & assigns, not to erect any building "on his plot nearer to the road in which it was situate than the line of frontage of the then present houses in that road, which houses were about 40 feet apart, & about 80 feet from the road. He then erected two houses on his plot, each of which had a bay window projecting 3 feet beyond the line of the existing houses, & carried from the foundation up to the roof. Upon bill for injunction filed by the transferee from the mtgees., & by a subsequent purchaser from them of a contiguous plot, who had entered into similar covenants:—Held: (1) the bay windows were "buildings" within the meaning of the covenant, & the erection of them a violation of it; (2) there being a clear

2718. — Assignee of one purchaser—Against assignee of another purchaser.—[A vendor entered into agreements, by deed, to sell to A., B., & C., a certain land, in lots, for building purposes reserving to himself a portion. Each deed of agreement contained covenants between the vendor & purchasers respectively, & amongst others, that the purchasers should, within a certain time, erect dwelling-houses upon their respective lots, in a uniform row, in a certain specified position, & that no building should be erected on the piece of ground in front of each house, which was to be laid out as a garden, & that the vendor would dispose of all the lots subject to the same conditions as to building; & that in case the vendor should build upon the portion reserved by him, he would build in a line with the other houses, & would keep a similar piece of land in front for a garden. Before the contracts were completed by conveyance, the vendor sold & conveyed the reserved land to J., & the deed of conveyance recited the said sales, & contained a covenant by the vendor, that, in the conveyances to A., B., & C. he would require them to enter into covenants with J., similar to their covenants in the agreements. J. also thereby covenanted with the vendor, that, if he should build on the land purchased by him, he would build within the line, & would keep the said piece of ground in front as a garden. Subsequently the land purchased by A. was conveyed to him by a deed, in which A. entered into the same covenants as he had entered into in the deed of agreement. After divers mesne assignments, the land purchased by J. became vested in deft.'s, with notice of the agreements & of J.'s covenants in his purchase deed, & the land of A. came in like manner to pltf. :—Held: whether the covenants ran with the land or not, as defts. had notice of them, pltf. might have an injunction to restrain defts. from building in a manner contrary to the general scheme for the benefit of all the original parties.—*COLES v. 2719. — Mortgagor—Against purchaser from mortgagee—Notice immaterial.—[On the sale of a building estate in lots the purchaser of each lot entered into a covenant with the vendor & with the purchasers of the other lots not to build upon his lot beyond a specified building line. The purchaser of one lot mortgaged a part of his lot. The mtgee. had notice of the covenant but no express restriction as to the use of the land was imposed on him by the mtgor. The mtgee. afterwards foreclosed & sold the mtged. land part of which ultimately became vested in defts. by purchase. Defts. as well as the sub-purchasers through whom they claimed took with notice of the restrictive covenant :—Held: there was no implied obligation as between the mtgor. & the mtgee. restricting the use of the land & the mtgor. was not entitled to enforce the restrictive covenant as against defts.—KING v. DICKSON (1889), 40 Ch. D. 596; 58 L. J. Ch. 464; 60 L. T. 785; 37 W. R. 553.

2720. — Vendor—Against assignee of purchaser.—[In 1867 plffs. conveyed to a purchaser in fee simple certain hereditaments & appurtenances adjoining their railway, & by the deed of conveyance the purchaser covenanted "for himself, his heirs, exors., administrators & assigns, that he, the purchaser, would not erect or build any erection or buildings of any kind whatsoever within 10 feet of the roadway or viaduct of plffs. without their permission in writing first had & obtained." In the following year the purchaser conveyed the hereditaments & appurtenances to a person since dead, testator of deft. B. & testator took & accepted the conveyance without notice or knowledge of the covenant other than such constructive notice, if any, as he might be deemed to have had by reason of the deed of 1867 being a title deed of the premises. In 1869 testator rebuilt the hereditaments & erected on the premises a hotel, part of which stood within 10 feet of the roadway or viaduct of plffs., & he demised the hotel & premises for fifty years upon a certain rent to a woman, who assigned the lease to second deft. F. A covenant was contained in the lease to the effect that the lessee should not make any alteration in the premises without the lessor's consent, in writing, but neither the lessee nor defts. had any notice of the covenant in the conveyance of 1867 other than such constructive notice, if any, as before mentioned in the case of testator. In 1881 deft. F. increased the height of that part of the erection which was within 10 feet of plffs.' roadway or viaduct, having previously in consideration for the payment of a sum of money obtained the written authority of deft. B. for doing so. Plffs. had no knowledge of this erection by deft. B., or the alteration by deft. F., until they were both completed in 1881. Upon a special case :—Held: plffs. were entitled to an injunction to both defts.; requiring them to pull down the erections, & deft. F. was not entitled to be indemnified by deft. (b) Covenants against Trading.

i. In General.

2722. By whom enforceable—By purchaser of unsold lots without benefit of covenant.—[Under the will of E., who died in 1860, the S. estate was vested in trustees in trust for C. From 1860, onward, the S. estate was developed as a building estate, restrictive covenants to preserve the residential character of the estate as a whole being taken from the respective purchasers of portions of the estate from time to time sold in the course of its development. In 1881 part of the estate was sold & conveyed by the trustees & C. to R., who covenanted with the trustees to erect dwelling-houses thereon & use the same as dwelling-houses only. In accordance with that covenant a dwelling-house, known as No. 223 C. Road, was erected on part of the land so conveyed to R. In 1884 the trustees conveyed the then remaining unsold portions of the S. estate to C., but did not at the same time assign to her the benefit of the restrictive covenants taken from R. & purchasers of other portions of the estate sold from time to time. In 1893 N. became absolutely entitled under the will of C. of which he was thereby appointed an exor., to the unsold portions of the S. estate. Defts. J. were assigns of R., the original covenantor, having recently purchased No. 223, & they thereupon, in spite of the restrictive covenants of which they had notice, commenced to convert No. 223 into a shop. In 1921 the representative of the last surviving trustee of the will of E. assigned to N. the benefit of the restrictive covenants entered into with the trustees by purchasers on sales made from time to time of portions of the estate, including the covenants by R. contained in the conveyance of 1881. In an action by N. against J. to restrain the breach of those covenants:—Held: the effect of the assignment to N. in 1921 of the benefit of the covenants, in conjunction with the conveyance in 1884 of the then remaining unsold portions of the estate, was to reunite in N. as legal rights those equitable rights which C. originally possessed under the trusts of the will of E.; it was not incumbent on pltf. to show that the covenants imposed by the conveyance of 1881 were, in the first instance, intended to be for the benefit of any particular portions of the S. estate retained by the covenantees, but it was sufficient to show, as pltf. had in fact shown, that those covenants were intended to be enforceable for the purpose of preserving the general residential character of the estate as a whole.—NORTHBORNE (LORD) v. JOHNSTON & SON, [1922] 2 Ch. 309; 92 L. J. Ch. 12; 128 L. T. 496.

2723. What constitutes breach—Covenant against trade, business or calling—School.—The owner of an estate covered it with houses, & sold some of them subject to a covenant not to carry on any trade, business or calling therein, or to otherwise use or suffer the same to be used to the annoyance, nuisance or injury of any of the houses on the estate:—Held: the carrying on of a girl's school in one of the houses was a breach of the covenant; & the covenantee had not waived the benefit of the covenant, though he had permitted other houses held under the like covenant to be used as schools.—*KEMP v. 2724. — Stables in connection with business.—An owner of a plot of land bound by covenant not to "use or suffer to be used any building which might be erected upon any part or parts of the said plot of land as a hotel, tavern, public-house, beerhouse, shop, warehouse, or manufacturing dyehouse, chandler's shop, or other place of business," erected stables thereon, which he intended to use for horses employed in his business as a retail coal merchant. The ct. granted an interim injunction against him in the terms of the covenant.—WHITE v. POLLARD (1908), 52 Sol. Jo. 748.

ii. Particular Trades.

2725. Against whom enforceable—Vendor—Vendor's tenant not party to action.—The conveyance of an estate to a purchaser & his heirs to the use that certain specified trades should not be carried on upon the premises:—Held: to be a stipulation in the nature of a covenant running with the land; but the owner of the estate could alone be restrained from carrying on the trades, as his tenant was no party to the suit.—HODGSON v. COPPARD (1860), 29 Beav. 4; 7 Jur. N. S. 11; 9 W. R. 9; 54 E. R. 525; sub nom. HODGSON v. COPPARD, 30 L. J. Ch. 20.

Annotation.—Apld. Williamson v. Sunderland Corpn. (1892), 9 T. L. R. 143.

2726. What constitutes breach—Covenant confining building to "shops"—Public-house.—On a sale of an estate as building land in 309 plots each purchaser executed a covenant with trustees to observe certain conditions as to the user of the land. The conditions stated that certain plots were reserved for two taverns: that "no houses other than detached or semi-detached," were to be erected except on the portion on which shops were permitted to be built; & that shops would be allowed to be built on sixty specified plots. A purchaser of one of the plots set apart for shops was restrained from building a public-house on it.

It was not contended that shops could be erected except on the plots set apart for shops, but it was contended that a public-house was a shop. No doubt, in one sense, a beer-shop was a shop, but in common parlance the word did not include a public-house. He understood, from the conditions, that only the plots there specified could be used for the erection of taverns; & he did not think that a public-house, which in common language was a very different thing from a shop, & which the deed itself carefully distinguished from a shop, could be erected on one of the plots set apart for shops (MALINS, V.-C.).—HALL v. BOX (1870), 18 W. R. 820.

2727. — — — — ——The word "shop" in a conveyance, does not include a tavern.

The original grantor intends to lay out his land for particular purposes. He stipulates for certain uses, & only those uses can be made of it. The property is to be wholly used for private houses. Nothing must be done upon any part of it which is a nuisance, e.g. houses of ill-fame, skating-rinks, & the like. One part, however, for general convenience is allowed to be used for shops, which I understand to mean drapers', butchers', & greengrocers' shops, etc., to supply the neighbourhood with their daily wants. A tavern would not come within the definition of shop. It is true that beer is sold there. But a tavern is also a house of entertainment, & travellers have a right to food & refreshment there. I think that upon the estate generally private houses only were to be allowed, but that along this frontage there might be shops of an ordinary character, but not a tavern (HUDDESTON, B.).—COOMBS v. COOK (1883), Cab. & El. 75.

2728. — Covenant restricting trading to named business.—In pursuance of an option to purchase contained in a lease dated in 1876 by the freeholder to S. of part of a building estate known as the B. estate, the demised premises were in 1883, after the death of the lessor, conveyed by the trustees of his will to S. in fee simple. The conveyance contained covenants by S. with the trustees, their heirs & assigns, to the intent that the same covenants might run with the land thereby conveyed, that S. & all persons deriving title under him would not exercise or carry on or permit to be exercised or carried on upon any part of the premises thereby conveyed any trade or business whatsoever except that of a builder or coal merchant, & would not do or permit or suffer to be done upon the premises any act, matter or thing which might be a nuisance, annoyance or disturbance to the trustees or the persons claiming under them or their tenants or the neighbourhood. E., one of the trustees & the person beneficially interested in the unsold portions of the B. estate, died in 1917, having by her will devised the gardens & other parts of the B. estate upon certain trusts, & devised the residue of that estate to uses under which pltf. R. was tenant for life. S. died in 1898, & tenants from the trustees of his will of the premises conveyed to him in 1883 having used the premises as a garage for motor char-a-bancs & other motor vehicles, pltf. R., one of the exors. of E., who as tenant for life was the owner of a great number of freehold premises adjoining the garage, commenced an action against the trustees of S.'s will & their tenants for breach of the covenants in the conveyance of 1883 & for an injunction. During the trial the other exor. of E., who was the survivor of the original covenantees, was added as co-pltf. :—Held: (1) in the absence of special definite words such as were present in Rogers v. Hosegood, No. 2664, ante, there was not sufficient context in the conveyance of 1883 to annex the benefit of the covenants to so much of the B. estate as then remained in the hands of the covenantees or to any particular portion thereof; (2) E., not having expressly assigned by her will the benefit of the covenants to pltf., R., the devise to him of the residue of the B. estate did not carry with it by operation of law the benefit of the covenants; (3) the covenants were personal, & as E., the beneficial owner of a large part of the B. estate & also the surviving covenantor, was entitled at the time of her death to restrain a breach of the covenants, pltf. as together representing her real & personal estate, were entitled to the benefit of the covenants in question; & accordingly an injunction was granted against the trustees & the tenants in respect of the breach of the first part of the covenant & against the tenants as to the latter part relating to nuisance, annoyance & disturbance.—*IVES v. The owner of a freehold house had entered into a covenant with pltf., who was a previous owner, that the building should not be used as a beer-shop. The house was afterwards let to deft. as tenant from year to year, without express notice of the covenant:—Held: although the covenant might not at law run with the land, deft. was bound by it in equity.—*WILSON v. 2731. — By whom covenant enforceable — Purchaser—Against another purchaser.—A., the owner of a piece of land, divided it into lots for building a row of houses, & a deed was made between him of the one part & X. & Y., who had purchased some of the lots from him, & the several persons who should at any time execute the deed of the other part; by which, after reciting that A. had determined & proposed & thereby expressly declared that it should be a general & indispensable condition of the sale of all or any of the lots that the proprietors thereof for the time being should observe & abide by the several stipulations & restrictions thereafter contained; it was mutually covenanted between A., X., & Y., & the several other persons who should at any time execute the deed, & each of them, A., X., & Y., & the several persons, etc., for himself, his heirs, exors. & administrators, thereby covenanted with all & every the other & others of them, & with the heirs, exors., administrators or assigns of all & every the other & others of them mutually & reciprocally, that none of the proprietors of any of the lots for the time being should at any time carry on thereon the business of an innkeeper. 2734. — Against whom enforceable—Person who has parted with interest.—In 1845 S. conveyed to a purchaser a piece of land for building purposes, & the purchaser covenanted not to allow the trade of a retailer of beer or licensed victualler to be exercised upon the premises. A house was built upon the land, & in Mar. 1852, it was opened by T. for the sale of beer. In May, 1852, S. gave notice to T. not to carry on the trade of a retailer of beer on the premises. In Sept. 1852, & again in Sept. 1853, T. applied for a public-house license, & these applications were successfully opposed by S. In Dec. 1853, T. transferred her business to H. In Aug. 1854, a bill was filed by S. against T. & H. to restrain them from carrying on the trade of a retailer of beer & licensed victualler:—Held: S. was not entitled to an injunction against T., who had parted with her interest before the bill was filed; nor against H., so far as the business of a retailer of beer was concerned, by reason of the delay in filing the bill. But an injunction was granted against H. to restrain him from carrying on the trade of a licensed victualler.—SCARISBRICK v. TUNBRIDGE (1854), 3 Eq. Rep. 240.

2735. — Purchaser of reversion—Subsequently purchasing lease.—The owner in fee of two plots of land demised the first for an hotel, & covenanted that he would not let any house or land, within a certain distance of it, to be used as an hotel. He demised the second plot, which was within the distance, to another person. Deft. purchased the reversion of the second plot & afterwards bought up the lease of it, but, as the ct. held, with notice of the restrictive covenant relating to the first lot:—Held: (1) he was in equity bound by that covenant; (2) on the construction of a covenant on the part of a lessor, not to "let" any house or any land for the erection of any house to be used as an hotel, the lessor, & those who claimed under him, could not allow any of his land to be used for that purpose.—JAY v. RICHARDSON (1862), 30 Beav. 563; 31 L. J. Ch. 398; 6 L. T. 177; 26 J. P. 356; 8 Jur. N. S. 689; 10 W. R. 412; 54 E. R. 1008.

Annotation:—Generally, Refd. Luker v. Dennis (1877), 26 W. R. 167.

2736. — Assignee of purchaser—Injunction suspended during term of assignee's tenant.—The purchaser of a plot of ground agreed that no building erected on it should be used as a public-house during twelve years & a half. The agreement did not appear on the conveyance. The purchaser's assignee built a public-house on the plot, & let it to a yearly tenant. The assignee had notice, but the tenant had not. On a bill against the assignee & his tenant, an injunction was granted to restrain the assignee from allowing the premises to be used as a public-house; the injunction to be suspended during the existing yearly tenancy, with an intimation that the assignee would be liable to committal unless he determined the tenancy.—CARTER v. WILLIAMS

2739. — — — — ——The purchaser of a freehold lot No. 712, on a building estate, brought an action for an injunction to restrain the tenant of another lot, No. 648, from setting up a nuisance in breach of restrictive covenants mutually entered into on purchase of the lots. Deft. was under-tenant of lot 648 from the lessee of the original purchaser, who on his purchase had covenanted with the owner of lot 712 (inter alia) not to retail beer. Deft. had recently commenced to sell beer on lot 648, which was the nuisance complained of:—Held: he was bound by the covenant, although he had had no notice of it.—THORNEWELL v. JOHNSON (1881), 50 L. J. Ch. 641; 44 L. T. 768; 29 W. R. 677.

2740. — Purchaser of lot unsold at auction.—Two lots of land were put up for sale under conditions which, after reciting that the vendor was possessed of adjoining property not included in the sale, provided that each purchaser should, in his conveyance, enter into a covenant with the vendor & the purchaser of the other lot not to use any building on his lot as a public-house, & to the conditions was annexed a form of covenant to this effect. No provision was made for the case of a lot remaining unsold. Lot 2 was purchased at the sale, & the purchaser signed a contract embodying the conditions. Lot 1 remained unsold:—Held: the purchaser was bound to enter into the restrictive covenant with the vendor.—Re MORDY & COWMAN (1884), 51 L. T. 721, C. A.

2741. — Assignee of purchaser—Vendor selling whole property to purchaser.—In Dec. 1898, the owner in fee of an hotel agreed to sell it to H., the predecessor in title of plffs. The contract provided that the conveyance should contain a covenant by H. restrictive of the user of the hotel

In 1886 certain land was sold & conveyed subject to a covenant to observe the following stipulation : " Except on lots marked ' tavern lots,' no hotel, tavern, public-house, beer house, shop, or other building for the sale of wines, spirits, ale, or stout, or any spirituous, malt, or excisable liquor, of any kind, shall be built upon any lot now offered for sale ; & on no lot shall any manufacture be carried on unless with the consent of the vendor, who shall be at liberty to grant a licence for same." In Jan. 1897 the lessees from the purchaser of two of the lots, which were not marked " tavern lots " with full notice of the covenant, erected a restaurant on the lots. This restaurant was opened to the public on Mar. 25, 1897, but without any wine, spirit, or beer licence. In Aug. 1897 a licence to sell wines & spirits was obtained. Thereupon the vendor, together with the purchaser of another lot, on which it was intended to erect a public-house, brought an action against the lessees, &

then moved for an interlocutory injunction to restrain them from using their restaurant for any of the purposes mentioned in the stipulation:—Held: the true meaning of the covenant was that no hotel, tavern, etc., should “be” upon any lot except marked “tavern lot”; it would not be possible to tell whether or not a house when it was in course of building was intended for a hotel, tavern, etc., but that the user of the house would have to be looked to before declaring that the covenant had been infringed. Pltfs. were entitled to the injunction claimed.—WEBB v. FAGOTTI BROTHERS (1898), 79 L. T. 683, C. A.

2750. — Waiver of breach—Delay—Breach not apparent.—Deft. A. was the purchaser in fee of a house & premises, part of an estate formerly the property of pltfs., of which all the purchasers of such parts as were sold, including A., were under a covenant not to use the house & premises so purchased, or any part thereof, as a public-house or beer shop. A. built a shop at the back of his premises, & on Feb. 11, without consent, but without interference on the part of pltfs., opened it as a beer shop. In June he leased the beer shop to co-deft. B., who carried on the same business with the consent of A., but equally without consent of pltfs., who on July 8 served B., with notice to desist. It further appeared that a purchaser of another house on the same estate had also, without consent, but without interference on the part of pltfs., opened a beer shop at the back of his premises. The bill for an injunction was filed on Aug. 1:—Held: the conduct of pltfs. did not amount to such a degree of acquiescence & waiver as to preclude them from the right of enforcing the covenant.—MITCHELL v. STEWARD (1866), L. R. 1 Eq. 541; 35 L. J. Ch. 393; 14 L. T. 134; 30 J. P. 358; 14 W. R. 453.

Annotation:—Reid. Knight v. Simmonds, [1896] 2 Ch. 294.

2751. — Long continued acquiescence.—On a sale of part of the C. estate, the purchasers entered into a covenant with the vendors, “their & each of their heirs & assigns, & also separately with the owners & owner, lessors & lessees for the time being, or other the persons or person for the time being entitled to the receipt of the rents & profits of any part of” the C. estate, against (inter alia) keeping a beer shop on any part of the premises sold. In an action brought by subsequent purchasers of the C. estate to restrain a breach of this covenant:—Held: they had lost their right to bring an action by long-continued acquiescence in breaches of the covenant both by deft., & other similar covenantors, & consequently were not entitled either to an injunction or to any damages. Seem: they were not entitled to sue on the covenant at law, even for nominal damages.—KELSEY v. DODD (1881), 52 L. J. Ch. 34.

2752. Offensive trade—What constitutes breach—Butcher’s shop—Involving slaughtering.—The business of a butcher, though involving the slaughtering of beasts on the premises, is not necessarily an “offensive, noisy, or noisome trade” within the meaning of a restrictive covenant in a lease or conveyance prohibiting the carrying on of such trades.—CLEAVER v. BACON (1887), 4 T. L. R. 27.

(c) Covenants affecting Adjoining Property.

2754. Meaning of “adjoining.”—A vendor of a piece of land took from the purchaser a covenant that he would not do, or suffer to be done, on the premises, or any part thereof, anything which should be a nuisance to the vendor or his tenants, or the occupiers or owners of the “adjoining” property, or the houses to be built thereon. The purchaser, immediately after the sale, put up the piece of land again for sale by auction in lots, under conditions which required each purchaser to enter into a covenant in similar terms to the above; & each of the purchasers did enter into a covenant with his vendor that he would not do or suffer to be done on any of the premises anything which should, would, or might be deemed a nuisance to the original vendor, or the occupiers of proprietors for the time being of the “adjoining” property, or the houses to be built thereon:—Held: by the word “adjoining” in the last-mentioned covenant was meant the property adjoining each lot, & not merely the property adjoining the whole piece of land originally sold; & the owner of any lot was entitled to enforce the covenant against the owner of any other lot.—HARRISON v. GOOD (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 338; 40 L. J. Ch. 294; 24 L. T. 263; 35 J. P. 612; 19 W. R. 346.

2755. ——In a covenant by a lessor not to allow a certain trade to be carried on in the “adjoining premises,” the word “adjoining” was confined to the two houses on either side of the demised premises, although the lessor was at the time of the lease the owner of a block of buildings, of which these formed part only.—VALE & SONS v. MOORGATE STREET & BROAD STREET BUILDINGS, LTD. & BAKER (ALBERT) & CO., LTD. (1899), 80 L. T. 487.

2756. ——In a conveyance on sale of a portion of pltfs. land to deft., the purchaser covenanted that he would not “in the erection of buildings adjoining the hereditaments of the vendors” permit the insertion of any “lights” overlooking such premises. Deft. constructed a number of houses, the backs of which were 20 ft. from the boundary fence separating the two properties. Their gardens or yards reached this fence & there were windows in the houses which overlooked pltfs. land:—Held: the houses did not “adjoin” pltfs. land within the meaning of the covenant.—IND, COOPE & CO., LTD. v. HAMBLIN (1900), 84 L. T. 168, C. A.

Annotations:—Distd. Cave v. Horsell, [1912] 3 K. B. 533. Reid. Derby Motor Cab Co. v. Crompton & Evans Union Bank (1913), 29 T. L. R. 673.

2757. — Against letting for particular business.—Deft., being the owner of certain house property, which included five shops, numbered 2 to 6, Limes Parade, let to pltfs. the shop No. 4, Limes Parade, for twenty-one years, the lessor covenanting that he would not at any time during the continuance of the lease let “any of the adjoining shops belonging to me on the Limes estate," for the purpose of the businesses of upholsterers, cabinet makers, furniture dealers, or French polishers. Subsequently, during the continuance of the lease, deft. let to a tenant the shop No. 6, Limes Parade, for a term of twenty-one years for the purpose of carrying on the business (inter alia) of a cabinet maker:—Held: the word "adjoining" was not confined to the two shops physically in contact with the demised shop, but it extended to No. 6, & there had therefore been a breach of deft.'s covenant in respect of which plffs. were entitled to recover damages.—CAVE v. HORSELL, [1912] 3 K. B. 533; 81 L. J. K. B. 981; 107 L. T. 186; 28 T. L. R. 543, C. A.

(d) Covenants as to Use and Maintenance of Garden.

2758. Against whom enforceable—Vendor.—DEANE v. RAMSGATE CORPN. (1892), 8 T. L. R. 199, C. A.

2759. — Against purchaser—At instance of another purchaser.—By deed a vendor after granting in fee a site upon which a row of houses known as Stanley Gardens was being built, granted to the purchaser "his heirs exors. administrators & assigns & his & their lessees & sub-lessees or tenants, being occupiers for the time being" of Stanley Gardens, "& for his & their families & friends," the use of a garden adjoining. Nothing in the deed defined the class of houses in Stanley Gardens. Defts. were an incorporated co. who had purchased several of the houses for the purpose of affording a residential home & club for ladies engaged in professional work, where for a small weekly payment in advance members were provided with a furnished bedroom with use of public rooms, food being charged for at reasonable rates & paid for weekly. A small sum was paid by defts. towards the maintenance of the garden in respect of each of the houses held by them:—Held: the members of the club, whether resident or not, were not "lessees" or "sub-lessees" or "tenants" or "families" or "friends" of defts. within the meaning of the deed, & were not entitled to the use of the garden, & defts. were not entitled to authorise them to use it.—KEITH v. TWENTIETH CENTURY CLUB, LTD. (1904), 73 L. J. Ch. 545; 90 L. T. 775; 52 W. R. 554; 20 T. L. R. 462; 48 Sol. Jo. 458.

(e) Other Cases.

2762. Covenant not to dispose of water—Whether runs with land.—Covenant upon a conveyance in fee with the grantors, lessees of waterworks, not to sell or dispose of water from a well to the injury of the proprietors of the said waterworks, their heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns.

Qu.: whether the covenant runs with the land, so as to bind, & be enforced by, assignees, whether it is contrary to the policy of the law, & as to the effect of a renewal of the lease.

The parties left to law, & a demurrer allowed, from the inconvenience of enforcing such a covenant by injunction.—COLLINS v. PLUMB (1810), 16 Ves. 454; 33 E. R. 1057, L. C.

2763. Covenant not to permit opening of warehouse door—Door opened in premises not in occupation of purchaser.—Plffs. enfeoffed deft. with a piece of land bounded on the west by a street, & on the east part by buildings belonging to deft., & part by buildings belonging to W. G. Deft. covenanted "that he would not, at any time after the enfeoffment, permit or suffer any warehouse door to be opened or put out to the front of the street." A warehouse door was put out in the buildings belonging to W. G., at the eastern extremity of deft.'s land, about 8 feet distant from, but giving access to the street:—Held: this was a breach of the covenant by deft., though the premises in which the door was put out, did not stand upon his land, were not in his occupation, & were not level with the front of the street.—LIVERPOOL CORPN. v. TOMLINSON (1826), 7 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 556.

2766. Covenant against fixing operative machinery—Switchback railway.—Deft. was bound by the restrictive covenants of a building estate that no "operative machinery" should be fixed or fastened on the land held by him, & also that "no hut, tent, shed, caravan, house on wheels, or other chattel," should be "erected, made, placed, or be allowed to remain upon any lot":—Held: a switchback railway erected upon piles driven into the ground was "operative machinery," & was also a "chattel" within the meaning of the covenant.—CHAMBERLAYNE v. COLLINS (1894), 70 L. T. 217; 10 T. L. R. 233; 9 R. 311, C. A.

2768. Covenant to keep windows obscured—Whether runs with land.]—A builder, L., who had entered into an agreement with a landlord by which a lease of certain property was to be granted him on the completion of certain buildings thereon, covenanted with B., the owner of adjoining land, that the windows in the said buildings facing B.'s land should be obscured & fixed. A block of flats was erected & a lease granted to L., by whom it was subsequently mortgaged & the equity of redemption released. Deft. became tenant of one of the flats & opened one of the fixed windows:—Held: the covenant was a restrictive covenant, binding on the leasehold interest, of which deft. had constructive notice, & could be enforced by injunction.—ABBEY v. GUTTERES (1911), 55 Sol. Jo. 364.

D. Remedies in case of Breach.

(a) In General.

2769. Who may proceed—Joinder of parties not injuriously affected.]—Each of the original owners of houses in a row entered into covenants with the original owner of all the land on which they stood as to what should be done in the garden attached to each house:—Held: the other owners of houses were not necessary parties to a suit by one to restrain a breach of the covenants.

I think that the owner of a house, who is injuriously affected by acts which are contrary to the covenant, may proceed against the party who commits them, without requiring the other owners, to whom they are not in the smallest degree prejudicial, to join him in the suit (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).—*WESTERN v. 2770. Specific performance.]—Where land is conveyed in fee, by deed of feoffment, subject to a perpetual ground rent, & the feoffee covenants for himself, his heirs & assigns, with the feoffor, the owner of adjoining lands, his heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, not to use the land in particular manner, with a view to the more ample enjoyment by the feoffor of such adjoining lands, & the subsequent acts of the feoffor, or of those claiming under him, have so altered the character & condition of the adjoining lands that, with reference to the land conveyed, the restriction in the covenant ceases to be applicable according to the intent & spirit of the contract, a ct. of equity will not interpose to enforce the covenant, but will leave the parties to law.

Sec. further, SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

2771. Injunction.]—A railway co. having conveyed to A. a piece of land abutting on their viaduct, with a covenant not to build within 6 feet of the wall of the viaduct, the ct., in an action against A.'s widow, who took by assignment, for building against the wall in breach of the covenant, in which action she had suffered judgment by default, refused to grant an injunction against her commanding her to remove the building; it appearing that it had been erected by her under tenant, & consequently that she could not obey the writ, if granted.—*LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 2772. —.—Where a vendor, having taken from each of several purchasers of plots of building land, formerly the same estate, a covenant to build only in a specified manner, has permitted, without interference, material breaches of the covenant to be committed by some of the purchasers, he cannot obtain an injunction to compel another purchaser to observe the same covenant; & there is no difference in the case where the covenant is not only a covenant by each purchaser with the vendor, but also a covenant by each purchaser with all the others; nor in the case where the breaches have been committed before deft. became a purchaser, & executed the deed of covenant.—PEEK v. MATTHEWS (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 515; 16 L. T. 199; 15 W. R. 689.

2774. —.—Pltf. was the owner of a piece of land which he had purchased some years before, & which formed part of an estate which was sold in lots for a general building scheme. Each of the purchasers entered into a restrictive covenant with the vendor not to erect any buildings beyond a certain line, such covenant to be only personally binding on the covenantor in respect of breaches committed during his seisin. Four years after pltf.'s purchase deft., who had notice of the covenant, purchased the residue of a mtge. term in a lot opposite pltf.'s. on which about the time of pltf.'s purchase a bakehouse had been erected beyond the line violation of the covenant. Deft. proceeded to erect a wooden stable, also beyond the line. No complaint had been made by pltf. of the building erected prior to deft.'s purchase; but on deft. proceeding to erect the stable, he commenced an action for an injunction to restrain deft. from allowing any of the buildings erected beyond the building line to continue:—Held: the injunction must be confined to the building erected personally by deft.—GASKIN v. BALLS (1879), 13 Ch. D. 324; 28 W. R. 552, C. A.

2776. —.]—A building estate was laid out in lots, which were sold by the owners of the estate to different purchasers, each of whom covenanted with the vendors & with the purchasers of the other lots entitled to the benefit of the covenant not to build a shop on his land, or to use his house as a shop or to carry on any trade therein. The purchaser of one of the lots, who occupied his house as a private residence, brought an action against the purchaser of another lot, who was using his house as a beershop with an "off" license, to restrain him from breaking his covenant & for damages. Pltf. had known for three years before the action was commenced that deft. was using his house as a beershop, & had himself bought beer at the shop. There was evidence that some of the houses built on other lots had been for some time used as shops notwithstanding the covenant, & that some of the houses near pltf.'s house were occupied, not each by a single tenant, but by two families at weekly rents:—Held: the change in the character of the neighbourhood was not in itself a ground for refusing relief to pltf., as the change was not caused by his conduct; but pltf. had lost the right to enforce his covenant either by injunction or damages, through his acquiescence in the proceedings of deft.—SAYERS v. COLLYER (1884), 28 Ch. D. 103; 54 L. J. Ch. 1; 51 L. T. 723; 49 J. P. 244; 33 W. R. 91; 1 T. L. R. 45, C. A.

2778. —.]—Certain lots forming part of a building estate, were subject to a restrictive covenant that no building on any lot should be erected or used as a shop, workshop, warehouse, or factory, nor should any trade or manufacture be carried on on any lot. Since 1886, W. carried on the business of a laundryman on one of the lots. In July, 1893, he commenced to build on a lot of which he was the owner, a building adapted solely for the purposes of his business. An owner of other of the lots, thereupon commenced an action to restrain the erection of the building. The evidence showed that all the buildings erected on the lots were private residences, but that in several of them trades, e.g. dressmaking, boot repairing, & washing, had for some time openly been carried on. It also appeared that pltf. had kept cows on some of his lots, & had sold their milk at a shed erected on the lots for their use, that he had discontinued this business in 1886, & that subsequently he had temporarily let a part of these lots to a mason, & permitted him to erect & use a shed thereon for the purposes of his business:—Held: deft. had committed a breach of the covenant; the breach was greater & more serious than any previously committed; having regard to that fact, pltf. was entitled to relief, & accordingly an injunction ought to be granted.—MEREDITH v. WILSON (1893), 69 L. T. 336.

2779. —.]—Where all the purchasers of lots of an estate are bound by restrictive covenants not to allow any trade or business to be carried on upon their lots, equitable relief in enforcing the covenants will be refused if the party suing has debarred himself from such relief by delay or acquiescence or if the property has been so laid out & used that the object of the covenants, namely the preserving the property as a residential property can no longer be attained; but it will not be refused merely because in a few instances the covenants have not been enforced.—KNIGHT v. SIMMONDS, [1896] 2 Ch. 294; 65 L. J. Ch. 583; 71 L. T. 563; 44 W. R. 580; 12 T. L. R. 401; 40 Sol. Jo. 531, C. A.

2780. —.]—(1) The ct. will not generally infer that a building scheme was intended, where the contract leaves undefined the property to be bound by the conditions which are to apply, & does not bind the vendor to observe the conditions in the meantime as to property remaining unsold, especially where the vendor has the right to modify the conditions as to the unsold part.

(2) Where a restrictive covenant is entered into for the benefit of the covenantee personally, & not to secure the amenities of his property or as a part of a building scheme, pltf. will not lose his right to enforce the covenant by injunction, on the ground that there has been a change in the character of the neighbourhood, unless he himself has been guilty of some act or omission raising a personal equity against him.—*OSBORNE v. Purchasers of land laid out upon a building scheme in 1862 covenanted to observe certain stipulations, one of which prohibited any trade or manufacture from being carried on upon the estate. Subsequent purchasers of other land on the estate purchased with notice of & subject to this covenant. One of them had permitted four houses upon land purchased by him to be turned into shops:—Held: in the circumstances, his exors. were entitled to restrain a purchaser from him from carrying on the trade of a fried fish vendor on his premises, in breach of the original covenant.—PULLEYNE v. In an action by the owner of the unsold portions of the estate against the purchasers for a breach of the covenant defts. contended that pltf. had caused a change in the character of the neighbourhood by permitting the erection of shops, & that the covenant merely meant that no dwelling-house should be converted into a shop:—Held: defts. had failed to prove a change in the character of the neighbourhood, & they had committed a breach of the covenant & pltf. was entitled to an injunction against them.—RAMUZ v. iii. Breach by Plaintiff.

2800. Whether remedy lost.]—On the sale of an estate in plots for building purposes, a deed of covenant was executed by all the purchasers, whereby they covenanted with the trustees, each purchaser covenanting with regard to the plot purchased by him, to observe certain stipulations as to the number of houses to be built on the plots, the building lines & other similar matters. Pltf. was owner of certain of these plots on which a house had been erected & grounds laid out. Deflt. had contracted for the purchase of some adjoining plots on which he was commencing to build more houses than were allowed by the deed of covenant, & in a position at variance with the building line therein laid down. The houses so built would overlook pltf.'s grounds somewhat more than if built within the building line. Pltf. claimed an injunction & deflt. pleaded that in several other instances, the original vendors, who were trustees under the deed of covenant for all the purchasers, had allowed considerable breaches of the covenants to be committed without interference, that they were therefore disentitled to enforce the covenants against deflt., & that pltf. as claiming under them, could not be in any better position. It also appeared that pltf.'s own house was built 2 feet in advance of the building line:—Held: as the breaches of covenant allowed by the trustees were committed in relation to other portions of the property, not affecting pltf.'s enjoyment of his plots, they could not be set up against him, & the deviation with regard to his own house was too trifling to affect his right.—JACKSON v. laid out for building under a general scheme, contained restrictive covenants as to the front building line, & also as to the distance to which the buildings should be carried in the rear. Pltfs. claimed an injunction to restrain defts., & damages :—Held : (1) the two covenants were independent of each other, & a breach by one of the purchasers as to the building line in the rear did not deprive him of the right to relief against a breach of covenant as to the first building line by an adjoining owner ; (2) immaterial breaches of covenant as to the first building line did not deprive pltf. of the right to relief.—CHITTY v. BRAY (1883), 48 L. T. 860 ; 47 J. P. 695.

2802. ——. [Consd.]—Certain lands were subject to a building scheme, the provisions of which were contained in a deed of 1854. The purchaser of a plot was informed by the vendor in good faith that the original deed was lost or destroyed, & what purported to be a true copy was produced. This copy subsequently proved to be defective.

An action was brought by an adjoining owner to restrain deft. from erecting or allowing to remain upon his land certain buildings which contravened the provision as to a building line. The property in respect of which he was entitled to sue had certain erections upon it contravening another building stipulation, which provided that no erection should be built within 4 feet of a boundary fence :—Held : pltf. had only committed a trivial breach of a trivial covenant & such a breach did not disentitle pltf. from having the building stipulations strictly enforced.—*HOOPER v. 2806. ——. [Consd.]—EFFECT ON REMEDY OF SUB-PURCHASER.—(1) Where an estate is sold in lots at successive sales under a building scheme imposing restrictive stipulations on the lots, a purchaser can only enforce the stipulations against property shown as allotted in the plan & subject to the stipulations at the sale at which he purchases.

A purchaser can enforce the stipulations, although his conveyance contains an accidental or, semble, an intentional departure therefrom, as, notwithstanding the form of the conveyance, the purchaser is not entitled to the benefit of this departure as against other purchasers, nor are they bound by it.

(2) Semble : a sub-purchaser of part of a lot can enforce the stipulations, although, previously to his purchase, his vendor had committed a breach on another part.

(3) Where property is sold under an open contract, & no restrictions appear on the title, the mere fact that the vendor's solr. proposes to insert restrictive stipulations in the conveyance, which are partly waived & partly insisted on, is not sufficient to affect the purchaser or his solr. with notice that the property is already subject to restrictions.—ROWELL v. SATCHEL, [1903] 2 Ch. 212 ; 73 L. J. Ch. 20 ; 89 L. T. 267.

2807. Application for modification—Stay of proceedings pending application to authority.—On Jan. 28, 1926, pltf. as tenant for life of a settled estate brought an action to restrain defts. from using certain premises at Blackburn for the purposes of a school in breach of restrictive covenants relating to the property. Defts. had purchased their property with notice of the restrictive covenants, & admitted that the school was carried on in breach thereof, but claimed that owing to the changes in the character of the neighbourhood they were entitled to a modification of the restrictive covenants so as to permit of the carrying on of this school. They accordingly moved in the action, pursuant to Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 84 (9), for leave to apply to the statutory authority under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 84, & that in the meantime the proceedings in the action should be stayed :—Held : on the ground of the ct. having no jurisdiction to give defts. such modified relief as they claimed, circumstances existed which justified the making of the order asked, but they must proceed with their application forthwith.—*FEILDEN v. 2820. ———.]—Releasors covenanted that for & notwithstanding any act, etc., by them or any or either of them done to the contrary, they had good title to convey certain lands in fee; & also, that they or some or one of them, for & notwithstanding any such matter or thing as aforesaid, had good right & full power to grant, etc., & likewise that the releasee should peaceably & quietly enter, hold, & enjoy the premises granted without the lawful let or disturbance of the releasors or their heirs or assigns, or for or by any other person or persons whatsoever, & that the releasee should be kept harmless & indemnified by the releasors, & their heirs against all other titles, charges, etc., save & except the chief rent issuing & payable out of the premises to the lord of the fee:—Held: (1) the generality of the covenant for quiet enjoyment against the releasors & their heirs, & any other person or persons whatsoever, was not restrained by the qualified covenants for good title & right to convey, for & notwithstanding any act done by the releasors to the contrary. But if the covenant for quiet enjoyment were to be restrained to the acts of the releasors by any qualifying context, then the declaration in covenant, stating it by itself in its own absolute terms, without such qualifying context belonging to it, seems to be an untrue statement of the deed in substance & effect, which deft. may take advantage of upon the general issue of non est factum, as a variance & ground of nonsuit, or of a verdict for him.

(2) The covenant for title is an assurance to the purchaser, that the grantor has the very estate in quantity & quality which he purports to convey, viz. in this case an indefeasible estate in fee simple. The covenant for quiet enjoyment is an assurance against the consequences of a defective title, & of any disturbances thereupon (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—HOWELL v. 2817 i. Covenant for seisin—Synonymous with covenant for right to convey.]—The usual covenant for good title runs with the land, & it is no objection therefore to an action by the assignee of the covenantee, that because according to the statement in the declaration, “the grantor was not seized in fee when he gave his covenant,” the covenant was broken as soon as made, & could not inure to the benefit of the assignee.—SCOTT v. 2821. Construction of covenant.]—A man covenanted that he had done no act "whereby" the estate in question could be affected in title. Breach assigned that, in fact, he had previously executed a certain deed between certain parties, "whereby" the estate was affected in title. Deft. pleaded over. The pleadings went on to demurrer. Deft. then contended that the breach was assigned in equivocal terms, because the word "whereby" might apply either to the deed itself, or merely to the execution of it by him; & if it were the first, it was no breach in him: Conceded, as to the equivocality; but held to have been cured by the pleading over.

A covenant that a man has not "permitted or suffered" any act which has a certain effect, is consistent with his having previously consented to such an act by another person, his own consent not being a necessary impediment to the transaction.—HOBSON v. MIDDLETON (1827), 6 B. & C. 295; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 249; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 160; 108 E. R. 461.

2822. Devisee of land.]—Covenant lies by devisee of lands in fee upon a covenant made by deft. to testator, to whom deft. conveyed the lands in fee, that deft. was lawfully seised, etc., & had a good right to convey, etc.; for such covenant runs with the land, & though broken in the lifetime of testator, is a continuing breach in the time of the devisee, & it is sufficient to allege for damage that thereby the lands are of less value to the devisee, & that he is prevented from selling them so advantageously.—*KINGDON v. Some time afterwards B. sold & covenanted to surrender the copyholds to C. & covenanted for the title as against his own acts only; & B. afterwards surrendered to C.:—Held: the original covenants were capable of being enforced against A., for that either they ran with the land, or C. was entitled to sue on them in B.'s name.—*RIDDELL v. representing to them that it was a conveyance of a piece of land not previously purchased by him. By this deed, which recited that testator was seised in fee at his death, & recited his will, by which he devised his real estate to the vendors giving them a power of sale, recited his death, & that the vendors in exercise of the power had contracted for the sale to T. of this piece of land in fee simple free from incumbrances, & that S. as beneficial owner had agreed to concur, S. & R. granted, & S. confirmed, the land to T. in fee & S. & R. entered into the usual trustee covenant that they had done no act to incumber, & S. also covenanted for title. T. then mortgaged this land to plffs. Some years afterwards B. took possession, & plffs.' security proved worthless. Plffs. sued S. & R. for indemnity on the ground that S. & R. had by the second conveyance to T. misrepresented their title, & in the alternative for damages on the covenants:—Held: the second conveyance to T. did not contain any such distinct averment that defts. were seised of the estate when they executed that conveyance as would estop them from denying that they were so seised; & as plffs. had no legal estate by estoppel or otherwise with which the covenants could run, plffs. could not sue the vendors on their covenants.—*ONWARD BUILDING SOCIETY v. At the time of this agreement deft. had not acquired any easement in respect of the cornice, spouts, or windows, by twenty years' user:—Held: there was no breach of deft.'s limited covenant for title, which was only against acts of his which might destroy or make worse an existing title, which in this case he never had.—*THACKERAY v. Dft. covenanted with J., his appointees, heirs, & assigns, for title, for quiet enjoyment, & against incumbrances. In 1846 J. appointed part of the land to pltf., who built on it, & who was not aware of the coal workings. In 1865 the lands & houses subsided, owing to workings carried on before J. bought. In 1848 some fire clay was taken by the lessees; the value was small, & the taking illegal; but this did not contribute to the damages. In 1867 pltf., as J.'s appointee, sued deft. on the covenants, alleging the entry & working of the lessees as breaches:—Held: (1) the benefit of the covenants passed to pltf. as appointee, that a variance between the time of working as laid in the declaration, & as proved, was fatal; (2) there was no breach of the covenant for title, that pltf. had bought the land without the coal; the covenant for quiet enjoyment was not broken by what was done in 1848; the making of the agreement if a breach at all was not a continuing breach, that the action was barred by Stat. Limitations.—SPOOR v. GREEN (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 99; 43 L. J. Ex. 57; 30 L. T. 393; 22 W. R. 547.

The plan included a small strip of land some 150 feet long by 36 feet wide which had formerly formed part of Bank Hey Farm, but as to which at the date of the conveyance an adverse title under Stat. Limitations had been acquired by the adjoining owners & which was occupied by them or their tenants. At the date of the conveyance only the land occupied by H. was known as Bank Hey Farm, & part of the land described as in the occupation of C. was sub-let by him. The acreage was not an exact measurement:—Held: (1) the description by reference to the plan ought to prevail & the strip of land was included in the conveyance; (2) the omission of the vendor to prevent the acquisition of an adverse title to the strip of land under Stat. Limitations constituted a breach of the implied covenant for the right to convey under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 7 (1) (A).—EASTWOOD v. ASHTON, [1915] A. C. 900; 84 L. J. The appeal substantially affirmed the original decree, & the purchaser thereupon paid the mtge. debt & interest & costs. The vendor having become bkpt. in 1858:—Held: the purchaser was not entitled to prove for the costs of the appeal, but he was entitled under the covenant for good right to convey, to prove for the amount of principal, interest, & costs other than the costs of appeal, which he had paid, although such amount exceeded the purchase-

2838. ———. Effect of condition excluding liability for incorrect statements.]—In 1911 the vendor as beneficial owner conveyed to the purchaser a farm with the message, closes, or parcels of land belonging thereto, called Bank Hey Farm, containing 84 acres 3 roods 4 poles, or thereabouts, & in the occupation as to part thereof by T. & as to the remainder thereof by C., all which premises were more particularly described in the plan indorsed thereon & coloured red. The plan included a small strip of land some 100 feet long by 30 feet wide which had formerly formed part of Bank Hey Farm, but as to which it was admitted for the purposes of this action that at the date of the conveyance an adverse title under Stat. Limitations had been acquired by adjoining owners, & in the view the ct. took of the evidence the acts of the adjoining owners had been brought to the notice of the vendor, who became entitled in possession to the property in 1900 under the will of testator who died in 1883. Condition 14 of the conditions of sale under which the vendor sold provided that any incorrect statement in the particulars was not to annul the sale, nor was the vendor or purchaser to be allowed compensation in respect thereof. In an action by the purchaser to recover damages from the vendor under the covenants for title implied by the vendor conveying this strip of land as beneficial owner:—Held: (1) condition 14 did not, after the execution of the conveyance, prevent the purchaser from recovering damages against the vendor under the covenants for title implied by the vendor conveying as beneficial owner in any case to which such covenants were applicable; (2) the measure of damages was not the difference in price which would have been obtained at the sale if the disputed strip had not been included in the lot sold, but the difference in value of the land as purporting to be conveyed & the land as it actually passed to the purchaser.—*EASTWOOD v. 2852. ——Value of land from which purchaser evicted.]—Although 32 Hen. 8, c. 9, s. 2, cannot be said to have been repealed by Real Property Act, 1845 (c. 106), s. 6, nevertheless since the passing of the latter statute a grant of lands to which the grantor has a title existing in fact, but of which he has never been in possession, & on which he is entitled only to a right of entry, will be valid, even although at the time of the grant a litigation is pending as to the title to the lands. A. sought to recover by ejectment certain lands; the person in possession, amongst other defences, alleged that one-fourth share thereof belonged to B., who had never been in possession. Thereupon A., for the sum of £10, took from B. a conveyance dated July 4, 1877, of his share, containing covenants for title & quiet enjoyment. The actual value of B.'s share was £500. A. then recovered possession of the lands. Before the date of the conveyance B. had been bkpt., & after A. had recovered possession of the lands, B.'s trustees in bkpey. recovered possession from A. of the one-fourth share which had been conveyed by B. to A. 2865. —. —. In Platt's Law of Covenants, however, it is laid down (p. 331) that a covenant against incumbrances in similar form where no incumbrances are specified is not broken by the existence of incumbrances, but that an actual interruption of enjoyment at least by claim or demand on the purchaser is necessary to justify an action. This seems to me the correct construction of the covenant (NEVILLE, J.).—NORTIDGE v. DERING, RABAN v. DERING, [1909] 2 Ch. 647; 79 L. J. Ch. 65; 101 L. T. 491; on appeal, [1910] 1 Ch. 297, C. A.

2883. Action on covenant.—A. purchased property which was conveyed to him in fee with a covenant only for quiet enjoyment, by B. the vendor. Within a month A. mortgaged the property to C. to secure a sum of money & interest, but was afterwards, after an action of ejectment evicted by D., who claimed by a title paramount to A. & B. A. defended the action without consulting B., & incurred costs thereby. A. then brought an action against B. upon his covenant; but was stopped by a plea that at the date of the eviction the legal estate in the premises was not in A., but C. B. afterwards paid off the mtge., C., the mtgee., handing him over the mtge. deed, & signing an acknowledgment by indorsement thereon, of the receipt of the mtge. money & interest from the deft. B., & the same was in full satisfaction & discharge of the mtge. debt, & of all right of action or demand on the part of the mtgee. against B. under the covenant for quiet enjoyment. A bill having been filed by A. against B. praying that A. might be declared entitled to the benefit of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, & for a reference to the master to assess the damage sustained by A. plff., in consequence of the breach of such covenant:—Held: A. had clearly a right to have the damages assessed; & leave was accordingly given to him to bring an action upon the covenant within a time mentioned in the order, B. being at the same time restrained from setting up, in defence to the action, the mtge. deed or the indorsement thereon.—*THORNTON v. 2889. — —.]—If a person covenant to convey lands to a purchaser, his heir need not aver notice of his title in a declaration founded on a breach of covenant by the covenantor; & even if it be necessary, an averment of a request is sufficient to imply such notice. Where, therefore, in an action by the heir of a purchaser, to whom an estate had been conveyed in fee by a tenant for life under a covenant that his first son who should attain the age of twenty-one, should, at the request of the purchaser or his heirs, by such common recovery, fine, & other assurances as counsel should advise, effectually convey the premises to the purchaser, & he having died, & his heir having requested the tenant for life to cause his eldest son, then of age, to suffer a recovery, & the tenant for life having refused to do so. In a declaration on this covenant by the heir of the purchaser against the tenant for life:—Held: it was not necessary to aver that the latter had notice of the heir's having become entitled to the property; it was unnecessary to allege a request by the heir to the son of the tenant for life to suffer the recovery, as the covenant was entered into by his father, neither was it necessary to aver that counsel had advised a recovery to be suffered, nor that the heir of the purchaser had offered to make a tenant to the procurator.—*BLICKE v. (b) What further Assurance may be required.

2896. General rule.]—Semble: unless there be words in a conveyance to show it was intended that the covenant for further assurance should extend to enlarging the estate conveyed, & to barring an interest in other persons than the grantor, the ct. will not resort to its extraordinary jurisdiction for specific performance, to compel the grantor to execute an assurance of a kind that was not contemplated when the grant was made.

The covenant for further assurance in a deed is a covenant intended to give full effect & operation to the estate & interest conveyed by the deed. Where it is sought to extend the operation of a general covenant of that kind to the execution of an instrument which would bar a title in others, which would continue but for the execution of the instrument sought to be executed, I have always understood that an express stipulation to that effect is necessary between the contracting parties. For that reason it has, so far as I know, never been considered that a covenant for further assurance implied, without regard to the other covenants in the deed, a covenant to levy a fine, or to suffer a recovery, or to surrender a copyhold. The utmost extent to which the ct. has gone, with reference to covenants for further assurance, has been to extend their operation to that very estate & interest which are conveyed by the deed (STUART, V. C.).—DAVIS v. TOLLEMACHE (1856), 28 L. T. O. S. 188; 2 Jur. N. S. 1181.

2903. Covenant for production of documents—Partnership books—Conditional sale by trustee.]

A. conveys lands to trustees on trust to sell if the unsatisfied debts of a partnership, in which he had been concerned, should at a given time exceed £40,000; the trustees sell & convey to the purchaser by a deed, which recites that the debts of the partnership exceeded the specified amount & that A. had died intestate, as to his real estates; & the heir-at-law of A. joins in that deed, & enters into a covenant for the title of the trustees, a covenant against all acts done by him or his father, & a covenant for further assurance: it afterwards appears to be uncertain whether A. had not devised his real estate, & the purchaser files a bill to have protection against, or remedy of, the alleged defect in his title, which this discovery created:—Held: the purchaser was not entitled to have an account taken of the debts of the partnership, in order to establish the fact of their having, at the specified time, exceeded the specified amount; he is not entitled to have the books & documents connected with the accounts of the partnership, delivered to him or deposited for safe custody; he is not entitled to a covenant, either from the heir or from any other person, for the production of those books & papers.—*HALLETT v. 2905. Conveyance of property—When dishonestly acquired.]—S. obtained a loan of £7,700, which he knew to be trust money, upon the security of hereditaments which he mortgaged in fee to H. & C., the trustees. S. in 1859 contracted to sell part of the hereditaments to B. & others for £3,080, but on C. representing that H. was abroad, & that it would delay the sale to get H.'s signature, S. agreed with C. to conceal the mtge. C. gave up the title deeds to B., & the other purchasers, to whom S. made conveyances as owner in fee. The conveyances contained recitals in the usual form that S. was seised or otherwise well entitled to an estate in fee simple in the properties comprised therein free from incumbrances, & contained the usual covenants by S. for further assurance. The purchasers had not notice of the mtge. C. received the purchase-money & gave S. a receipt signed by himself only. S. in 1869 sold further part of the hereditaments to P. for £1,500. On the occasion of this sale C. induced H. to execute a conveyance to P. of the property sold to him, & sign a receipt for the £1,500, & also to execute a reconveyance to S. of the property sold in 1859, upon the representation that sales were about to be made by S. to the amount of £1,500 & £3,080, & that the purchase-money would be paid in exchange for the reconveyance. S. at this time discovered that C. had not accounted to H. or his cestui que trusts for the £3,080, but he allowed P. to pay the purchase-money to C., who threatened to withhold from S. the reconveyance if he stopped the sale. C. received P.'s purchase-money & absconded.

H. filed his bill against C., S., B., & the other purchasers in 1859, & P.:—Held: the purchasers in 1859 had no right under the covenants by S. for further assurance as such covenants extended only to further assurance of estates or interests honestly acquired; the reconveyance to S. must be set aside; & as the purchasers in 1859 had possession of the title deeds & the estates, the ct. would not interfere with such possession, but would make a simple decree for foreclosure against them.—*HEATH v. 2906. Execution of disentailing deed.—A tenant in tail in remainder barred his estate tail without the consent of the protector, & afterwards conveyed all his estate & interest to a purchaser & covenanted that he would, at the request of the purchaser, his heirs or assigns, execute every such disentailing or other assurance as might be necessary to vest the premises in the purchaser, his heirs & assigns. The protector having died, the purchaser applied to the vendor to execute a disentailing deed to enlarge the base fee into a fee simple:—Held: the vendor was bound to execute such a deed, for his covenant was not confined to executing assurances to remedy any defects in the title to the base fee, but obliged him to execute an assurance to enlarge the base fee into a fee simple & he had power to execute an assurance which would have that effect, for Fines & Recoveries Act, 1833 (c. 74), s. 19, is not confined to cases where the tenant in tail is owner of the base fee into which his estate tail has been converted; sect. 47 of the Act does not interfere with the jurisdiction of the ct. to decree against a tenant in tail specific performance of a contract for disentailment entered into by him, but only prevents the ct. from treating the contract as being in equity a disposition taking effect under the Act so as to bind the issue in tail & remainderman.—BANKES v. SMALL (1887), 36 Ch. D. 716; 56 L. J. Ch. 832; 57 L. T. 292; 35 W. R. 765; 3 T. L. R. 740, C. A.

2907. Payment of charge—Estate subject to mortgage—Sale of undivided moiety.—The owner of an estate mortgaged it, & afterwards sold an undivided moiety of it. The conveyance to the purchaser did not mention the mtge., but it contained a covenant by the vendor with the purchaser for further assurance. The two moieties afterwards devolved on different persons. In a partition action:—Held: as between the owners of the two moieties, the unsold moiety must bear the mtge. debt.

The conveyance of the contingent moiety to the mother contained, not a covenant against incumbrances, but a covenant for further assurance, & it being a conveyance for value, in my opinion the grantee was by reason of that covenant entitled to call upon the grantor to pay off the charge (NORTH, J.).—*Re JONES, FARRINGTON v. Damages—Refusal of covenantor to join in execution of mortgage—What damages recoverable—Costs of preparation of mortgage.—The owners of building land, in consideration of pltf. paying off certain of their creditors, conveyed the land, discharged from all equity of redemption, to pltf. upon trust for sale, & out of the proceeds to pay off the first mtgees. their debt of £4,300, & in the next place to pay debt., a second mtgee., £350, & in the next place to repay pltf. the advances made to the creditors & all expenditure relating to the trusts, then a third mtgee. £100, & a fourth mtgee. £135, & lastly, to pay the surplus to the owners. The deed empowered pltf. to complete certain buildings on the land, making the moneys expended a charge on it, & also to raise by mtge a sum not exceeding £5,000 for carrying into effect the trusts of the deed, such mtge. to have priority over all the other mtges. except the first mtge. for £4,300. Deft. covenanted to execute all assurances for enabling pltf. to execute the trusts of the deed. Pltf. expended £1,100 in carrying out the trusts of the deed, & made arrangements for borrowing £5,000, & got the first mtgees. to agree to take £4,100 in discharge of their claim. After deft. had approved of the mtge. deed for the £5,000, he, at the last moment, refused to execute it. The result was, that the money was not advanced, & the first mtgees. sold the property, under a power of sale, for £4,510, which was exhausted in satisfaction of their debt & costs. Pltf. brought an action against deft. for the breach of his covenant, alleging that pltf. by reason of the breach was unable to pay off the first mtgees. & that they sold the property for less than its value :—Held : pltf. was only entitled to recover, as damages, the costs attending the preparation of the abortive mortgage.—*DUCKWORTH v. 2915. General rule—Completion of conveyance final—In absence of fraud—Or breach of contract or warranty.—After the purchaser has taken a conveyance & the purchase-money has been paid, no action can be maintained either at law or in equity for damages or compensation on account of errors as to the quantity or quality of the subject-matter of the sale, unless such error amount to a breach of some contract or warranty contained in the conveyance itself, or unless some fraud & deceit has been practised upon the purchaser (WATKIN WILLIAMS, J.).—*JOLIFFE v. property has been completed & a conveyance executed no action can, in the absence of fraud, be maintained by the purchaser against the vendor, in respect of errors of description in the particulars contained in the contract of sale but not contained in the conveyance, as all such particulars are merged in & put an end to by the subsequent conveyance. Pltfs. in their statement of claim alleged that by an agreement in writing they agreed with deft. to purchase from him an estate in fee simple, & that by this agreement which incorporated certain particulars of sale, deft. contracted & warranted that the mansion house was in first class order as to drainage & otherwise; that subsequently the purchase was completed & the conveyance executed, & that they then discovered serious defects in the drainage which they had to remedy. Though the purchaser has no remedy at law against the payment of the residue, for which he gave his bond, yet he would be entitled to relief in equity, on bringing his bill & showing, that though he has given his bond for payment of the residue of his purchase-money, yet, now he has notice of an incumbrance, under which circumstances the Court would stop payment of the money due on the bond (LORD TALBOT, C.).—*TOURVILLE v. The lessee accordingly erected a house on the plot of land. After the death of the tenant for life, the fee simple ultimately vested in H., who accepted rent at the rate above mentioned from J., who was a son of the original lessee & was then in possession of the house. H. afterwards conveyed the house & land to pltf. by indenture; the grant was made expressly subject to the supposed term of sixty years. No notice to quit had been given & the annual value of the house & land was about £6. Pltf. having sued to recover possession of the house & land:—Held: as the representative of the original lessee, under the indenture of Sept. 29, 1834, could not have sued H. for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, the void lease afforded no defence against pltf. claiming under the grant of a fee simple subject to it; that a tenancy from year to year had not been created by the payment of a rent at the rate of 6d. a year; & pltf. was entitled to immediate possession of the house & land.—*SMITH v. 2920. Purchaser taking possession of excess land—Right of vendor to recover—Costs.]—A purchaser in 1895 took possession of land in excess of that purported to be conveyed to him, & inclosed the land with a wall. In 1899 the vendors brought an action for declaration of title:—Held: deft. was bound to give up so much of the land as did not pass by his conveyance; he was not entitled to compensation for his expenditure thereon; there was a duty on the part of the vendors under the conditions of sale to stump out the plots, which in this case they had not done, therefore there would be no order as to costs.—MARRIOTT v. REID (1900), 82 L. T. 369; 64 J. P. 376.

2921. Recovery of damages for failure to preserve property—Between contract & completion.]—Where a vendor under a contract for sale of land keeps possession until completion & payment of the purchase-money, he is in the position of a trustee for the purchaser, & bound as such to take reasonable care to preserve the property.

While a vendor so remained in possession, a trespasser without his authority or knowledge removed large quantities of surface soil from the property. A conveyance of the land was subsequently executed, & completion took place, neither party being then aware of the removal of soil:—Held: notwithstanding the conveyance, the purchaser could maintain an action against the vendor for a breach of trust in taking no care to prevent such removal of the soil.—CLARKE v. RAMUZ, [1891] 2 Q. B. 456; 60 L. J. Q. B. 679; 65 L. T. 657; 56 J. P. 5; 7 T. L. R. 626, C. A.

2922. Recovery of damages for breach of collateral stipulation—After completion.]—S. agreed to buy a house in the course of erection from C., who agreed to supply & fix certain drains, stoves, fixtures, etc., & complete the house in a proper & workmanlike manner:—Held: notwithstanding the completion of the conveyance of the house S. could maintain an action against C. for failing to supply & fix certain articles, & for not completing the house in a proper & workmanlike manner.—SAUNDERS v. COCKRILL (1902), 87 L. T. 30, D. C.

SUB-SECT. 2.—RECOVERY OF PURCHASE-MONEY PAID.

2923. General rule—Not recoverable.]—He that purchases lands without any covenants or warranties against prior titles, as here, where defts. sold only their own title, if the land be afterwards evicted by an eigne title, can never exhibit a bill in equity to have his purchase-money again upon money paid for an estate conveyed to him by deed, upon the ground that deft., the vendor, was not lawfully seized; he must resort to his covenant.—M'LEAN v. HALL (1827), Tay. 491.—CAN.

2923 ii. ———.]—Where land has been sold & the deed executed, & there is no fraud, the purchaser cannot recover back the purchase-money in an action for money had & received, although he may have been evicted by title paramount. A. being reported the purchaser of one of the estates for £14,480, entered into possession & accepted the title, & proper conveyances were executed. On application by the creditors to have the purchase-money paid out, the purchaser stated that the tenants of the estate had been served with a writ of right at the suit of a person who claimed the whole estate under an adverse title. But the ct. thought that the purchaser having accepted the title, etc., could not now prevent the money being paid out of ct., & ordered accordingly.—THOMAS v. POWELL (1794), 2 Cox, Eq. 2927. ——— ——When an interest, either legal or equitable, in any real property has been sold, & the conveyance thereof has been executed by the parties to the same, the purchaser in the absence of fraud on the vendor's part cannot maintain an action for money received for his use to recover the price paid by him, if the vendor had no title to the property sold & his conveyance turns out to be worthless. In order to protect himself, a purchaser ought to take care that proper covenants are inserted in the deed of grant to him.

Defts. believing themselves to be entitled to an equity of redemption in a term of years, purported to convey the same to pltf. for £240. It afterwards appeared that they were not entitled to the equity of redemption, & that their conveyance was, in fact, worthless. Pltf. having sued for money received to his use was nonsuited:—Held: as defts. were innocent of fraud, the maxim "caveat emptor" applied, there was no such total failure of consideration as to entitle pltf. to maintain an action for money received, it was incumbent on pltf. to ascertain whether defts. had a good title to the equity of redemption, & the nonsuit was right.—*CLARE v. 2934. —.]—Trustees for sale put certain property, including two freehold houses, into the hands of an auctioneer to be sold. The property for sale comprised a scullery so situated that it might have belonged to either of the two houses. The auctioneer prepared a plan which clearly showed the scullery as part of lot 2, but, by some inadvertence, it was in the particulars of sale clearly included in lot 3. The person who subsequently became the purchaser of lot 2, having before the sale called the auctioneer's attention to the discrepancy, was informed by the latter that the plan was correct, & that the scullery was included in lot 2. He also orally pointed out the mistake at the sale, & informed those present that the scullery formed part of lot 2. Lot 2 was sold, but lot 3 was not sold. The conveyance of lot 2 was made, after an interview on the subject between the solr. of the vendors & of the purchaser, so as expressly to comprise the scullery. The purchaser, immediately after the execution of the conveyance, mortgaged lot 2. The vendors brought an action against the purchaser & his mtgees. for rectification of the conveyance, alleging that the scullery was included in the conveyance by mistake, as they had never authorised their agents to include it in lot 2, their attention never having been called to what had passed between their agents & the purchaser with reference to it, & that they had executed the conveyance without reading it. Pltfs. contended that, there being a written contract to sell lot 2 without the scullery, & that contract being free from ambiguity, parol evidence to vary it was not admissible:—Held: even apart from the difficulty arising from the position of the mtgees., who, like the purchaser himself, had no notice at the time they took their mtge., of the facts on which the equities claimed by pltfs. were based, there was certainly no mistake on the part of deft. the purchaser, & none was satisfactorily proved even on the part of pltfs., as they simply left the matter to their agents, who accordingly had authority to include the scullery in lot 2 in the way they did, & there was therefore no case for rectification.—*ELLIS v. N. purchased the whole estate, & on June 1, 1910, agreed to sell lot 6, which another lot, 3, adjoined, to H. upon the conditions read at the auction. The G. estate was conveyed to N. subject to easements. N. conveyed lot 3 to pltfs. in Feb. 1911. N. had previously in Nov. 1910, conveyed lot 6 to deft. H., who mortgaged it to C., the same solr. acting for H. on his purchase & for H. & C. as to the mtge. Rights of occupation way & drainage in fact existed over the part of the G. estate conveyed to H.:—Held: the conveyance to H. containing no reservation, the fact that lot 6 was sold subject to the privileges in favour of lot 3 would not, if N. had not parted with lot 3, have entitled pltfs. to rectification of H.'s conveyance without showing mutual mistake, which was not proved. The conveyance which was in common form did not refer to the condition, & the vendor conveyed "as beneficial owner" thereby incorporating the covenants for title in Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 7 (1). The purchaser some years afterwards under a power in the lease gave the lessors notice to determine it at the expiration of the first seven years of the term, but the notice was held to be invalid because it was not given by the person who had the legal estate in the term. The purchaser then sued the vendor for damages for breach of his covenants for title:—Held: the vendor was entitled to have the conveyance rectified by inserting therein a proviso excluding any liability on his part by reason of the legal estate in the term being outstanding.—*STAIT v. 2948. ————.]—Insertion of covenant not agreed upon.]—The ct. will reform a deed, entered into under a previous agreement, by ordering a fresh conveyance to be executed, from which a covenant, complained of as not being the intention of the covenantor at the time of the agreement, or inserted therein, will be directed to be expunged, although such covenant was introduced by the attorney of the covenantor, but without his express authority, on its being shown that the party had not considered himself when liable to such covenant he entered into the agreement.—ROB v. BUTTERWICK (1816), 2 Price, 190; 146 E. R. 65.

2949. Application of rule—Parties capable of being replaced in original position.]—The rule that the ct. will not interfere to rectify an instrument unless it is proved that the mistake was common to both parties, does not apply to the case of a contract which has been executed between parties in the relation of vendor & purchaser, whom it is in the power of the ct. to replace in their original position. Accordingly where, in a conveyance of messuages, the plan on the deed comprised a piece of land not intended by the vendor to be included, a decree was made to rectify the deed, an option being given to the purchaser to have his contract annulled.—*HARRIS v. conveyance under a mistake common to both parties, & recently discovered by him, & praying for the rectification of the conveyance by the omission of it. S. put in an answer denying the mistake & claiming the benefit of the reservation; & afterwards died before he could be cross-examined:—Held: although, in the opinion of the ct., a mistake common to both parties had been made, of which S. sought to take an improper advantage, yet a simple decree for rectification could not be made after the lapse of time & against the oath of one of the parties; but defts., the representatives of S., were entitled to the option of having the conveyance rectified, or the whole transaction set aside; & in the event of pltf. not choosing to accept the latter alternative, the bill must be dismissed without costs.—*BLOOMER v. 2957. ——— When time begins to run.]—(1) In 1900 A. sold & conveyed land to B. In 1906 A. brought an action against B. for rectification of the conveyance, alleging that by common mistake the parcels in the conveyance included more land than was comprised in the written contract in pursuance of which the conveyance was executed. A. commenced the action as soon as he became aware of the error. B. denied any mistake, & further contended that A. came too late for rectification:—Held: there had been a common mistake, & A. was entitled to rectification for that he had not been guilty of any laches.

(2) In considering a question of laches, time runs not from the date of the conveyance, but from the date when the party seeking relief first became aware of the mistake.—BEALE v. KYTE, [1907] 1 Ch. 564; 76 L. J. Ch. 294; 96 L. T. 390.

2960. — Necessity for fraud.]—There is no general rule that actual fraud is necessary to induce a ct. of equity to rescind a contract for sale. The ct. acts on the same principle in rescinding contracts for sale as in setting aside other contracts & dealings which it considers unconscientious.

Certain property was put up for sale by auction, & in the particulars which were advertised was described as an immediate absolute reversion of a freehold estate falling into possession on the death of a lady seventy years old. By the conditions of sale, which were read in the auction room just previously to the sale, but were not printed or circulated among those present, the property was stated to be subject to three mtgs. The property was bought by pltf., who stated that he was deaf, & did not understand that he was buying an equity of redemption. On a bill filed by pltf. to have the contract for sale rescinded:—Held: the description of the property in the particulars of sale was misleading, the onus was therefore on the vendor to show that the purchaser was not actually misled, & as he had failed to do so pltf. was entitled to have the contract rescinded & his deposit returned.—*TORRANCE v. Pltf. entered into a contract for the purchase from deft. of a house on this estate for the purpose of a boys' school, on the representation of deft.'s agent that there was nothing in this deed which would prevent him from carrying on such a school on this property. On an action for rescission of the contract:—Held: the carrying on of pltf.'s school in an ordinary & reasonable way would be within the wording of the restrictive covenant, which could not be limited to trades or businesses ejusdem generis with those specifically mentioned; & pltf., having been induced by a misrepresentation of fact made by deft.'s agent to enter into this contract, was entitled in equity to rescission, even though the representation had not been made fraudulently.—*WAUTON v. The Lord Chancellor, reversing the order appealed from, dismissed the bill without costs, being satisfied, that though there was a misdescription of the property, there was no such substantial misrepresentation as called upon the ct. to exercise its jurisdiction.

The term ground rent is well understood, & has a definite meaning: it is the sum paid by the owner or builder of houses for the use of land to build on, & is therefore much under what it lets for when it has been built on (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—*BARTLETT v. 2971. — Leasehold property subject to lien.]—Plff. bought at an auction an interest in leasehold property for £151. The property was sold under a sheriff's order. Plff. might have known from the particulars of sale that there was a lien on the lease for £100. Deft. at the time of the sale knew of, but did not disclose, facts which he ought to have disclosed to plff. Plff. could not have known the facts but from deft., & if they had been disclosed by him, there might have been no biddings for the property:—Held: upon the principles of this ct. under the circumstances, the sale must be declared void as against plff. & the purchase-money refunded; deft. to pay the costs of the suit.—SMITH v. 2972. — Vendor's Interest.]—A. having two parcels & B. one parcel of land, supposed to contain petroleum, it was agreed between them & C. that C. should pay them $10,000 for the land if he succeeded in forming a co. for the purpose of working the oil springs, & in inducing such co. to pay him $13,750 as the price of the land, out of which he was to keep for himself $3,750. B. accordingly, assuming the character of owner, gave to C. a conditional promise to sell all the land to him for $13,750, provided the offer was accepted within a certain time. A. wrote a letter, meant to be shown to, & which was shown to, persons intending to become members of the new co., & was proved to have influenced them, in which letter he recommended the purchase, not disclosing that he had any interest therein. A. & B. actively co-operated with C. throughout the whole transaction. The co., in ignorance of the combination, accepted the proposal, but having discovered the fraud, sued for a rescission of the contract:—Held: the contract must be wholly rescinded, the price repaid, & the land reconveyed. There being a doubt, owing to the expiration of the term for which the co. had been constituted, whether the co. was competent to receive the money & to execute a reconveyance the order provided that the repayment should be made to the co., or to such other persons as were entitled in their right, on the reconveyance of the lands being made to the satisfaction of the colonial ct. 2973. Untrue representation—Remuneration for professional services.]—S. was aware that R. was entitled to property, but might not at first be aware that the interest of R. was not precarious, & impressed R. with the notion that it was so; S., however, became aware that the interest was not precarious, yet he did not inform R. of that fact, but on the contrary still represented that it was both precarious & could be established without difficulty, delay & expensive litigation. R. in such a state of circumstances sold one-half of the estate to S., the latter giving him an indemnity against all costs of recovering the property, & representing that men of business conducted cases on the arrangement that no law expenses were paid unless the proceedings were successful; but if they were, that law costs were paid out of the money recovered, & the party conducting the proceedings & furnishing the information was allowed half what was recovered to satisfy him for risk of paying law expenses. Subsequently, R. agreed to sell the other half for a stated sum. R. filed a bill to set aside the conveyance & to have the contract for the sale of the second moiety declared void, but died before the hearing, & the suit was revived by his devisee & extrix. S. filed a cross bill for the specific performance of the sale of the second moiety. In the first suit the solr. of S. was made a party, & was charged with a participation in the fraud. The ct. below set aside the conveyance & as the contract for the sale of the second moiety was based on the former conveyance it declared the same void, & ordered S. to pay the costs, but dismissed the original suit as against the solr., without costs. The ct. also dismissed the bill for specific performance, with costs. From this decree S. appealed:—Held: as R. did not know his rights when he executed the conveyance, nor when he signed the contract for the sale of the second moiety, & as the former was based on fraud & misrepresentation, & as the latter depended on the former, both must fail, & the decree must be affirmed with costs.—REYNELL v. 2974. — Profits of business.—On Nov. 11, 1889, resps. arranged for the sale of a brewery in Edinburgh to D. The purchase was to take place as from Nov. 15, 1889, at the price of £20,500, the price to be paid by Dec. 31, at which date a conveyance was to be executed either to D. or to any co. to which he might assign his interest. On Dec. 14 D. entered into an agreement to sell the brewery to applts.; the price to be paid to D. by applts. was £28,500. This contract purported to pass on all the rights of D. On Dec. 31 a conveyance was executed by resps. at the instance of D., in implement of the contract of Nov. 11, 1889, to applts., & D. ceased to have any interest in the brewery. In the contract of Nov. 11, 1889, were these conditions: "the arrangement proceeds upon the basis that the net profits of the brewery amounted during each of two years, ending Dec. 31, 1888, to £3,750, or thereabouts, upon an average." "In the event of its being ascertained that this is not the fact, the arrangement is to be at an end." The conveyance of Dec. 31 to applts. did not set out these stipulations. Also by the contract of Nov. 11, 1889, D. was to be at liberty to have all the books connected with the business examined. All the books were examined by accountants selected by D., & a profit near the stipulated amount was reported. More than a year after the conveyance to applts., it was discovered that the books had been improperly dealt with by a clerk in resps.' employment without the knowledge of resps. The alterations made the profits appear greater than they really were.

Under these circumstances, applts., with the concurrence of D., raised this action for reduction of the contract between resps. & D., & the conveyance by resps. to applts.; applts. offering to hand back the brewery. The ground of their contention was, that as between resps. & D. the amount of the profits was made the basis of the agreement, & that all the rights of D. were passed by him to applts. No action was taken to rescind the contract between D. & applts.:—Held: applts. & D. had no title to maintain the action, D. having no interest in the subject-matter, the brewery; & the disposition not embodying nor being intended to embody the stipulations of the original contract, applts. had no right as against resps.—EDINBURGH UNITED BREWERIES v. 2981. ———. Houses offered for sale were stated in the particulars to be held for ninety years from June 24, 1844, at a ground rent of £21. Condition 4 provided that the title should commence "with the lease under which the vendor holds dated July 11, 1845." Condition 5 stated that "the description of the property in the particulars is believed to be correct, but if any error shall be found therein the same shall not annul the sale, nor shall any compensation be allowed in respect thereof." The vendor was in fact entitled to an underlease for the residue of the term of ninety years less two days at a peppercorn rent, & the owner of the two days could not be found:—Held: the representation that the property was held by lease when it was in fact held by underlease was a fatal misdescription, unless it was cured by condition 5, & condition 5 did not apply, for "error in the description of the property" meant a misdescription of the corporeal property, not a mistake in the description of the vendor's title, therefore a good title was not shown.—Re BEYFUS & MASTERS'S CONTRACT (1888), 39 Ch. He accepted the title, & before completion contracted to sell the lands, with a farm of his own adjoining the freeholds, to a sub-purchaser, who discovered, from an inclosure award prior in date to 1841, as to the effect of which both the pltf. & deft. had been under a misapprehension, that the freeholds had never belonged to E. but at the date of the contract belonged to deft. himself in fee, subject to a leasehold interest in pltf. Deft. then refused to complete, & pltf. filed her bill for specific performance, stating that she too had discovered that part of the lands she had contracted to sell as leaseholds belonged to her in fee simple, & offering mutual waiver or compensation:—Held: deft. was not precluded by the condition or the acceptance of title from taking the objection, & the ct. could not decree specific performance; but, although there was no fraud yet, there being a common mistake, deft. was entitled to an inquiry as to the title to the freeholds at the date of the contract. Seem: the ct. will, even in the case of a completed contract, give relief against a common mistake without fraud.—*JONES v. The estate consisted of two portions, & a land valuer, whose valuation was not shown to have been communicated by A. to B., put upon the two portions separate values which, added together, exceeded the 13,000 guineas. A. sold part of the estate to C. for a sum exceeding the valuer's estimate of that portion, & then purchased the other portion for a sum much less than that stated in the estimate, but which added to C.'s purchase-money, just made up to 13,000 guineas. A. pretended that the latter purchase was made by one of his relatives, & the conveyance from B. was executed to that relative, but immediately afterwards a conveyance was executed from the relative to A., & in that conveyance was a recital that the purchase-money was furnished by A. These facts were not discovered till thirty-seven years afterwards, & then B. filed his bill against the representatives of A., who had died seventeen years before, to set aside the latter conveyances, & to have an account:—Held: (1) the circumstances of the transaction were of a fraudulent nature, & therefore furnished an answer to the objection arising upon the length of time during which the transaction had remained unimpeached; (2) the bill was sustainable, though disputes which had arisen between A. & B., as to their mutual accounts, had been referred in A.'s lifetime to a barrister, who was empowered to inquire into all matters of difference between them; & who, after awarding the payment of a certain sum by A. to B., had directed the execution of mutual releases of all matters in difference; & such releases had been executed.—*CHARTER v. 3034. What constitutes defence.—Representee's knowledge of truth.—In a case depending on alleged misrepresentation of value there cannot be a more effectual bar to pltf. than by showing that he was from the beginning cognisant of all the matters complained of, or after full information of them continued to deal with the property.—*VIGERS v. 3035. ———.—.]—It is not now necessary, in order to set aside a contract, to prove that the person who obtained it, by material false representation, knew at the time the representation was made that it was false, or even made it recklessly & without care.

Pltf., a solr., published in the Law Times an advertisement headed "Law Partnership," stating that the advertiser, an elderly solr. of moderate practice, with extensive connections, shortly retiring, & having no successor, would first take as partner an efficient lawyer who would not object to purchase the advertiser's suburban residence, value £1,600. Deft. answered the advertisement, & had an interview with pltf., at which the latter stated that his business brought in about £300 a year. Deft. wrote saying that he should like to have some idea of the amount of business done for the last three years, & asking an interview for the purpose. At this interview pltf. produced three summaries showing a business of not quite £200 a year. Deft. asked how the difference was made up, & pltf. showed him a number of papers which he said related to other business not included in the summaries. These papers, which deft. did not examine, showed only a most trifling amount of business, & the gross returns of the business were in fact only about £200 a year. Deft. shortly afterwards signed an agreement to purchase the house for £1,600, & paid a deposit, pltf. refusing to have any reference to the business inserted in the agreement. Deft. took possession, but finding, as he alleged, that the business was worthless, refused to complete. Pltf. brought his action for specific performance. Deft. put in a defence, in which he disputed the right to specific performance on the ground of misrepresentations as to the business, & by counterclaim claimed on the same ground to have the contract rescinded, & to have damages on the ground of the expenses he had been put to & the loss incurred by giving up his own practice. He did not in his counterclaim specifically state what representations had been made, nor allege that they were false to pltf.'s knowledge:—Held: (1) where one person induces another to enter into an agreement with him by a material representation which is untrue, it is no defence to an action to rescind the contract that the person to whom the representation was made had the means of discovering, & might with reasonable diligence have discovered, that it was untrue; (2) it is no defence in such an action that deft. made a cursory & incomplete inquiry into the facts, for if a material representation is made to him he must be taken to have entered into the contract on the faith of it: & in order to take away his right to have the contract rescinded if it is untrue, it must be shown either that he had knowledge of facts which showed it to be untrue, or that he stated in terms, or showed clearly by his conduct, that he did not rely on the representation; therefore deft. was entitled to have the contract rescinded & the deposit returned, but as he had not pleaded knowledge on the part of pltf. that the statements as to the business were untrue, & had not specifically alleged the statements in his counterclaim, he could not recover damages.—*REDGRAVE v. 3041. ——— Deterioration subject of compensation.]—The L. co. was promoted & formed by the directors of the L. syndicate for the purpose of purchasing part of the property of the syndicate, consisting of nitrate works. The directors of the syndicate prepared & signed the memorandum & arts. of assocn. of the co., the arts. nominating them as directors & stating specifically that they were also the directors of the syndicate. They also prepared the co.'s prospectus & purchase contract, & affixed the seals of the syndicate & of the co. to the latter. The co.'s solrs. & secretary were also the same as those of the syndicate. Two years after the date of the contract & the completion of the purchase the shareholders of the co., believing that their property had been purchased at an overvalue & that there had been misrepresentations in the contract & prospectus, appointed an independent board of directors who, after investigating the facts & with the sanction of a general meeting of the shareholders, brought an action against the syndicate & the directors for rescission of the contract & damages on the ground of misrepresentation, misfeasance, breach of trust, & concealment of material facts, but not alleging fraud. From the date of the contract & down to & also since the commencement of the action the co. had, first by its original directors & afterwards by its independent board, carried on business & worked the property the subject of the contract:—Held: the co. was not entitled to rescission or damages, for (a) at the date of the contract the co. had, by its memorandum & arts., notice that its directors were also the vendors or agents of the vendor syndicate, & the mere fact that its directors did not constitute an independent board was not a sufficient ground for setting aside the contract; (b) there had been no misrepresentation made to, or any material fact concealed from, any of the persons who were members of the co. at the date of the contract, those persons being the directors themselves; (c) although the contract & prospectus were, on the evidence, misleading in certain particulars which would have entitled the co. at the time to repudiate the contract, yet through the subsequent alteration of the property consequent on its being worked by the co., the position of the parties had been so changed that they could not be restored to their original position; & (d) defts., the directors, had not been guilty of such negligence or breach of trust as to render them liable in damages in law for the loss occasioned to the co., or in equity to make good the loss.—*LAGUNAS NITRATE CO. v. PART XI. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 4.—G.

3043 i. Whether right to rescission lost—Fraud.]—In a suit to set aside, after the lapse of sixteen years, a conveyance, on the ground of fraud, the relief given against the purchaser was not extended to his minor child claiming an equity under articles executed before bill filed.—PURCELL v. KELLY (1815), Beat. 492.—IR.

3044. ——.].—A., who was entitled to a reversionary interest in a real estate, sold it to C. under circumstances which would have induced the ct. to set aside the transaction, on the ground of fraud. The tenant for life was aware of these circumstances, but some years afterwards purchased the reversion from C. for a fair consideration, which was paid to C., & C. induced A. to join in a recovery & in the conveyance to the tenant for life. A. continued in destitute circumstances up to his death. Nearly twenty years after the sale to C., a bill being filed by the eldest son of A. to obtain the estate, the several sales & conveyances were ordered to be set aside.—ADDIS v. CAMPBELL (1841), 4 Beav. 401; 10 L. J. Ch. 284; 49 E. R. 394.

3045. ——.].—CHARTER v. TREVELYAN, No. 3011, ante.

3046. ——.].—(1) Upon a bill filed by a remainderman in tail, to set aside a sale of lands, made nearly fifty years before under a decree—in a suit by a judgment creditor, to carry the trusts of a will into execution, & for the administration of testator's estate—on the ground of irregularities & error in the proceedings, & fraud in the sale:—Held: in the absence of proof of fraud on the part of the purchaser, or that the estate was sold under the value by reason of any corrupt bargain, the sale was not impeachable.

(2) After a long lapse of time since the transactions complained of, there having been parties in esse competent to impeach them, fraud is not to be assumed on doubtful evidence; but if it be clearly proved, no lapse of time will protect the parties to it, or those who claim through them, against the jurisdiction of a ct. of equity, & in that case it is immaterial by what machinery or contrivance the fraudulent transactions may have been effected, whether by a decree in equity, or judgment at law, or otherwise.—BOWEN v. EVANS (1818), 2 H. L. Cas. 257; 9 E. R. 1090, H. L.

Annotation:—As to (2) Consd. Re McCallum, McCallum v. McCallum, [1901] 1 Ch. 113.

3047. ——.].—The owner in fee of an estate, in the year 1807, agreed to sell it to his solr. while the relation of solr. & client was continuing between them. The agreement, for particular reasons, was not finally carried out till 1823. In Dec. 1826, the relation of solr. & client ceased. The purchaser died in 1828, & the vendor died in 1829 without having taken any steps to impeach the transaction. In 1859 the trustees & cestuis que trust under the will of the vendor filed a bill to set aside the sale, on the ground that the estate was sold at an undervalue, while the relation of solr. & client subsisted between the parties:—Held: lapse of time was alone a bar to the suit, & the evidence showing that full value was given for the property, the bill was dismissed with costs.—CLANRICARDE (MARQUIS) v. HENNING (1861), 30 Beav. 175; 30 L. J. Ch. 865; 5 L. T. 168; 7 Jur. N. S. 1113; 9 W. R. 912; 54 E. R. 855.

Part I.—Set-Off.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 3.

1. Distinguished from lien.—PENNEL v. AUSTIN (1845), 4 L. T. O. S. 295.

Distinguished from counterclaim.—See Nos. 304–315, post.

2. A defence.—An action was brought claiming first, £10 for rent; secondly, £100 as damages for breach of covenant in a lease of premises; & thirdly, £30 for conversion of pltf.'s goods. Deft. pleaded, admitting that the rent was due, but denying the breach of covenant & conversion, & setting up a counterclaim for £100 damages for breach of covenant by pltf., & £15 for money due for the use & occupation of other premises. The action was referred to an arbitrator by an order made by consent upon the terms that "the costs of the action should abide the event of the award, & that the costs of the reference & award should be in the discretion of the arbitrator." The arbitrator found that pltf. was entitled to £10 for rent; that deft. had broken his covenant in the lease, & had been guilty of the conversion charged, & he awarded that pltf. was entitled to recover in respect of such breach of covenant & conversion the sum of £25, making together £35 awarded to pltf.; that pltf. had broken his covenant, & that deft. was entitled to recover in respect of that breach £20; & upon the whole matter he found that pltf. was entitled to recover in the action £15 & no more:—Held: the provision in the order of reference as to costs did not alter the rights of the parties, & that upon the true construction of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 67, pltf. was entitled to the costs on his claim, & deft. to his costs on the counterclaim.

Set-off & counterclaim are both the creation of statute, the common law not admitting of the action of pltf. against deft. being met by an independent claim of deft. against pltf., but leaving deft. to his cross-action. The effect of these two modes of proceeding must, therefore, be sought in the statutes by which they were introduced, & in their results; & when these are looked at, it will be seen how essentially these two forms of procedure differ. By the statutes of set-off this plea is available only where the claims on both sides are in respect of liquidated debts, or money demands which can be readily & without difficulty ascertained. The plea can only be used in the way of defence to pltf.'s action, as a shield, not as a sword. Though deft. succeeded in proving a debt exceeding pltf.'s demand, he was not entitled to recover the excess; the effect was only to defeat pltf.'s action, the same as though the debt proved had been equal to the amount of the claim established by pltf., & no more. . . . In a case of set-off the claim being for liquidated damages, its existence & its amount must be taken to be known to pltf., who should have given credit for it in his action against deft. This reasoning does not apply to a counterclaim, the effect of which, as distinguished from a mere set-off, is altogether different. It is, as I have already pointed out, to all intents & purposes an action by deft. against pltf. It is not confined to debts or liquidated damages. It is not even necessary that the claim should be analogous to that of pltf. A claim founded on tort may be opposed to one founded on contract, or vice versa. But the most striking difference is that the counterclaim operates, not merely as a defence, as does the set-off, but in all respects as an independent action by deft. against pltf. (COCKBURN, C.J.).—STOOKE v. TAYLOR (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 569; 49 L. J. Q. B. 857; 43 L. T. 200; 44 J. P. 748; 29 W. R. 49, D. C. Annotations:—Consd. Beddall v. Maitland (1881), 17 Ch. D. 171. Apld. Takart v. Marcus (1888), 36 W. R. 469. Refd. Baines v. Bromley (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 197; Toke v. Andrews (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 428; Pearson v. Ripley (1884), 50 L. T. 629; Lund v. Campbell (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 821; Sharpe v. Haggith (1912), 106 L. T. 13.

3. —.]—A set-off can only be set up where an action is brought; . . . what is the result of a plea of set-off? It is not a counterclaim or a cross-action, but a plea in bar (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—SOVEREIGN LIFE ASSURANCE CO. v. DODD, [1892] 2 Q. B. 573; 62 L. J. Q. B. 19; 67 L. T. 396; 41 W. R. 4; 8 T. L. 4. —.]—It is well settled that an alien enemy may, in any proceeding against him, set up a set-off by way of diminution of the claim of pltf., that set-off being, of course, a defence. . . . On the other hand, an alien enemy cannot counterclaim (SARGANT, J.).—Re STAHLWERK BECKER AKTIENGESELLSCHAFT'S PATENT, [1917] 2 Ch. 272; 86 L. J. Ch. 670; 117 L. T. 216; 33 T. L. R. 339; 61 Sol. Jo. 479.

5. Claim for liquidated damages.—STOOKE v. TAYLOR, No. 2, ante.

Creation of statute.—See Nos. 15 17, post.

6. Operates by way of excuse.—Debt for goods sold & delivered. Plea that the goods were sold by M. being factor of pltf. & entrusted by him with the goods, as M.'s own goods by pltf.'s consent, & deft. did not know & had not the means of knowing, that the goods were not M.'s; & a set-off against pltf. of a debt due from M. to deft.:—Held: de injuria cannot be replied to a plea of set-off, which operates by way of excuse.—SALTER v. PURCHELL (1841), 1 Q. B. 209; 1 Gal. & Dav. 693; 11 L. J. Ex. 433; 113 E. R. 1110, Ex. Ch.; reversg. S. C. sub nom. PURCHELL v. SALTER, 1 Q. B. 197.

8. Distinguished from settlement in account—In nature of part payment.]—Where there are cross money claims & the parties before action agree to strike a balance between them, that is not a set-off but a settlement in account in the nature of part payment, which can be set up under a plea of payment.—LUNT v. WILSON (1885), 1 T. L. R. 572, C. A.

9. Effect of setting up set-off—Debt not extinguished pro tanto—Two distinct debts till judgment.]—Where a set-off is claimed or pleaded in defence to an action for a debt, the debt sued on is not thereby extinguished to the extent of the debt sought to be set off, but two separate & distinct debts remain until judgment.

When a co., while a going concern, sues a shareholder for a call, & he sets up a defence of set-off & before judgment is obtained a winding up of the co. commences, the defence of set-off in the action does not prevent the application of the ordinary rule that the debt owing by the co. to the shareholder cannot be set off in proceedings in the winding up to obtain payment of the call.—Re HIRAM MAXIM LAMP CO., [1903] 1 Ch. 70; 72 L. 13. No right at common law.]—... It must be remembered that at common law there was originally no right of set-off at all, & that it was not till the statute of set-off in the beginning of the reign of Geo. 2 that there was any such right established; & when we look at the terms of those Acts of Parliament—there were two of them—it is plain they only applied to what was then an action at common law—and so it has been held—and that they only applied to the case of mutual debts, whatever they might be. That was followed by the cts. of equity & extended; that is to say, certain cases were held to be within the equity of the statutes, although not within their actual words. Cts. of equity allowed set-off, but the Ct. of Equity, following the spirit of the statutes, would not allow a man to set-off, even at law, where there was an equity to prevent his doing so; that is to say, where the rights, although legally mutual, were not equitably mutual (JESSEL, M.R.).—Re WHITEHOUSE & Co. (1878), 9 Ch. 20. — Demands in separate rights.]—(1) Cross-demands existing in separate rights are not in equity, except under special circumstances, allowed to be set off one against the other; & therefore an exor. & trustee of a legacy, who was also the residuary legatee, & had become a creditor of the husband & administrator of deceased legatee, was not, in the absence of any special agreement, allowed to set off his debt against the legacy to which the husband, having survived his wife, the legatee, was, as such administrator, entitled.

lent moneys to various local bodies, were paid by them interest in respect of such loans amounting in one year to a sum of £352,000, such sum being the full amount of the interest due, without any deduction by the borrowers in respect of income tax. Upon appeal against an assessment to income tax upon the said sum of £352,000, the London County Council contended that they were not liable to pay income tax in respect thereof, & further, that if they were so liable, they were entitled to deductions in respect of other transactions with persons other than those to whom they had lent moneys, & that the amount of such deductions ought to be taken into account upon the present assessment, & an allowance made in respect thereof:—Held: even if the London County Council were entitled to the deductions claimed, such deductions, being in respect of transactions wholly different from those dealt with by the present assessment, amounted, in fact, to a set-off, & could not now be taken into account, for there was no provision in Income Tax Acts by which an assessment to income tax in respect of one transaction could be reduced by a set-off as against the Crown in respect of another transaction.—*LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. 55. —.—A. shipped goods on board the ship of B. on a voyage to India, & also went by the same ship as a passenger. The ship was wrecked near the Cape of Good Hope; the goods were spoiled, & A. returned to England. A., before he left England, gave B. a receipt for £250 as money advanced, including a sum of £95 as passage money paid to the captain, & another sum of £10 for freight of the goods, & B. afterwards received the amount of the insurance. In an action for money had & received, brought by A. against B. to recover the insurance money:—Held: (1) B. was entitled to set off the £95 unless it was shown that the passage money belonged to the ship owners, but B. could not set off the £10 for freight, as the ship did not complete her voyage to India; (2) B. could not set off any sum which he had paid to the order of A., if it was not actually paid before the bringing of the action, & if he had only made himself liable to pay it, that would not entitle him to set it off.—*LEMAN v. 80. Covenant for sum payable under contract—Provision for deduction of sum to be ascertained by arbitration—Set-off of sum awarded by arbitrator.]—Declaration in covenant stated that, on a dissolution of partnership between pltf., deft. & another, deft., by a certain indenture, covenanted that he & the other party last mentioned would pay pltf., as the outgoing partner £6,800 by instalments; but five instalments, amounting to £4,800, parcel of the £6,800, were made subject to reduction, in a specified ratio, if the profits which the partnership had derived from connections of pltf. should fall short of a certain amount. Non-payment of the £4,800, as well as of the other instalments, amounting to £2,000, was assigned as a breach. Plea: as to the £4,800, setting out the deed on oyer, that, by a further covenant, it was agreed that, if any difference should arise touching the sums to be deducted, it should be referred to J. P., an arbitrator, to award what amount, not exceeding £4,800, should be deducted; that such difference did arise, & thereupon pltf., deft. & the other parties submitted themselves to refer, & did refer, the said difference to J. P., who awarded that £4,800, being the whole amount of the said five instalments, should be deducted from the £6,800: & that deft., before the commencement of this action, in pursuance of the said award, claimed to deduct, & did deduct, the said £4,800, "from the said five instalments"; whereby the said £6,800, before the commencement of the suit, was reduced to £2,000, to be paid to pltf. pursuant to the indenture:—Held: the matter alleged was not merely an estoppel, but that the plea was a good plea in bar.—PARKES v. HAWKINS (1814), 2 M. & S. 606; 105 E. R. 508.

90. Bond conditioned to do act other than payment of money.]—Deft., an attorney, having pleaded a plea of set-off to an action on a bond in a penal sum, conditioned to re-invest in the same stock a sum of money lent to him by the sale of stock—which plea was supported by giving in evidence a taxed bill of costs covering the amount of the debt averred in the plea to be due from him to pltf. on the bond, & having obtained a verdict on the issue joined by replication to that plea, the ct. made absolute a rule requiring cause to be shown why the judgment should not be entered up for pltf., non obstante veredicto, on the ground that such a bond is not within the statutes of set-off, & therefore, as such a plea ought not to have been put on the record, that it must be treated as a nullity. But they refused to award a writ of inquiry of damages, which was prayed as a consequence of the rule, leaving pltf. to proceed on the judgment so obtained as she should be advised.—*GILLINGHAM v. Plea, set-off of an amount averred to be equal to pltf.'s claim; but the plea did not show what amount was due on the bond. Demurrer:—Held: set-off could not be pleaded to a bond conditioned for indemnity; & a plea of set-off to a bond, under 8 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 5, is not good, unless it shows what amount is justly due on the bond; & for both reasons the plea was bad.—ATTWOOLL v.

101. ———.—To an action for money lent, debt. being under terms of trying at the ensuing sittings, the ct. refused to allow him to plead, as a defence on equitable grounds, the following pleas: as to £10,000 parcel, etc., that the claim of pltf. was in respect of moneys advanced by pltf. to debt. upon security of goods consigned by debt. to pltf.; that at the time of such advancing it was agreed between pltf. & debt., that pltf. should cause the goods so consigned to be sold on account of debt. for the best prices which could be got for the same, & out of the proceeds retain the amount of the moneys so advanced; that pltf. might have sold the goods for prices more than sufficient to reimburse them the moneys so advanced, but pltf. wrongfully & in violation of the agreement sold the goods for prices less than the best prices which might have been got for the same, & by reason of such wrongful act pltf. were prevented from reimbursing themselves the amount of the moneys so advanced out of the proceeds of the sales; as to the sum of £5,400 parcel, etc., that debt. consigned to pltf. divers goods, to be by pltf. sold at New York for certain commission to pltf. on that behalf, at prices not less than the best market price; that pltf. not regarding their duty in that behalf wrongfully sold the goods for prices less than the best market price, whereby debt. sustained losses amounting to £5,400; that afterwards it was agreed between pltf. & debt. that they should set off the amount of such losses against so much money as might be due from debt. to pltf.; that the amount of such losses is equal to the said sum of £5,400 parcel, etc., which was due from debt. to pltf.; that debt. has always been ready & willing to set off the amount of such losses against the said sum of £5,400 parcel, etc. Qu.: whether the subject-matter of the pleas afforded any defence on equitable grounds.—ATTERBURY v. 102. ———.—To a declaration for freight & portage for the conveyance of goods, debts. pleaded by way of equitable defence as to £47 0s. 6d., parcel, etc., that pltf.'s claim was for work done by him as a lighterman; that in the course of such employment pltf. agreed to convey on a certain river a quantity of coal of debts.; that the coal was utterly lost through the negligence & improper conduct of pltf., & that the cost price of the coal so lost was £47 0s. 6d. which debts. claim equitably to set off against the sum pleaded to, & say that the said sums are equal in amount:—Held: the subject-matter of the plea could not be pleaded by way of equitable defence, but merely afforded ground for a cross-action.—STIMSON v. HALL (1857), 1 H. & N. 831; 26 L. J. Ex. 212; 28 L. T. O. S. 325; 5 W. R. 367; 150 E. R. 1436.

administrators & assigns, to be paid, done performed, demised to B., his exors., administrators & assigns, a certain messuage & lands for a term of sixty-three years; with liberty to B., his exors., administrators & assigns, to make any erections or buildings on any part of the premises B. for himself, his heirs, exors. & administrators not saying assigns, covenanted that he, his heirs exors., administrators or assigns would pay the rent reserved; & that he, his exors. or administrators would repair the messuage & farm, out-houses, barns, stables & all other erections & buildings which should or might be thereafter erected during the term on the demised premises & the same being so repaired, that B., his exors., administrators & assigns would at the end of the term yield up. The declaration then stated that the interest of B. in the demised premises, by assignment, vested in defts.; & that pltf. became seised of the reversion, subject to the said term. First breach; that defts. did not repair the messuage, etc., & other buildings which were during the term built on the demised premises. Second breach; that defts. yielded up to pltf. the premises out of repair; second plea; to the breaches, on equitable grounds, that while defts. were possessed of the demised premises, by indenture they demised them to pltf. for a term less by thirty days than their own term; that pltf. covenanted to repair & yield up in repair, defts. finding certain timber & iron work. The plea then alleged that the want of repair complained of by pltf., was caused by his default & was a breach of his covenant; & that defts. were ready to find timber & iron work; & that they were entitled to recover from pltf. the same amount of damages as he sought to recover from them. The plea concluded by offering to set off the damages; third plea; as to not repairing & yielding up in repair certain buildings erected on the premises during the term; that the said buildings were not in being at the time of making the indenture, & were built after the commencement of the term. & were then entirely new erections & not built in the place of anything standing on the land at the time of the demise. On demurrer to these pleas:—Held: the second plea was not good as an equitable defence; or as a defence at law, in avoidance of circuity of action, inasmuch as the covenants were not co-extensive, & the damages could not be identical.—MINSHULL v. OAKES (1858), 2 H. & N. 793; 27 L. J. Ex. 194; 4 Jur. N. S. 169; 157 E. R. 327.

104. ———.]—Declaration for money lent, money paid, & commission for pltf's. having for & at the request of deft., provided the money for paying, & paid divers bills of exchange. Plea on equitable grounds that deft. assigned to pltf's. for sale, & as security for the payment of the said moneys, & of certain accommodation acceptances of pltf's. goods described in certain bills of lading which deft. also assigned to pltf's. as security as aforesaid, & in order that pltf's. might, out of the proceeds of the said goods & by proper sales thereof, pay & satisfy the said moneys & acceptances. Allegation that pltf's. took possession of the goods & bills of lading, & took such bad care of part of the said goods that the same were deteriorated in value, & were sold by pltf's., at lower prices than they might have been, & pltf's. also negligently sold the said goods below the market price, & received the proceeds thereof. Further allegation that the said goods might, & ought to have realised by the sales thereof more than sufficient to have paid & satisfied the said moneys & acceptances, & that through the mere negligence, etc., of pltf's., the security of the said goods became lost to deft., & the said goods & the proceeds thereof, became & were insufficient to discharge the said acceptances & moneys:—Held: the plea was bad as amounting to a set-off of unliquidated damages, & it could not be supported as a plea of the general issue.—BEST v. HILL (1872), L. R. 8 C. P. 10; 42 L. J. C. P. 10; 27 L. T. 490; 37 J. P. 230; 21 W. R. 147.

106. ———. Unliquidated damages.]—Where goods are sold, to be paid for by a bill of exchange at a given date, to an action commenced within that time for refusing to give such bill, deft. cannot set off a debt due to him from pltf.

107. ———.]—Where damages are unliquidated & there is not a mutuality, there cannot be a set-off; therefore, where pltf. declared in covenant for a total loss on a policy of assurance effected in his own name, & averred the interest in one count to be in himself, & in another in himself & others, to which defts. pleaded that a less sum was due on the policy than for a total loss, & set off moneys due to them on pltf.'s bond, which was made to them before they had notice that any other than pltf. was interested in the policy:—Held: these pleas were ill.—*GRANT v. 110. ———.]—Pltf. having purchased goods of deft., secretly absconded with the goods before he paid for them; deft. followed him, & forcibly retook the goods:—Held: in trespass for taking them, the measure of damage was the value of the goods, & the jury could not consider the debt due from pltf. to deft. or treat it as reduced by the retaking.—GILLARD v. BRITTAN (1841), 8 M. & W. 575; 1 Dowl. N. S. 424; 11 L. J. Ex. 133; 151 E. R. 1168.

113. ———.]—C., at the request of D., commenced an action, in which C. had no interest, against I., upon D. giving C. a bond whereby D. bound himself to C. in the penal sum of £200 subject to the condition that if D. should pay to I., deft. in the action such costs as C., pltf. in the action, should in due course of law be liable to pay in case he should discontinue become nonsuit, or a verdict should pass against him, such costs to be first taxed, or in case of a judgment obtained by deft. for his costs of defence; & also should permit C. during the pendency of the action, or of any liability to him arising therefrom, to retain & apply any of D.'s moneys that might come into C.'s hands towards the discharge of any costs or liabilities which C. might be put to or incur by reason of his permitting the action to be carried on in his name, or from any injury to him thereby from the default or omission of D. to pay the same, the bond should be void, etc. C. was nonsuited in the action, & I. had judgment to recover his costs:—Held: D.'s liability under the bond to pay such costs did not constitute a "debt" within the garnishee clauses of C. L. P. Act, 1854 (c. 125), & could not be attached as such by the judgment creditor.

A question has been raised whether this is a debt within the Statutes of Set-off, & I quite agree that a debt which can be set off is capable of being attached under these clauses; but it is clear that the obligee of this bond could not have made it the subject of a set-off, for the obligor is not bound to pay a certain sum to him, but something to a stranger; & in case of the non-performance of the condition the jury would have to assess the amount of damages which the obligee had sustained. In no sense therefore can it be considered as a bond to pay a sum of money to the obligee, & consequently it is not a debt which could be set off; & I think, that, if it is not a debt within the Statutes of Set-off, it cannot be attached (PARKE, B.).—JOHNSON v. DIAMOND (1855), 11 Exch. 73; 3 C. L. R. 1010; 24 L. J. Ex. 217; 25 L. T. O. S. 85; 1 Jur. N. S. 938; 3 W. R. 407; 156 E. R. 750.

115. Set-off of claim for damages—Unliquidated damages.—The statement of claim alleged that pltf. sued as assignee by deed of a debt due from deft. to the assignor on a building contract. On demurrer to so much of the defence as alleged breaches of contract by the assignor:—Held: deft. was not entitled to recover any damages against pltf., but was entitled by way of set-off or deduction from pltf.'s claim to the damages which he had sustained by the non-performance of the contract by the assignor; & the form of defence must be amended accordingly.—*YOUNG v. Ct. of Canada, British Columbia Admiralty District, to enforce payment of the balance due on the mtge. of a ship, granted in respect of the price of construction, which it was agreed should be treated as money lent, resps., the registered transferees of the ship, pleaded by way of equitable defence that they were entitled to set off a sum of money expended by them, which was sufficient to prevent their being in default under the mtge. at the date of the action. It appeared that the set-off was claimed as a defence pro tanto so far as it was for a diminution in value of the ship by reason of its having been built negligently & defectively & not in accordance with contract:—Held: under the Admty. jurisdiction as it formerly existed neither applts. nor resps. could have enforced their claims in an Admty. Ct. But of Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 11, extends that jurisdiction so as to include the claim of applts., which was in respect of a mtge. duly registered under Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60); while resps.' defence, though pleaded by way of set-off, in reality involved a cross-claim for unliquidated damages under a contract distinct from the mtge. sued upon, which the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain whether the claim was against the ship or plffs.—*Bow, McLACHLAN & Co. v. 129. ————.]—Non-performance of independent covenant by defendant.—In an action of debt to recover a sum of money under two deeds of covenant, the declaration alleged, that, by an indenture of Dec. 19, 1837, in consideration of the sum of £258,029 10s. 6d., pltf. covenanted with defts. to make & complete a certain portion of a certain railway, & to provide bars or rails & chairs, on or before May 1, 1840—that afterwards, by another indenture of Mar. 23, 1839, in consideration of the further sum of £15,000, pltf. covenanted with defts., that he, pltf., being provided by them with railway bars or rails & chairs for temporary & permanent use, would complete the said portion of the said railway, & the line of the permanent railway, on or before June 1, 1840; provided, that, if said pltf. should not complete the said railway by the said June 1, 1840, he should pay to said defts. the sum of £300 for the said June 1 & the like sum for every succeeding day, until the whole should have been completed, but so that the total amount to become forfeitable should not exceed the sum of £15,000. Breach, that defts. detained from, & did not pay pltf. a large sum, to wit, £20,000, parcel of the sum due to pltf. Plea, as to £7,500, parcel of the said sum of £20,000, that the said sum of £7,500, is parcel of the said sum of £15,000 agreed to be retained by defts.; that pltf. did not complete the said railway on or before June 1, 1840, nor until twenty-four days after, whereby pltf. then became liable to pay to said defts. the sum of £300 for June 1, & the like sum for every such succeeding twenty-four days during which the railway remained incomplete, by reason of which defts.' deducted & retained the said sum of £7,500 out of the moneys payable by them to pltf. Replication, that pltf. did not become nor was liable to pay defts. modo et formâ. At the trial, it was proved that pltf. did not finish the railway until twenty-four days after June 1, but that defts. had not provided pltf. with the bars, rails, & chairs in sufficient quantity to enable him to complete it by that day. The learned judge told the jury that defts. were bound, as a condition precedent to their right to deduct the £7,500, to furnish pltf. with such bars, rails, & chairs:—Held: that was a misdirection; that the covenants were independent; & the furnishing of the bars, rails, & chairs was not a condition precedent to the right of defts. to make the deduction; & the only question being whether the railway was completed on June 1, the plea was established.—MACINTOSH v. MIDLAND COUNTIES RY. Co. (1845), 14 M. & W. 548; 3 Ry. & Can. Cas. 780; 14 L. J. Ex. 338; 5 L. T. O. S. 537; 153 E. R. 592.

130. ————.]—Declaration in debt stated a building contract under seal, by which pltf. covenanted to complete buildings by Oct. 23, & deft. to pay him £418 on the completion, & it was further covenanted that, if deft. should order any extra work, he should pay pltf. its value, or, if he ordered any diminution or omission, pltf. should allow the value out of the £418. Also that, if the buildings should not be finished on Oct. 23, pltf. should pay the penalty of £1 per day for every subsequent day employed, as liquidated damages. Provided that, if deft. should require any additional work, pltf. should be allowed so much extra time beyond Oct. 23, as might be necessary for completing the same. Pltf. averred that deft. ordered extra work, which required thirty-one days of additional time, & the value of which was £84; & that the contract would have been fulfilled by Oct. 23, but for such orders, & he demanded the £418, minus a sum for diminutions, & £84, for the extra work. Deft. pleaded, as to £22 parcel of the debt in the declaration mentioned, that the extra time necessary for completing the additional work was nine days only, but that pltf. had exceeded the time ending Oct. 23, by thirty-one days, whereby he became liable to pay deft. £22 according to the deed; which £22 deft. offered to set off:—Held: on general demurrer, the clause for payment of £1 per day applied to the covenant for extra time in respect of extra work, as well as to the clause which fixed a day for completing the contract as originally defined; & deft. might deduct, in the form of set-off £1 per day for the number of days by which pltf. had exceeded the necessary time for completing the extra work.—LEGG v. HARLOCK (1848), 12 Q. B. 1015; 18 L. J. Q. B. 45; 12 L. T. O. S. 291; 13 Jur. 229; 116 E. R. 1151.

131. — Action for extra work—Set-off of penalty.]—By arts. of agreement for altering & repairing a warehouse for a fixed price, it was stipulated that in the event of the work not being completed in three months, the builder should forfeit & pay to the person with whom he contracted to do the work £5 weekly & every week, such penalty to be deducted from the amount which might remain due on the completion of the work:—Held: in an action brought for extra work, the employer was entitled, after having paid the contract price, to set off the penalty against the extra work; & he had a double remedy, either to deduct it or recover it.—DUCKWORTH v. ALISON (1836), 1 M. & W. 412; 2 Gale, 11; Tyr. & Gr. 742; 5 L. J. Ex. 171; 150 E. R. 494.

132. — — — — —.]—A contract for building a steam vessel contained a provision that the engineer for the time being should have power to direct additions, deductions, alterations, & deviations, to & from the contract work, & should have power to extend the time for completion of the contract, & that unless he did so, the time should be deemed not extended by reason of such extra works, & that the value of all such “additions, deductions, alterations, & deviations, should be ascertained, & added to or deducted from the amount of the contract price.” It also contained a provision that £5 should become due as liquidated damages for every day beyond the time specified in the contract, on which the work remained uncompleted. There was also a clause for the reference of all differences “relating, amongst other things, to any additions, deductions, alterations, or deviations, made in the work” to the engineer. In an action brought in respect of certain extra works:—Held: a replication that deft. had, by directing extra works, rendered the performance of the contract work impossible within the appointed time, was a good answer to a claim to deduct penalties for its non-performance, although the engineer had not extended the time for its completion.—WESTWOOD v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL (1863), 1 New Rep. 262; 7 L. T. 736; 11 W. R. 261.

137. — — — — — Against joint debt.]—A. was employed as storekeeper by B. & C., who were joint adventurers in a mine, & he was authorised to draw bills on B. for money laid out on account of the mining co. The bills were discounted by a banker, & the payment of them was guaranteed to him by B. & C. B. having been arrested, A., in order to provide funds to procure B.'s discharge, drew on B. a bill purporting to be on account of the mining co. The banker discounted the bill, & paid the amount to B. C. was afterwards compelled to take up the same in consequence of his guarantee. In an action brought by A. against B. & C. for his salary, it was held that C. could not set off the amount of the bill.—JONES v. FLEEMING (1827), 7 B. & C. 217; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 113; 108 E. 138. — — — — —.]—T. & W. had a joint banking account with C. & co., & T. had also a private account with them. C. & co. stopped payment on Apr. 22, 1843, when there was a balance due to them from T. & W. on their joint account, but they were in debt to T. on his private account. The bankers continued to receive their own notes from customers in payment of balances due to the bank, & they also, at the request of customers & others, transferred balances due to such customers to the credit of other customers who were indebted to the bank; & on May 25, 1843, T. & W. gave the bankers notice to transfer the balance due to T. to the joint account of T. & W., but this they neglected to do, & on May 31, a fiat issued against them:—Held: T. & W. could not claim, as against the assignees, to set off the balance due to T. against that due to the bankers on the joint account.—WATTS v. CHRISTIE (1849), 11 Beav. 516; 18 L. J. Ch. 173; 13 L. T. O. S. 297; 13 Jur. 214, 845; 50 E. R. 928.

139. — — — — — Separate debt due from joint creditor.]—There is no rule that a debt due to joint creditors, which has been contracted by fraud, can be set off against a separate debt due from one of the joint creditors. P., the solr. of K. & R., who were trustees of a marriage settlement, received on their behalf the sum of £1,000, & represented that he had invested the whole of it on mtge. He did invest on mtge. two sums of £2,200 & £850, part thereof; but he never invested the balance of £950. The debt of £2,200 was, with the knowledge of K. & R., paid off & received by P., & retained by him for reinvestment; but no reinvestment was ever made. P. died insolvent:—Held: neither of the sums of £2,200 & £950 due from his estate could be set off against a separate debt due to the estate from K.—MIDDLETON v. POLLOCK, Ex p. KNIGHT & RAYMOND (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 515; 44 L. J. Ch. 618.

Set-off of joint debt—Against separate debt.—V., a customer of the banking house of D. & co., transferred to N., a partner in the firm, a sum of stock by way of security for money borrowed of them, & gave notes for the amount, payable on the stock being retransferred to him. He paid off these notes, & afterwards borrowed a further sum on the joint note of himself & his son, without calling for a retransfer. The stock so transferred having been blended with other stock, of which N. was in like manner possessed by way of security for other customers, was sold by the partnership, & the produce applied to the use of the partnership, except a small balance still remaining in the name of N. D., another of the partners, afterwards died, & the partnership was carried on without any alteration of firm till the surviving partners became bkpt. On the bill of V. against the assignees of the bkpts., & against the representatives of D. it was decided that he was entitled to the stock remaining in the name of N., the other creditors in respect of stock transferred having been satisfied their demands as, being sufficiently appropriated, to set off, against the joint note of himself & his son, so much of the money received by the partnership out of the sale of the remainder of the stock as was equal to the amount of such joint note; to prove the residue as a debt against the estate of the bkpts.; & to receive from D.'s estate the amount of the deficiency.

The party, who was well acquainted with the facts of his own case, upon a full knowledge of them, for a long time admitted that he had no claim; & after lulling the other party to sleep, he ought not to be permitted to establish his set-off (GIBBS, C.J.).—BAKER v. 166. ———.]—The paymaster of a military corps had given credit in account to an officer in that corps from Jan. 1, 1817, to Nov. 5, 1820, for certain increased pay, erroneously supposed to be granted by a general order of Aug. 27, 1806, to an officer of his situation, & a statement of that account was delivered to the officer in 1821. In Dec. 1816, the paymasters were informed by the Board of Ordnance that the increased pay granted by the order of 1806 would not be allowed to persons in the situation of the officer in question. The paymasters did not communicate this information to the officer until 1821, & subsequently to that time they continued to receive his pay:—Held: in an action brought by his personal representative to recover such pay, it was not competent to the paymaster to retain any of such sums of money on account of the sums which they had credited him for by way of increased pay, & which they had allowed him to consider his own for so long a period of time.—SKYRING v. But if he also agrees not to set off a debt due from a prior firm, which, by a previous letter, the principals had agreed to pay him, the principals having assumed the funds of that firm; the letter & the agreement must be set against each other, & the broker will not be allowed to set off that debt against the proceeds of the goods.—M'GILLIVRAY v. set-off in respect of goods sold, applied to creditor to have the policy delivered up, for a purpose unconnected with the debt, & replaced by another security. 174. — Agent appointed trustee of estate—Funds in hands of agent not to be liable for advances made to estate.—I., consignee of a West India estate, was appointed trustee thereof by B., the tenant for life, for the purpose of keeping down incumbrances. I. was also private agent & banker for B., with the understanding that B. was not, nor were his funds, to be liable for advances made by I. for the estate; I. becoming embarrassed, was declared bkpt., & assignees were appointed:—Held: on a bill filed by B. & the other owners of the estate, to remove I. from the possession & management, a sum found due from I. to B. on their private dealings, might be set off against a sum found due to I. in respect of his advances & payments for the estate.—BAILLIE v. DAVIES (1796), Peake, Add. Cas. 82; 170 E. R. 202.

177. — Right to bring independent action.—There is no compulsion upon a debt. to make a set-off, & if he pleases he may bring a cross-action; provided he & his attorney choose to incur the odium of an obstinate & litigious character, & the censure of the ct., which will follow, unless good reason can be shown for not pleading such set-off.—GREEN v. LAW (1805), 2 Smith, K. B. 668.

178. ——Where debt. has a set-off against pltf., of which he gives notice under the statute but does not appear at the trial to offer evidence of it, pltf. may either take a verdict for the whole sum he proves to be due to him subject to be reduced to the sum really due on a balance of accounts, if debt. will afterwards enter into a rule not to sue for the set-off; or he may take a verdict for the smaller sum, with a special indorsement on the profits as a foundation for the ct. to order a stay of proceedings, if another action should be brought for the amount of the set-off.—LAING v. CHATHAM (1808), 1 Camp. 252; 170 E. R. 947, N. P.

179. ——A person who advances to a deserted wife money to enable her to supply herself with necessaries, has no demand, enforceable at law, against the husband for the advances, but has a remedy in equity against him for so much of the money as is actually applied by the wife in paying for necessaries:—Held: accordingly, where pltf. who had deserted his wife filed his bill to enforce a judgment against real estate of debt., debt. was entitled to set off the amount of sums which before & after the judgment had been advanced by debt. to the wife for the purpose of providing her with necessaries, & had been applied by her for that purpose.

In the present case pltfs.' demand & debts.' cross demand are wholly unconnected with each other, & debt. had no answer in bar of pltfs.' demand. Therefore, if he had a legal set-off he was not bound to avail himself of it. . . . The equitable set-off might equally be reserved (LORD CAMPBELL, C.)—JENNER v. MORRIS (1861), 3 De G. 180. ——In an action for damages for the non-performance & improper performance of certain work which pltf. had employed debt. to do, the defence set up was that debt. had sued pltf. for the price of the work alleged to have been improperly done, & pltf. had settled by paying the whole amount then sued for; & that, as pltf. might have given the non-performance & the defective performance complained of in evidence in reduction of damages, pltf. was precluded from bringing a cross-action for them:—Held: though pltf. might have used the causes of action for which he sued in reduction of the claim in the former action, yet he was not bound to do so, but might maintain a separate action for them.—DAVIS v. HEDGES (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 687; 40 L. J. Q. B. 276; 25 L. T. 155; 20 W. R. 60, D. C.

181. ——Pltfs. advanced to one of their customers the sum of £1,000, upon the security of a joint & several promissory note payable on demand, signed by B. & debt. who was the solr. of both parties, & upon the deposit of the deeds of certain property belonging to B. On depositing the deeds B. signed a memorandum prepared by debt.'s articulated clerk, stating that the deposit was to cover any general balance not exceeding £1,000, then or thereafter to be due to pltfs., & undertaking to execute a legal mtge. The negotiations for the mtge. falling through, pltfs. agreed to the loan standing over, on condition that B. paid interest at the rate of 6 per cent., in lieu of 5. This arrangement was made without the knowledge of debt. About this time pltfs. held between £1,400 & 1,600 to the credit of B. The interest upon the loan was debited to his current account but not the loan itself. Ultimately a legal mtge. of the property was executed by B. securing any sum not exceeding £1,500, which might thereafter be due upon his general account with pltfs., together with interest at the rate of 6 per cent. In negotiating this mtge. debt.'s partner acted on behalf of pltfs., but a new solr. acted for B. Demand for payment of the promissory note having been made to B. without effect, pltfs. now sued debt. for payment thereof:—Held: the bank were not bound to set off the note against any balance in their hands to debtor's credit.—YORK CITY & COUNTY BANKING CO. v. BAINBRIDGE (1880), 43 L. T. 732; 45 J. P. 158.

184. Assignee without notice of claim.]—At two general meetings of the shareholders of a joint stock co., two separate sums of 500 guineas were voted to the directors as a remuneration for their trouble, & to one of the directors, L., two deposit notes, signed by three other of the directors were given. By these notes it was certified that the sums therein specified, being the amounts to which L. was entitled as his share in the two sums of 500 guineas, had been that day deposited with the co., & that the undersigned thereby undertook that the sums should be repaid to L. with interest at 6 per cent. L., the director, deposited the notes with pltf., & also assigned them to him by deed as a collateral security for a debt. Notice of the assignment was given to the co. L. afterwards compounded with his creditors, & on pltf. filing a bill against the co. for payment of the residue of his debt, the co. contended that the issue of the notes was illegal under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, & if not, that they had a set-off against pltf. in respect of subsequent calls:—Held: pltf. had made good his claim, & was entitled to a decree against the co. with costs.—WOODHAMS v. Claim arising under same contract.]—Defts., who were tenants of an exhibition ground, entered into a contract with C. by which C. undertook to equip part of the ground & was to receive half of certain takings. C. was also to pay part of the cost of advertising, & if defts. had to pay any part of C.'s share thereof they were to have a lien on his share of the receipts for admission, but this lien was not to operate until payment of a mtge. by which C. mortgaged to pltf. his share in the profits. Defts. were also to supply C. with electricity, for which he was to pay, the accounts to be rendered weekly. On a motion by pltf. to restrain defts. from parting with moneys received for admission defts. claimed to set off from the share of receipts due to pltf. as C.'s mtgees.' money due from C., to defts. for electricity:—Held: although as a general principle a claim arising under the same contract might be set off against an assignee of a party thereto, yet as defts. recognised the mtge. as part of the venture, & as the lien was not to operate till after the discharge of the mtge., defts. had no right of set off against pltf. until after its discharge.—PHENIX ASSURANCE CO., LTD. v. They had previously agreed that each should pay one-half of the annual premiums, & in some years the premiums were so paid, but the husband from time to time, became unable to pay his moiety & then pltf. at his request paid it for him out of her own moneys. They both concurred in creating charges upon the policy, & subsequently the husband executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors, assigning all his property, but not specifically mentioning the policy, to deft. as trustee. No notice of this deed was given to the insurance co. At the time of the husband's death the aggregate of the premiums paid by pltf. on his behalf exceeded in amount one moiety of the balance of the policy moneys remaining after payment of the joint charges. Upon a summons to determine the respective rights & interests of pltf. & deft.:—Held: pltf. being the legal owner of the policy deft. whose only claim was in equity must do equity; & pltf. was entitled to set off her claim against her husband for the portion of the premiums paid on the policy by her at his request.—Re MCKERRELL, MCKERRELL v. 191. ————Debts accrued due since notice of assignment.]—A trading firm assigned their estate, stock, debts due to the firm, etc., to trustees, upon trust for sale & distribution, with power to carry on the business; but the trustees did not thereby undertake to discharge the liabilities of the firm. The deed of assignment contained a proviso making it void, if the firm became bkpt. before a certain day. Pltfs., who were at the date of the assignment creditors of the firm, afterwards became indebted to the trustees, who continued to carry on the business. The firm becoming bkpt. before the day named:—Held: pltf. had no right to a set-off; but the result would have been different, if pltf., instead of creditors, had been debtors at the date of the assignment, & had afterwards become creditors of the trustees.

No right of set-off, therefore, can arise out of an agreement which is not proved to have existed (ROMILLY, M.R.).—HUNT v. JESSEL (1854), 18 Beav. 100; 2 W. R. 219; 52 E. R. 40.

193. ————Intention of parties.]—When an equitable chose in action has been assigned, debtor cannot set off against the assignee a debt which has accrued due to him from the assignor since the notice of assignment, though resulting from a contract entered into previously, unless from the nature of the transaction it appears to have been intended between the original parties that the one should be set off against the other.

The assignees of a Lloyd's bond sued the makers in the name of the original bondholder; the makers sought to set off arrear of rent due from the original bondholder, which had accrued due since notice of the assignment, upon a lease granted after the making of the bond, but before notice of assignment. On equitable pleadings stating these facts:—Held: defts. could not set off the arrears of rent.—WATSON v. MID WALES RY. CO. (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 593; 36 L. J. C. P. 285; 17 L. T. 94; 15 W. H. & co. paid for them; but the co. fell into difficulties, its stock of barrels was exhausted, & as to more than 4,000 it failed to deliver them. The co. had to the knowledge of H. & co. issued debentures in the usual form of floating securities on all the property of the co. The debenture holders obtained the appointment of a receiver at which time H. & co. owed the co. a liquidated sum for rent, & had the above claim against the co. in respect of the barrels:—Held: H. & co. could set off this demand against what they owed to the co., & the knowledge of the existence of the debentures as a floating security, at the time when the debt due to them was contracted was not such notice of an assignment as to prevent a set-off binding the debenture holders.—BIGGERSTAFF v. Defts. were induced to enter into the contract by fraudulent misrepresentation made to them by the vendor. The vendor for valuable consideration assigned the balance of the purchase-money by deed absolutely to pltf., & notice in writing of that assignment was given to defts. Pltf. at the time of that assignment had no notice of the fraud on the part of the vendor. In an action by pltf. against defts. for the debt of £800 so assigned, defts. pleaded, by way of defence, in substance, that they were induced to enter into the contract for the purchase of the newspaper by the fraud of the vendor, & that by reason thereof they had sustained damage exceeding £800, & no money was due from them at the date of the assignment to pltf., & in the event of their being held liable to pay the sum claimed by pltf., they counter-claimed against the vendor damages for fraud to an equal amount. Defts. were not in a position, & did not claim, to rescind the contract for the purchase of the newspaper. At the trial the jury found that defts. had been induced to enter into the contract for purchase of the newspaper by the fraud of the vendor, & had thereby sustained damage to the amount of £800. The judge on those findings gave judgment for defts. on pltf.'s claim & judgment for defts. against the vendor for £800 damages upon the counterclaim, but stayed execution on the latter judgment:—Held: upon the above-mentioned facts, defts.

could not set up the claim to £800 damages for the fraud of the vendor by way of defence against the claim of pltf., & pltf. was entitled to judgment against defts. for £800.—STODDART v. UNION TRUST, LTD., [1912] 1 K. B. 181; 81 L. J. K. B. 140; 105 L. T. 806, C. A.

210. ———.—Debt not yet accrued.—A's bankers, for nine or ten years previous to his death, had been in the habit of accommodating him with a loan of £1,000 upon the security of his promissory note, which was renewed every three months, the bankers, upon those occasions, discounting the note by placing the amount of it to the credit of A., as cash paid in by him, & debiting him on the other side with the discount. A. also, about two months prior to his death, accepted, payable at his bankers, a bill drawn by B. on A. for £467: this bill having been paid away by B., was discounted by the bankers for a holder who did not indorse it, & the bankers were the holders when the bill became due. On the morning the bill became due, before the arrival of the post, the bankers who had then in their hands, £1,421 of A.'s money, wrote off the bill to the debit of A.'s account; the same day's post informing them of A.'s death two days before, they called upon B. to pay, & B. paid them £40 on account of the bill, on a representation from them that £40 would be wanting to make A.'s account right. At this time the last promissory note for £1,000, given by A. to the bankers, had fifty-three days to run, but the bankers immediately entered that note, as well as the bill of exchange, to the debit of A.'s account, allowing on the other side a rebate of discount for the time the note had to run. The exors. of A., having, before the fifty-three days expired, sued the bankers for the balance in their hands at the time of A.'s death:—Held: the bankers might set off against the demand of the exors. the £467 written off on the bill of exchange, but not the £1,000 on the promissory note.—*ROGERSON v. 213. ———.—On bill of exchange discounted by bank—As indorsers.—A bill of exchange drawn by A. was accepted payable at a bank. A., who was a customer of the bank, discounted the bill with them, & the bank re-discounted it, & indorsed it over to a third party. On the day when the bill became due it was presented at the bank for payment by the holder, & there being no funds of the acceptor then in their hands, the bank having paid it instead of debiting the acceptor's account with the amount, carried it to a separate account as an unpaid bill. The acceptor having provided funds in the course of the day, the bank sent notice of its dishonour to the drawer on the next morning, & debited his account with it. In an action by A. against the bank for money lent, in which defts. set off the amount of the bill, the jury found that the bank paid the bill as indorsers of it, & not as agents of the acceptor:—Held: the jury were justified in assuming that the bank treated the bill as dishonoured & paid it in their character of indorsers, & not as agents of the acceptor; & they were entitled to set it off.—*POLLARD v. 214. ———.—[1]—Defts. acted as bankers for a firm up to Feb. 3, 1914, when the firm being insolvent by deed assigned all their property to pltf. as trustee for their creditors. The deed assignee of a debt, the debtor-deft. is entitled to set off a debt due to him by the assignor at the date of the assignment, even when the amount claimed to be set off is due under a transaction independent of & unconnected with, the claim assigned to pltf.—*ARUNA-CHELLAM CHETTI v. provided that payments to creditors should be made upon the basis of a bkpcy. distribution of the property & that secured creditors should have the same rights as under a bkpcy. At the date of the deed the firm had £2,934 to the credit of their current account in debt. bank, & the bank held certain shares as security for an advance to the firm. These shares were subsequently sold by the bank & realised £812 in excess of the amount of the advance to the firm. Before Feb. 3, 1914, the firm had discounted with the bank a number of bills of exchange, which matured after that date, & in respect thereof the firm became debtors of the bank to the amount of £19,941. In an action by pltf. as trustee under the deed to recover from the bank the two sums of £2,934 & £812, the bank claimed a lien on those sums & also to set off a sufficient portion of £19,941 against those sums:—Held: the bank's claim was right on both points.—*BAKER v. 216. — Against money due on another account—Money in fact belonging to other persons.—In the absence of notice of fraud a banker is entitled to set off what is due to a customer on one account against what is due from him on another, although the former may in fact belong to other persons.

A trader carried on his own business in conjunction with that of a co. of which he was managing director, & by himself or his nominees held all the shares. The co.'s account & the trader's account were in the same bank, & blank cheques were given to the bank manager in respect of each account to be filled in with amounts necessary for the purpose of adjustment of the two accounts. Blank cheques of the co. were improperly filled in by the trader with amounts which were credited in his account:—Held: in the absence of notice on the part of the bank of the state of accounts between the trader & the co., the bank was not liable to refund the money.—BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES v. GOULBURN VALLEY BUTTER CO., PROPRIETARY, [1902] A. C. 543; 71 L. J. P. C. 112; 87 L. T. 88; 51 W. R. 367; 18 T. L. R. 735, P. C.

217. — Balance due to customer from bank—Against claim of bank on bond—Bond assigned to third party—Notice.—(1) Principles stated as to the right of set-off, where a bond is given by a customer to his bankers, in the following different instances—(a) where the firm remains unaltered; (b) where it is changed; (c) where the bond is assigned to the new firm; (d) where it is assigned to a stranger; (e) where notice of the assignment is given; & (f) where it is omitted to be given.

If a customer borrows money from his bankers, & gives a bond to secure it, & afterwards, on his general banking account, a balance is due to the customer from the same bankers, who are the obligees of the bond, a right to set off the balance against the money due on the bond exists, both at law & in equity.

If the firm were altered, & the bond assigned by the original obligees to the new firm, & notice of that assignment given to debtor, & if, after this, a balance were due to him from the new firm, the assignees of the bond, then no right of set-off would exist at law, because the assignment of the chose in action would be inoperative at law, & the obligees of the bond, & debtor on the general account, would be different persons; but as, in equity, the persons entitled to the bond, & debtors on the general account, would be the same persons, a right of set-off would exist in this ct., & the customer would, in equity, be entitled to set off the balance due to him against the bond debt due from him.

If, after the bond had been given, it had been assigned to strangers, & no notice of that assignment had been given to original debtor, the obligor of the bond, then his rights would remain the same. Thus, if the assignment had been made to the stranger before any alteration of the firm, then the right of set-off would still remain at law, where the obligees of the bond & debtors on the general account would be the same persons, & in equity also, if the matter of account were brought here, as the assignees of the chose in action would be bound by the equities affecting their assignors.

But if notice of that assignment had been given to original debtor, no right of set-off would exist, in this ct., for the balance subsequently due from the bankers to the obligor, because the persons entitled to the bond would, as the obligor knew, be different persons from debtors to him on the general account, with whom he had continued to deal.

If the assignment of the bond had been made to the new firm, with notice to the obligor, they would, if debtors on the general account, be liable to the same rights of set-off in equity as if they had been the obligees.

If, after the alteration of the firm, & after the assignment of the bond to the new firm, with notice to debtor or obligor of that assignment, an assignment had been made of the bond to strangers, & no notice of that second assignment given to the obligor, then the rights of set-off would still remain to him in equity, as against the first assignees, of whose assignment he had notice; & the second assignees would, in equity, be bound by it, because the assignees of the bond take it subject to all the equities which affect the assignors.

A change of the title of the firm in a banker's pass-book, & entries therein to the credit of the new firm of the interest of securities given by the customer to the original firm, held to be notice of the assignment to the new firm of the securities given by the customer to the old firm.

(2) Bankers, to whom a customer had given a bond, assigned it over to third parties, who gave no notice to the obligor:—Held: notwithstanding the assignment, the customer's right continued, of setting off moneys due to him from his bankers against the bond.—CAVENDISH v. GEAVES (1857), 24 Beav. 163; 27 L. J. Ch. 314; 29 L. T. O. S. 256; 3 Jur. N. S. 1086; 5 W. R. 615; 53 E. R. 319.

(a) "The corpn. of P. Account." (b) "The Corpn. Baths & Washhouses Revenue Account." (c) "The P. Local Board of Health Account." Upon the first account they were indebted to the bank, & upon the other two the bank was indebted to them in an equal amount. In an action brought by the banker to recover the balance due to him on account (a):—Held: the corpn. were entitled to set off the debts due to them on the other two accounts.—PEDDER v. PRESTON CORPN. (1862), 12 C. B. N. S. 535; 31 L. J. C. P. 291; 6 L. T. 540; 9 Jur. N. S. 496; 10 W. R. 773; 142 E. R. 1251.

220. ———— On executorship account.]—A banking firm stopped payment in July, 1870, & were at once adjudged bkpt. At the time of the stoppage deft. had an account with the bank, which he had overdrawn about £300. At the end of 1869 a Mrs. A. had died, appointing deft. sole exor. of her will, & leaving a balance of about £600 in the hands of the bank. This balance was at once transferred by the bank from the account of Mrs. A. to the account of deft., "exor. of the late Mrs. A." In the interval before the stoppage deft. had drawn out about £200 of this account, & paid in about £100, leaving a balance in deft.'s favour of about £500. Deft. was left sole residuary legatee by Mrs. A.'s will. There were several pecuniary legacies which deft. had paid at the date of the stoppage of the bank; but there was a sum of £800 to be invested for the benefit of certain persons, & an annuity of £100, charged on the real & personal estate; & at the date of the bkpcy. deft. had not specifically provided for these two bequests, but there were in the hands of deft., besides the balance in the bank, other personal assets of testatrix; & after providing for these bequests, there would have been a surplus of £1,900, to which deft. was entitled as residuary legatee. Pltf., as trustee of bkpts.' estate, having brought an action against deft. to recover the amount of his overdrawn account, deft. sought to set off the balance in his favour on the exorship. account:—Held: the transfer of the balance of deceased's account to the account of deft., as exor., was equivalent to deft. drawing out the whole amount & paying the same amount in to a fresh account, & created a personal debt for money lent between deft. & the bank; the effect of it being opened as an exorship. account was to affect the bank with notice if there were any equities attaching to the fund; but under the circumstances, there were no such equities as to prevent deft. treating the balance as a fund to which he was beneficially as well as legally entitled; & consequently, deft. was entitled to set it against pltf.'s claim.—BAILEY v. FINCH (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 34; 41 L. J. Q. B. 83; 25 L. T. 871; 20 W. R. 294.

221. ———— Credit on trust account—Against debt in private account.]—G., a county treasurer, used to pay the county moneys into the B. Bank, but kept his private account at the N. & P. Bank, & carried over the police rates to this account by cheques drawn on the B. Bank. In Feb. 1869, he opened a separate account with the N. & P. Bank, headed "Police Account." Some of the items to his credit in this account could be traced as having come from county funds, but most of them could not. The cheques which he drew upon it were all headed "Police Account" & appeared to have been drawn only for county purposes. For the purposes of interest the N. & P. Bank treated the accounts as one account, & the interest on the balance in his favour was carried to the credit of his private account. At the time when the police account was opened, the manager of the bank knew that G. was county treasurer, & understood that he had been in the habit of paying county moneys into the bank. On Apr. 8, 1870, G. absconded, his private account being overdrawn, & the police account being in credit:—Held: the bank was not entitled to set off the one account against the other, but the county magistrates were entitled to recover the balance standing to G.'s credit on the police account.—*Re GROSS, Ex p. 223. ——— Executor beneficially entitled to amount due in character of executor.]—N. & C. were exors. of a will & trustees of the residuary real & personal estate of testator who died in 1859. N. & F. were tenants for life of the residuary estate in equal shares. In Jan. 1873, C. was residing abroad, & N., being about also to go abroad, gave to P., the solr. of the exors. & trustees, an authority on behalf of both trustees to receive the rents of the real estate & pay the outgoing. Under this authority P. received the rents, & at his death a considerable sum was due from him in respect thereof. P.'s estate proved insolvent, & the usual creditor's decree was made for administration. Subsequently to the decree F. assigned to N. all F.'s interest in the sum due from P. N. was indebted to A. & B. as trustees for P. in a sum the repayment of which was secured by a mtge. of real estate belonging to N., & this sum was paid into ct. in the suit to a separate account, under an order made without prejudice to any question as to set-off. N. afterwards presented a petition claiming to be entitled to set off the debt due from P. against the mtge. debt, & seeking to have the amount of the debt due from P. paid out of the fund standing to the separate account:—Held: (1) as regards F.'s interest there could be no set off, inasmuch as it was not assigned to N. until after the decree; (2) the debt due from P. being either due to both trustees & exors., or if due to N. alone, due to him in his character of trustee & exor., could not be set off against a debt due from him individually.—*MIDDLETON v. The judgment not having been passed & entered, ptlf. moved for the addition of a direction enabling him to deduct the costs due to him from deft. from so much of the purchase-money as represented her beneficial interest in intestate's estate:—Held: though a set-off of costs against purchase-money might be allowed in a case where the debt due to & the debt due from the vendor were so due in the same capacity, ptlf. here could not be allowed to bring into account all or any part of an unascertained sum to which deft. might be beneficially entitled in the administration of her intestate's estate, as against the purchase-money which was due to her in her representative capacity.—*PHILLIPS v. In an action for the £45 brought by pltf. as such assignee deft. sought, by way of set-off & counterclaim, to set up the unsatisfied judgment for £550 against J. G., the assignor, on the ground that he was acting as receiver & manager of G.'s estate in buying the lambs, & that he was entitled to set off a debt due to him as exor. against a debt due from him as receiver in respect of the same estate.—Held: as between deft. & J. G., the assignor, the liability in respect of the lambs was a purely personal one, & deft. was therefore not entitled to set off against it a debt due to the estate.—NELSON v. for securing that amount & interest. B. subsequently died, having made his will, & appointed C. & D. his exors. & residuary legatees: an apportionment of B.'s residuary estate being made the bond is allotted to C. as part of his share: C. being the steward of A., & having a running account with him, enters the bond in that account. C. dies intestate, leaving a widow, who takes out administration to his estate, & also administration, de bonis non to B.; & as such last mentioned administratrix, she filed a bill as a specialty creditor against the representatives of A.:—Held: in this suit, the representatives of A. could not make a set-off against the demand, in respect of sums which they alleged to have been omitted, or improperly charged in the account of C., but must file a cross bill.

235. ———— Debt due from defendant personally—Against sums paid as executor.—The widow of testator, with the acquiescence of his heir, was let into possession of certain freehold houses, under an erroneous supposition that they passed by the will along with other property, in which a life interest was devised to her; & before the error was discovered or her right disputed she died. On a bill filed by the heir against her personal representative, praying the delivery of title deeds & an account:—Held: the suit was maintainable for the rents received during her continuance in possession; as the defence of Stat. Limitations was not raised upon the pleadings, the account should be taken from the time when pltf.'s title first accrued; & pltf. was not at liberty to set off the amount of such rents against payments made by the widow in her character of extrix, those payments being, by virtue of a special trust, a primary charge upon the estates of which, subject to the widow's life interest, pltf. was devisee.—MONYPENNY v. This mtge. was executed by both pltf.s, but the husband alone covenanted for the repayment of the money. The objects for which the money was raised were only, as deft. knew, to pay a certain debt which the husband owed, & to build some cottages upon the wife's separate estate. Deft., upon the written authority of both pltf.s, received the money from mtgee., & paid the husband's debt, the costs of the mtge., & a small sum to pltf.s, but he claimed to retain the balance, which was the amount sued for in this action, that amount being due to him from the husband alone for previous professional services:—Held: the wife being in part the meritorious cause of action the husband had the power to give his wife an interest in the contract with deft., & to join her in an action upon it; & deft. could not set off the husband's debt.—*JONES v. 258. —.]—A judgment debt due from B. & others, in action of trespass, in which B. was chiefly concerned, & bound to indemnify his co-defts., was set off against a judgment debt due to B. from pltf.—BOURNE v. BENETT (1827), 4 Bing. 423; 1 Moo. & P. 141; 130 E. R. 831.

259. — Plaintiff having separate demand against one defendant.]—The ct. will permit defts. to set off a judgment, recovered by them against pltf., against a judgment obtained by pltf. against them, notwithstanding pltf. may also have a separate demand on one of defts.—GLAISTER v. HEWER (1798), 8 Term Rep. 69; 101 E. R. 1271.

260. — Interests of third persons intervening.]—A judgment recovered by A. against B. & C. will not be set off, on application to the general jurisdiction of the ct., against another judgment recovered against A. by the assignees of B. under an Insolvent Debtors' Act, the interest of third persons intervening, who have peculiar trusts by the statute.—DOE v. DARTON (1802), 3 East, 149; 102 E. R. 554.

Annotation:—Refd. West v. Pryce (1825), 10 Moore, C. P. 154.

261. —.]—A. having obtained a verdict against B. & co., his bankers, for the amount of his cash balance & nominal damages for dishonouring his cheque, & B. & co. having brought actions against A. upon bills of exchange to a larger amount which they had discounted for him, the judge stayed the execution in A.'s action until the fifth day of the following term. B. & co.'s actions in the meantime ripened into judgments. The ct. allowed the judgments to be set off against each other, subject to the lien, if any, of A.'s attorney, notwithstanding A. had in the meantime become bkpt., & thus the interests of third parties had intervened.—ALLIANCE BANK OF LONDON & LIVERPOOL, LTD. v. HOLFORD, HOLFORD v. ALLIANCE BANK OF LONDON & LIVERPOOL, LTD. (1864), 16 C. B. N. S. 460; 143 E. R. 1207.

SUB-SECT. 16.—NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.

279. Action by indorsee against maker—Set-off by maker—Fraudulent indorsement.—To a declaration against the maker of a promissory note, indorsed by W. to pltf., deft. pleaded a set-off due to him from W. before the indorsement to pltf. & that W. in order to deprive deft. of his set-off fraudulently indorsed to pltf., in order to enable pltf. to sue on the said note as agent of W., & that there was no consideration for the indorsement to pltf. & that pltf. sued as agent of W. according to the said fraud. Replication, de injuriâ:—Held: good, as the substance of the plea was, that the indorsement to pltf. was fraudulent.—TOLHURST v. NOTLEY (1848), 11 Q. B. 406; 17 L. J. Q. B. 97; 12 Jur. 43; 116 E. R. 529.

280. Action by holder against drawer—Right of joint acceptor to prove set-off.—The joint acceptor of a bill of exchange is not competent to prove a set-off in an action by the holder against the drawer.—MANWARING v. MYTTON (1815), 1 Stark. 83; 171 E. R. 409, N. P.

281. Action by indorsee against acceptor—Set-off of claim by acceptor against drawer.—Assumption by indorsee against acceptor of a bill of exchange. Pleas, first, that before & at the time of the indorsing of the bill by the drawer, the drawer was & still is indebted to deft. to an amount exceeding the amount of the bill, & that, after the bill became due, in order to deprive deft. of his right of set-off, in respect of the said debt, he fraudulently, & without any consideration, indorsed the bill to enable pltf. to sue deft. thereon. Secondly, that the drawer, before indorsement, applied to the Insolvent Debtors Ct. for relief, whereby the right to the bill vested in his assignees:—Held: both these pleas were issuable pleas.—WATKINS v. BENSUSAN (1842), 9 M. & W. 422; 11 L. J. Ex. 378; 6 Jur. 347; 152 E. R. 179.

q. — Set-off for goods sold & delivered—Special agreement as to payment.—To an action on a note defts.

pleaded a set-off for goods sold & delivered, but the evidence showed that the set-off claimed was for goods sold to pltf. by deft. on a special agreement that pltf. should pay a third party for them, & not deft.:—Held: the goods so delivered could not form the subject matter of a set-off.—MATTHEWSON v. CARMAN (1846), 1 U. C. R. 266.—CAN.

r. — Set-off of joint & several note of plaintiff & others—Suit brought against makers.—MOORE v. ANDREWS (1863), 13 C. P. 405.—CAN.

t. — Note for purchase-money—Claim for damages for failure to resell owing to mortgage.—On a sale of lands the purchaser gave his note for the balance of purchase-money, & received a conveyance containing the usual covenants. There was a mtge. on the property at the time for a sum less than the note, & the purchaser claimed to set off against the note damages he had sustained by being unable to resell the land in consequence of the mtge.:—Held: not allowable.

282. ———.]—To an action on a bill of exchange for £20, drawn by J. L., & indorsed to pltf., & accepted by deft., deft. pleaded, that, before & at the time of the indorsement, J. L. was indebted on £1 13s. 1d. to deft., & that J. L. held the bill on the terms that the sum so due should be set off against the amount of the bill; & that J. L., in fraud of deft., & in collusion with pltf., indorsed the bill to them, who sued as agents merely of J. L.:—Held: the plea was not issuable.—MAYHEW v. BLOFIELD (1847), 1 Exch. 469; 154 E. R. 199.

283. Accord & satisfaction by one joint maker of promissory note—Effect on set-off against other joint promissor.—C. as security for B. joined him in a promissory note to A. payable two months after date. On the note becoming due, B. was unable to take it up, & applied to A. to allow a renewal; A. consented, & received the discount for a further period of two months. On B.'s saying he would procure the new note as soon as he could see the surety, A. observed that it did not signify, it might stand over, as it would save the stamp. C. declined to agree to this, & a new note was prepared & repeatedly tendered to A. who, however, did not take it, alleging that he had not got the old note with him, & that he was busy, & consequently B. retained the new note, & A. continued to hold the old one:—Held: if A. agreed with B. that the old note was satisfied by the payment of the discount & a renewed note, & if the old note was held by A. for B., & B. held the new note for A. the old note could not be pleaded by way of set-off to an action by C. against A. & on the above facts there was evidence for the jury that the old note was so satisfied.—SNEAD v. SMITH (1851), 17 L. T. O. S. 289.

284. Set-off against accommodation indorser—Right of indorser to notice of dishonour.—Pltf. &

deft. were shareholders of a co., when deft. agreed to advance certain money to A. B., the manager, for the purposes of such co., upon having the bond of the said A. B., with the guarantee of pltf. for its repayment. In order to carry out such agreement, & in lieu of such bond & guarantee, a bill of exchange was given, which was drawn by such manager upon & accepted by himself as agent & on behalf of such co., & indorsed by pltf. to whose order it was made payable:—Held: pltf. was entitled to notice of dishonour; & therefore, for want of such notice, deft. could not make the bill the subject of a set-off.—MALTASS v. SIDDLE (1859), 6 C. B. N. S. 494; 28 L. J. C. P. 257; 33 L. T. O. S. 124; 5 Jur. N. S. 1169; 7 W. R. 449; 141 E. R. 549.

SUB-SECT. 17.—PARTNERS.

285. Set-off between partners—Claim on private debt—Set-off of partnership debt.—As to the equity of set-off for partnership debts paid by a continuing partner, against a legal debt due from him to a retired partner, upon a bond for a private loan. One of two partners, as bankers, lent to his partner a sum of money on the joint & several bond & covenant of the borrower & another person in 1821, & died in 1833; the obligor continued to pay interest till 1843, when he died, & his exor. paid interest up to 1847. On the death of the obligee in 1833, some settlement of the banking affairs was come to between his exor. & the surviving partner & another subsequently admitted, which the exor. alleged was final, but which was disputed. in the firm, each new firm taking on itself all the former liabilities & assets. In 1847 the firm in which the exor. had continued a partner became bkpt. In a suit for the administration of the estate of the obligor certain creditors of the firm, on promissory notes given prior to 1833, whose debts had been adopted by the successive firms, were admitted as separate creditors of his estate. The exor. of the obligee was admitted as a creditor for the loan, & no equitable set-off for contribution was allowed, none having been established in respect of the said estate of the obligee being separately liable to creditors, although it was probable that, in winding up the partnership affairs, some claim by the obligor's estate against the estate of the obligee might be established. In an administration suit a creditor's claim was admitted as a claim only by the master's report, to which the creditor did not except. Shortly afterwards the result of a suit tended to establish his debt; after more than a year creditor petitioned to be admitted as a creditor against the estate:—Held: he might be admitted, without being charged with the costs, which had not been increased by the delay.—*LEE v. SUB-SECT. 18.—SALE OF GOODS.

287. Action for price—Set-off for goods sold & not delivered.]—If A. agree to make a waggon for B. & make it accordingly, but refuse to deliver it unless the money is paid on delivery, the money which was to be paid for the waggon may be set off to any demand of B. against A. as goods bargained & sold.—*DUNMORE v. 290. — Set-off of insurance moneys received by seller—Insurance for benefit of seller.]—Pltfs., refiners of sugar, sold to debt., a broker, a certain number of "titlers" or sugar loaves then lying in their warehouse. A sold note delivered to the buyer, contained a description of the numbers & marks on the titlers, & also the following terms, viz., "Prompt one month . . . goods at seller's risk for two months." It was the practice to weigh titlers so sold when & not until the brokers or their sub-purchasers came to remove them from the refiner's premises; but an estimated price calculated on their approximate weight was paid on the "prompt" day, & the difference between the sum then paid & the actual price adjusted after the weighing was accomplished. The approximate price of the titlers in question was accordingly paid at prompt. They remained on the premises after the expiration of two months from the sale, & were subsequently destroyed by fire together, with a quantity of unsold sugar. Pltfs. having insured all the contents of their warehouses by floating policies covering goods on the premises, "sold & paid for, but not removed," received the sum insured from the insurance office, but the amount was not enough to compensate them for the loss of their own goods. They had no agreement with their customers to insure sugar sold, but not taken away.

An action having been brought by pltfs. against debt. for the price of the sugar sold to him:—Held: he could not set off any part of the money paid by the insurance office to pltfs., against the price, as the insurance was not effected for his benefit, & was only sufficient to cover their own loss.—MARTINEAU v. KITCHING (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 436; 41 L. J. Q. B. 227; 26 L. T. 836; 20 W. R. 769.

292. Set-off of claim under rules of Produce Brokers Association—Against claim for special damage.]—By two contracts made in Nov. 1918, the sellers, W. H. & co. sold to the buyer 3½ tons Ceylonese essence of citronella, c.i.f. Marseilles. The contracts contained (inter alia), provisions as follows: "Delivery: shipment from Ceylon beginning of Dec. Terms: terms of the General Produce Brokers' Assocn. London." One of the terms of the Assocn., Rule 9 (f), provided that "whenever . . . the seller has failed to fulfil the terms of the contract the buyer shall close by invoicing back the produce to the seller at once, at a price & weight to be fixed by arbn., which price shall be not less than 2 per cent., & not more than 10 per cent. over the estimated market value of the shipment contracted for on the day on which the default occurs, the difference to be due in cash in seven days." The sellers committed a breach of both contracts by failing to ship the citronella at the time agreed. Negotiations took place between the parties; the buyer informed the sellers that he had already resold the citronella to buyers in France, but he would be willing to extend the time for shipment if his buyers in France would consent to such extension. The French buyers agreed that, subject to their being allowed an abatement of the price, they would accept delivery if shipment was made not later than Jan. 23, 1919, & on this being communicated to them, the sellers undertook to ship by that date. The sellers again made default. The parties went to arbn., the buyer claiming as special damage the profit which he would have made if he had been able to carry out his contract of resale to his buyers in France, & the sellers contending that no special damage was recoverable & that in any event a sum of money was payable to them by the buyer under Rule 9 (f). The umpire stated a case under Arbitration Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 7:—Held: in a case in which a buyer was entitled to recover special damage, Rule 9 (f) did not operate to give a defaulting seller the right to recover a sum from the buyer which could be set off against the sum payable as special damage.—Re BOURGEOIS & WILSON, HOLGATE & Co. (1920), 25 Com. 293. Action for specific performance—Set off of mortgage debt—Against unpaid purchase money.]

PART I. SECT. 10, SUB-SECT. 19.

1. Set-off of balance of unpaid purchase-money secured by mortgage.]—After a conveyance, incumbrances upon the property sold were discovered, created by a former owner, but of which neither the vendor nor the purchaser had been previously aware. The covenants given by the vendor only extended to his own acts & the acts of those claiming under him:—Held: the vendor was not bound to pay off the incumbrances, & therefore that the purchaser was not entitled to set off against them a balance of his purchase money remaining unpaid & secured by mortgage.—Re BUCK, PECK v. BUCK (1873), 6 P. R. 98.—CAN.

h. Purchaser with notice of mortgage—Set-off of amount due on pur-

—A. became purchaser at an auction of certain estates, for which he was to pay a sum of £2,700. He paid the usual deposit of £270. The conditions of sale provided that interest at 4 per cent. should be paid on the balance of the purchase-money. He was previously mtgee. of the same estate, with other property, secured for the repayment of £2,000 at 5 per cent. interest. Under the contract for sale the purchaser entered into possession of the estate, without having waived any objections there might be to the title. As mtgee., he was in possession of the principal title deeds. A considerable period of time, nearly ten years, elapsed without the formal conveyance being executed, the evidence of title not having been completed. No account of the interest due on the mtge., or on the deposit, had been come to:—Held: the necessary accounts should be taken upon the principle that at the time the purchaser took possession, the amount due on the mtge. was to be considered as a payment or set-off, pro tanto, against the amount of the purchase-money; with a direction to charge 4 per cent. only on the balance of the purchase-money.—WALLIS v. BASTARD (1853), 4 De G. M. & G. 251; 2 Bq. Rep. 508; 22 L. T. O. S. 162; 17 Jur. 1107; 2 W. R. 47; 43 E. R. 503, L. C. & L. JJ.

294. —Set-off of rent received by purchaser in possession.]—A dispute arose between the trustees for deceased vendor & a purchaser, the purchaser claiming to be entitled under his agreement to an additional piece of land. The trustees filed a bill & obtained a decree for specific performance, excluding the additional piece of land. The trustees had not allowed the purchaser to take possession of the rest of the land whilst the purchase-money remained unpaid, & in the meantime the rest of the land was allowed to lie waste:—Held: the purchaser must be allowed to set off against the interest payable by him the amount of rent which might have been received, & the amount of deterioration.—*PHILLIPS v. 295. —Agreement to set off debt of vendor against purchase-money—Purchaser without knowledge of bankruptcy.]—A. contracted to do certain work in connection with some houses debtor was building. In Feb. 1908, £100 became due to A. on the architect's certificate, which debtor could not pay. Debtor subsequently suggested that A. should buy four of the houses & so satisfy the amount due under that certificate & also under a further certificate which would shortly be given. About the middle of June A. signed two contracts for the purchase of four houses. The first contract was for three houses on which the £100 was treated as a deposit. The other contract was for the fourth house. On the making of the contracts

296. Set-off by surety against creditor—What may be set off—Contract for sale of goods—Difference in price.]—A surety agreed to guarantee the payment of goods supplied by pltf. to B. under a contract with Govt. At the time the guarantee was given negotiations only were on foot, but soon after the Govt. contract was made with B., & also the sub-contract between B. & pltf. Each contract provided that the arts. were to be supplied within given periods; but, in point of fact, the arts. were not supplied by pltf. to B. or by B. to Govt., until long after the fixed period. Govt., however, had the option, & waived the delay, & paid B. the contract price. B. not having paid pltf., pltf. sued the surety on the guarantee, & the surety sought to show that the price given by B. in the contract with pltf. was a high one on account of the shortness of the time within which the goods were to be delivered, & that the market price at the time the goods were delivered was much lower, & he claimed to set off the difference between the two prices in this action:—Held: the surety could not set off the difference in price.—*OASTLER v. other security—Equitable mortgage by deposit.]—A father put his sons in possession of land of which the father was equitable owner, subject to a vendor's lien. The sons paid the father for buildings previously erected by him, & built others at considerable expense. The sons afterwards, pretending to have the father's consent, deposited the contract for the land to secure present & future advances from their bankers, & shortly afterwards became bkpt. The bankers then required a conveyance from the father, which he refused, alleging that the contract had been improperly abstracted from him, that the demand of the bank was his first intimation of the transaction. The father having been before the deposit surety for his sons in an independent matter & having after their bkpcy. been called upon to pay, & having in consequence assigned his property to trustees for creditors:—Held: he would have had a set-off against the lien in the hands of the sons, but not as against the bank.—*UNITY JOINT-STOCK MUTUAL BANKING ASSOCN. v. 300. What may be set-off—Value of work performed by employer.]—Where a person is employed to do certain work for a certain sum, & part of the work is afterwards done by the employer, the amount of the latter work is matter, not of set-off, but of deduction. Where, therefore, in debt for work & labour, deft. pleaded, never indebted except as to £37 6s. 8d., payment of £36 3s. before action, & payment of £1 3s. 8d. into ct., & pltf. joined issue on the first & second pleas, & took the £1 3s. 8d. out of ct., & at the trial deft. proved an agreement to do the work for £40, & that he had paid £36 3s. on account, independently of the £1 3s. 8d. paid into ct., & to cover the balance, £2 13s. 4d., he proved that he had employed workmen to finish the work, & had paid them the last mentioned sum:—Held: the evidence was admissible under the plea of never indebted, & the £2 13s. 4d. could not be pleaded as a set-off.—*TURNER v. 301. — Expenditure in repair of negligent work.]—A. contracted to build a shed for B. Terms, everything to be completed to satisfaction of B.'s engineers, payment 90 per cent. on completion of work, 10 per cent. to be held over for six months to answer defects in work. A. sent in his bill in Feb. as for completed shed with a letter containing these words, "as the shed will be completed before the close of the month," & was paid 90 per cent. of the price. In Oct.

B., who had done repairs to the shed, which A. declined to do, offered to pay the residue, after deducting the cost of such repairs. In an action by A. for the whole of the residue:—Held: defts. were not estopped by the payment in Feb. from showing that the work was not completed, nor from going into the amount of the defective work; the amount paid by defts. for repairs was not the subject of a set-off; there was evidence to go to a jury of work done by A. since Feb. & till Oct. six months had not elapsed since the completion of the work.—MOSS v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1874), 22 W. R. 532.

302. — Deduction for work performed negligently.]—If A. employ B. to make bricks for him at a stipulated price per thousand, & B. do so, & some of the bricks be so badly made as to be good for nothing, A. will be entitled to make a deduction for those badly made bricks out of the stipulated price, & may make such deduction in an action brought by B. for the stipulated price; but if the bricks be badly made in a trifling degree, only so as merely to be less valuable than they otherwise would have been, A., in an action for the stipulated price, will not be entitled to make any deduction on this account.—PARDOW v. WEBB (1842), Car. & M. 531, N. P.

303. — Action to recover overpayment—On failure to complete work—Value of work done.]—Pltf. in the county ct. sought to recover £47 18s. 4d. under the following circumstances. Deft. had done work for pltf. under a contract to the value of £219 2s. 4d. During the progress of the work, pltf. had from time to time made payments in respect of it, which, together with £14 paid to deft.'s workmen for wages, amounted to £267 0s. 8d., thus exceeding the value of the work done by £47 18s. 4d., the amount claimed in the action. The money overpaid by pltf. was to be repaid by the doing of work; but deft. stopped the works before they were completed:—Held: the value of the work done was not the subject of a set-off, & pltf. could recover the money in the county ct.—*RIGBY v. Where therefore pltf. recovered £48 on his claim, & also succeeded upon a counterclaim for £123:—Held: for the purposes of taxation the claim & counterclaim must be treated as independent actions; the costs of the counterclaim followed the ordinary rule as to costs & pltf. was entitled to have the costs of his defence to the counterclaim taxed on the High Ct. scale.—*AMON v. Pltf. proceeded with the action, & in the result £465 was found to be due to him on his claim, & £210 to defts. on their counterclaim:—Held: (1) the sum paid into ct. was not property "recovered or preserved" by the exertions of pltf.'s solr. within Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, so as to entitle him to charge the whole sum with payment of his costs; (2) the claim & counterclaim must be treated as one action for the purpose of determining the solr.'s right to a charging order for his costs; (3) the sum recovered in an action was the balance remaining in favour of pltf. after deducting from the amount found to be due on his claim the amount found to be due to defts. on their counterclaim, & therefore pltf.'s solr. was only entitled to a charging order in respect of that balance.—*WESTACOTT v. 319. —.]—Pltf., as execution creditor, applied to attach money in the hands of defts., the garnishees. The money had been deposited by the judgment debtor with defts. for a special purpose that had failed. Defts. claimed that judgment debtor was indebted to them for law costs in a larger sum than that deposited with them, & that they would be entitled to counter-claim for the amount due to them:—Held: since, on the failure of the special purpose for which it was deposited with defts., the money remained in their hands subject to a trust to repay it to judgment debtor, they could not have set up their claim to costs in answer to a demand for the return of the money, & therefore it was a debt due from them to judgment debtor which could be attached.

Counterclaim is really in the nature of a cross-action. This ct. has determined that, where there is a counterclaim, in settling the rights of parties, the claim & counterclaim are, for all purposes except execution, two independent actions (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—STUMORE v. 320. —.]—In 1893, an Act was passed enabling pltf. co. to take compulsorily (inter alia) the property to which this action related. In 1894 the owner of the property let it to debt. for a term of years by a lease containing the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment. In 1895 the co. purchased the reversion of the property, subject to the lease. After this the co. proceeded with their works, & in so doing caused structural injury to debt.'s house; they also for some time rendered the access to his premises less convenient, by erecting hoardings which blocked up half the thoroughfare along the street in which his house stood, & by taking a great number of carts along that street. They also for three or four days encumbered a passage along which he had a right of way so that he could not use it. It was not alleged that the co. had exceeded their statutory powers or exercised them negligently. The co. sued debt. for rent, & he counterclaimed for damages for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment:—Held: the covenant for quiet enjoyment was in force & was binding on the co., & they were liable to make compensation for any breach of it, but no action would lie against them for any breach of it committed in the reasonable & careful exercise of their statutory powers, the only remedy of the tenant for such breaches being under the compensation clauses of Railways Clauses (Consolidation) Act, 1845 (c. 20), & Lands Clauses (Consolidation) Act, 1845 (c. 18), & the counterclaim, therefore, had been properly dismissed.—MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. Before the debts were assigned to T. the liquidator took out a summons in the winding up of the co. to make H. liable for a misfeasance, & subsequently to the assignment an order was made that H. who was an original director of the co., should pay the liquidator £2,000, "the nominal value of the eighty-five shares in the co. received by H. from the promoter of the co." :—Held: as the co. had elected to take the value of the shares, their claim against H. was not a debt but damages, & therefore the £2,000 could not be set off against the dividends payable to T. in respect of the debts.

(2) R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 3, 1875, is only a rule of procedure, & was not intended to give rights against third persons which did not exist before. It was held, therefore, not to affect the question of set-off.

An argument which I must especially notice is that since Jud. Acts, 1873 (c. 66) & 1875 (c. 77), under R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 3, "a debt in an action may set off or set up by way of counterclaim against claims of pltf., any right or claim, whether such set-off or counterclaim is sound in damages or not" & that consequently the liquidator has now this right of set-off, even though he might not have had it before these statutes. In my opinion, that rule was not intended to give rights against third persons which did not exist before, but is a rule of procedure designed to prevent the necessity of bringing a cross-action in all cases where the counterclaim may conveniently be tried in the original action (KAY, J.).—Re MILAN

340. ——— Action for damages for breach of contract—Counterclaim against plaintiff surety.]—Deft. is entitled to add a third person as party to the action if deft.'s counterclaim shows a question arising between himself & pltf. along with that third person, & relating to the cause of action sued upon by pltf., even although the third person could not be a party to pltf.'s original claim.

Claim for damages for preventing pltf. from completing certain work pursuant to a contract with defts. Defence: that by a clause in the contract defts. had power to take the work out of pltf.'s hands if he failed to do it properly; that pltf. did so fail, & defts. took the work out of his hands; & by way of counterclaim, that owing to pltf.'s breach of contract defts. did expend £256 in excess of what it would have cost them if pltf. had fulfilled his agreement; & that R. had, by a general bond, bound himself in the sum of £200 for the proper execution of the work, & they sought to recover £256 from pltf., & £200 under the bond, from R. Defts. having served R. with the defence & counterclaim pursuant to R. S. C., Ord. 22, r. 6, R. moved to strike out the counterclaim:—Held: the claim for relief by defts. against R., by way of counterclaim, was a question arising between defts. & pltf. along with R. within R. S. C., Ord. 22, r. 5; & defts. were entitled to add R. as party to the action.—TURNER v. HEDNESFORD GAS CO. (1878), 3 Ex. D. 145; 47 L. J. Q. B. 296; 38 L. T. 8; 42 J. P. 790; 26 W. R. 308, C. A.

341. ——— Action for libel—Counterclaim for libel by agent.]—Pltfs., a registered co., & their managing director, carrying on business as dealers in motor cars, brought an action against deft., who was the managing director of another registered co. carrying on a similar business, claiming damages in respect of an alleged libel written by deft., & caused by him to be published in two trade journals concerning pltfs. & their motor cars. Deft., while admitting that he had written the statements complained of, which he said was done in the course of & concerning a long controversy in the motoring press with regard to the respective merits of pltfs.' cars & those manufactured by his co., each company puffing their own wares & decrying those of trade rivals, counterclaimed as follows: That pltfs. by their agent falsely & maliciously wrote & caused to be published in one of the trade journals a statement which, as deft. alleged, meant that he was a man who did not pay wagers when he had lost them, & was a dishonourable man with whom it was not safe to have any dealings. Deft. accordingly joined pltfs.' agent as deft. to his counterclaim, & asked for damages:—Held: upon the true construction of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 24 (3), the counterclaim did not seek "relief relating to or connected with the original subject of the cause or matter," & ought therefore to be struck out.—*EDGE (S. 342. ——— Action for goods sold—Counterclaim against seller & railway company.]—Pltf. brought an action against deft. for the price of goods sold & delivered, the contract being one to deliver goods f.o.r. at P. station for transmission to deft. at Exeter. Deft., by his defence, pleaded, first, that pltf. failed to deliver the goods in good condition, & therefore, did not fulfil his contract; & secondly, that if he did deliver them in good condition, he committed a breach of an implied term of his contract so to pack the goods that they should be reasonably fit to stand the ordinary risks of transit by rail. He also raised the same point against pltf. by way of counterclaim, & claimed damages. To that counterclaim he joined the G. W. ry. co. as defts., & alleged against them that the goods having been delivered to them at P. station in good condition, they, in breach of their duty as carriers, so treated them that when they arrived at their destination they were in bad condition; & claimed damages against them. He further pleaded that if the goods at the date of their delivery to the railway co. were in good condition he claimed to recover damages against them, & alternatively, in the event of its being found that the goods at the date of their delivery to the railway co. were in bad condition, he claimed to recover damages against pltf. On an application by pltf. the judge at chambers refused to order that the counterclaim, in so far as it joined the railway co. as defts. to the counterclaim, should be struck out:—Held: the claims were not strictly alternative, so as to be mutually exclusive;

E. brought an action against defts. for specific performance of an agreement to take a lease of coal under the lands of E., & also for an account of royalties in respect of the coals got by them since their taking possession under the agreement. Defts. denied that they were working the coals under any agreement with E., but alleged that they were working under an agreement with a lease from the Ecclesiastical Comrs. They also by leave served a notice on the Ecclesiastical Comrs. of a claim to be indemnified by them, to the extent of any rent paid by defts. to the Comrs., in respect of any payments or damages which they might be ordered to make or pay to pltf. The Comrs. obtained an order giving them leave to deliver a "counterclaim," the order not stating to whom the counterclaim was to be delivered. 367. Account—Account decreed in colonial court in concurrent action.]—B., of London, & M. & C., of Honduras, carried on business in partnership at Honduras as G. & co. B. & N. carried on business in partnership in London under the same name. The Honduras firm employed the London firm as their agents under an agreement by which B.'s share in the profits of the Honduras firm was to be brought into account as between the two firms to the credit of the English firm. The Honduras partnership was dissolved, & B. obtained a decree in Honduras for taking the partnership accounts. Before those accounts had been fully taken, M. & C. brought this action in England against the London firm for an account of the dealings between the two firms, alleging debts. To have made improper profits in their agency. Debts. denied having made improper profits, & by counterclaim claimed to have the accounts of the Honduras firm taken. The judge ordered the counterclaim to be struck out:—Held: though if M. & C. had not brought this action, B. would not, after obtaining a decree in Honduras, have been allowed to carry on another action here for the same purpose, still as the two actions were so closely connected that neither of them could be finally wound up independently of the other, B. ought not to be prevented from proceeding with his counterclaim so as to be in a position to ask at the trial of this action for such a decree as might be right, having regard to the then position of the Honduras action; & on N.'s undertaking to be bound by the proceedings in the Honduras action, the order of the judge must be discharged. —*MUTRIE v. 368. Action by assignee of marine policy—Counterclaim by underwriters for money owing by assignor—In respect of matters not connected with policy.]—In an action by the assignee of a policy of marine insurance, the insurers are not entitled to set off a debt incurred with them by the assured for premiums on policies effected with them by the assured after the date of the assignment; for the claim under a policy for a loss is for unliquidated damages to which no set-off could be pleaded at law under the statutes of set-off in an action by the assured, nor in equity in a suit by the assignee, & therefore the debt incurred by the assured is not a "defence" open to the insurers under Policies of Marine Insurance Act, 1808 (c. 80), s. 1, that statute being intended merely to amend procedure, & not to alter the rights of the parties to the policy; nor is the debt incurred, by the assured the subject of "set-off" or "counterclaim" within the meaning of R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 3.—PELLAS v. NEPTUNE MARINE INSURANCE CO. (1879), 5 C. P. D. 34; 49 L. J. Q. B. 153; 42 L. T. 35; 28 W. R. 405; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 213, C. A.

372. Re-opening money-lending transaction.—A transaction of loan re-opened on the ground that the interest charged was extremely excessive in the case of a borrower who was known to the money-lender to be a man of property, there being consequently no risk which justified such an extremely high rate of interest. Money-Lenders Act, 1900 (c. 51), s. 1 (1), empowers the ct. to give relief by way of defence to a money-lender's action, only in respect of the transaction the subject-matter of the action, & as the power to re-open is limited to that transaction, so the account can only be taken in that transaction, or in some transaction part & parcel of it, or which, even though it may include new obligations, yet comprises what purports to be a close of the dealings in respect of which the money-lender is taking proceedings. If the borrower wishes to re-open an independent transaction with the money-lender, which has been closed by repayment, & is not the subject-matter of the money-lender's action, he must either counterclaim or make a proper application in the money-lender's action to re-open that transaction under Money-Lenders Act, 1890 (c. 51), s. 2 (2), or bring an independent action for that purpose.—*SAUNDERS v. 391. — Counterclaim as protection against defendant's counterclaim—Not relied on as independent claim.]—In an action for the price of goods supplied defts. counterclaimed for damages for breach by plffs. of a contract. Plffs. in their reply denied that the contract was binding on them, & further alleged that, if it was binding, defts. had committed breaches of it which caused them loss, & they counterclaimed to set off the loss so sustained against defts.' counterclaim. Upon an application to strike out the counterclaim in the reply:—Held: as plffs. did not rely upon the counterclaim in the reply as an independent claim, but merely as a protection against defts.' counterclaim, the counterclaim was properly raised in the reply & ought not to be struck out.—RENTON GIBBS & Co., LTD. v. 394. Form of plea.]—BENNETT v. WHITE, No. 208, ante.

395. — By way of rejoinder.]—Count for money had & received. Plea, as to £55 6s. parcel, etc., a tender of that sum. Replication: that the demand was on one entire contract for a larger sum than that tendered. Rejoinder: that deft. had a set-off, reducing the amount due to that tendered. Demurrer:—Held: a bad rejoinder to a good replication.—SEARLES v. SADGRAVE (1855), 5 E. & B. 639; 25 L. J. Q. B. 15; 26 L. T. O. S. 89; 2 Jur. N. S. 21; 4 W. R. 53; 119 E. R. 618.

396. Sufficiency of plea—Several claims—Set-off generally.]—Where the declaration contains several counts, it is not necessary in a plea of set-off of a smaller sum, to specify to which particular part of plff.'s claim the set-off is to be applied.—NOEL v. DAVIS (1838), 4 M. & W. 136; 1 Horn & H. 206; 7 L. J. Ex. 287; 150 E. R. 1375.

397. — Uncertainty.]—Where rooms were taken at a weekly hiring, to commence Feb. 25, & the landlord afterwards brought an action for rent, & the tenant pleaded set-off as to so much rent as accrued due before & on July 27, the interval of time being twenty-one weeks & five days, without stating how much in money he intended his plea should cover, & without explaining the circumstances of the apparent apportionment of the five days:—Held: the plea was bad for uncertainty in this respect; & the ct. would not reject the words " & on," so as to bring the time up only to July 22, which would be the completion of twenty-one weeks.—DUNN v. DI NUOVO (1841), 3 Man. & G. 105; 3 Scott, N. R. 486; 10 L. J. C. P. 318; 5 Jur. 578; 133 E. R. 1075.

398. — To call in shares.]—A plea of set-off, in respect of calls on shares in a joint-stock co., must either state the facts specially or strictly pursue the form given by 8 Vict. c. 16, s. 20; therefore, a plea founded on that statute, but omitting the words, "whereby an action hath accrued," etc., is bad on special demurrer.—MOORE v. METROPOLITAN SEWAGE MANURE Co. (1849), 3 Exch. 333; 6 Dow. & L. 406; 18 L. J. Ex. 164; 12 L. T. O. S. 354; 154 E. R. 872.

400. What must be pleaded—All facts relied on by defendant.]—The same rules apply to a counterclaim as to a statement of claim; therefore the facts on which deft. relies must be stated in the body of his counterclaim, & cannot be inferred from pltf.'s statement, & if deft. wants alternative or general relief, the counterclaim must ask it. —HOLLOWAY v. 401. ———.]—A counterclaim must contain in itself a specific statement of the facts upon which reliance is placed for the relief claimed. It is not sufficient that the facts relied upon appear in the statement of defence, even though that & the counterclaim form one continuous document. A counterclaim defective in this respect was dismissed with costs, leave to amend being, under the circumstances of the case, refused.—CROWE v. BARNICOT (1877), 6 Ch. D. 753; 46 L. J. Ch. 855; 37 L. 403. ———.]—Pltf. commenced an action & immediately obtained a writ of ne exeat against deft., who was arrested, but paid the amount for which the writ was marked to the sheriff, & obtained his release. By his statement of defence deft. alleged that the writ had been improperly obtained, & claimed damages for his arrest. The paragraphs in which deft. made the allegation that the writ had been improperly obtained & claimed damages, were numbered consecutively with the other paragraphs of the statement of defence, & were not headed separately as a counterclaim:—Held: the pleading was good as a counterclaim.—LEES v. PATTERSON (1878), 7 Ch. D. 866; 47 L. J. Ch. 616; 38 L. T. 451; 26 W. R. 399.

405. ———.]—(1) A counterclaim can be made only where an action can be brought, therefore, deft. is estopped from counterclaiming for that in respect of which he has already obtained judgment.

(2) A counterclaim need not repeat in extenso the statements relied upon, but can refer to any statements in the antecedent pleadings, for instance, to the paragraphs simply by number.—BIRMINGHAM ESTATES CO. v. SMITH (1880), 13 Ch. D. 506; 49 L. J. Ch. 251; 42 L. T. 111; 28 W. R. 666.

407. ———.]—To a statement of claim alleging that all moneys due upon a mtgce. had been paid, & claiming delivery of the property, the mtgce. put in a counterclaim alleging that the mtgce. was made to cover all sums due on current account; that pltf. was indebted to deft. in a sum of £547 as commission for finding a purchaser for his business; that previous to the sale of the business pltf. had been indebted to deft. in the sum of £3,135 17s. 5d., & that deft. had received certain sums on account, but that a large balance was still due; & asking for an account. Pltf. applied for particulars of the balance by the counterclaim alleged to be due to deft.:—Held: pltf. was entitled to particulars of the moneys received by deft., from which he arrived at the balance alleged by the counterclaim to be due.—KEMP v. GOLDBERG (1887), 36 Ch. D. 505; 56 L. T. 736; 36 W. R. 278.

408. Claim for relief—Must be specified—Alternative or general relief.]—HOLLOWAY v. YORK, No. 400, ante.

409. Time for pleading—Winding up of company—Counterclaim delivered before winding-up order.]—Where a co. applied under R. S. C., Ord. 14, for leave to sign final judgment in an action for calls, & leave to defend was obtained by the shareholder upon an affidavit stating his intention to counterclaim for rescission of the contract to take shares on the ground of misrepresentation, & disclosing no other ground of defence, & this occurred before the presentation of a winding-up petition, but the counterclaim was delivered after the petition & before the winding-up order made upon it:—Held: the shareholder was not too late to apply for relief.—Re GENERAL RAILWAY SYNDICATE, WHITELEY'S CASE, [1900] 1 Ch. 365; 69 L. Three months after joinder of issue, & after notice of trial, deft. applied by summons under R. S. 412. ——— By unauthorised agent—Ratified after plea.]—It is a good answer to a plea of set-off, that the amount has been paid by a person professing to act as agent for & on account of pltf., though without his authority; & that the latter ratified the act at the time of the trial.

The treasurer of a corpn. paid their clerk, deft., the amount of his year's salary both parties believing at the time that the treasurer had the authority of the corpn. to make such payment; but the treasurer had no such authority, & the corpn. afterwards repudiated the payment & dismissed deft. from their service. In an action against deft. for the recovery of certain moneys paid to him on account of the corpn.:—Held: the corpn. was entitled, at the trial to ratify the act of their treasurer, & deft. could not set off the amount of his salary as due to him from the corpn.—*SIMPSON v. 413. ——— Character in which plaintiff sues—Trustee.]—To an action for non-payment of £45, the balance due upon a building agreement, deft. pleaded a set-off of a judgment for £40 2s. obtained by him in an action against pltf. To this plea pltf. replied that, before the recovery of the judgment, he for a good consideration assigned the debt of £45 to J.: that deft. before the recovery of the judgment had notice of the assignment; & that he, pltf., was suing as trustee for J.:—Held: the replication was bad, as disclosing no legal answer to the plea.—*WATKINS v. had alleged that deft. had notice before the subject-matter of the set-off accrued.—WILSON v. GABRIEL (1863), 4 B. & S. 243; 2 New Rep. 321; 8 L. T. 502; 11 W. R. 803; 1 Mar. L. C. 346; 122 E. R. 450.

419. ———.—Pltfs. asserted the right to use defts.' name as a trade name, for goods manufactured & sold by themselves, & alleging that they had recently heard that defts. claimed the exclusive right to the name, claimed a declaration that pltfs. were entitled to use the name, & also an injunction to restrain deft. from representing that the goods manufactured by them, pltfs., were an imitation of the goods manufactured by defts. Defts. by their statement of defence made a number of allegations as to the origin & history of the manufacture, & stated that they had discovered that pltfs. had recently sold goods manufactured by them, pltfs., with a mark greatly resembling that of defts. Then, by counterclaim, defts. repeated & relied on the allegations as if they had been repeated verbatim, & alleging misrepresentation, claimed an injunction to restrain pltfs. from selling goods not manufactured by defts., as & for goods manufactured by defts. To the counterclaim pltfs. replied by joining issue:—Held: the allegations in the counterclaim must be specifically dealt with, & the reply was irregular.—BENBOW v. LOW (1880), 13 Ch. The liquidator was a party to the agreement on behalf of the co. Subsequently the co. sued one of the directors for work done, & the director counterclaimed against the co. for his fees earned previously to the agreement:—Held: although there was no consideration for the agreement moving from the co., the fact of the liquidator being a party to it rendered it binding as between the director & the co.; & the agreement was, therefore, a good defence to the counterclaim.—*WEST YORKSHIRE DARRACQ AGENCY, LTD. v. 424. Admission of allegations in counterclaim.—What amounts to.—(1) Deft. to an action delivered a statement of defence & counterclaim. The defence contained various admissions & allegations of fact, & then, by way of counterclaim, deft. repeated "the several matters hereinbefore stated & admitted," & claimed certain relief. Pltf., by his reply, after making certain admissions & joining issue on the rest of the statement of defence, "in reply to the statements alleged by way of counterclaim" repeated "the several matters stated in the statement of claim & the admissions hereinbefore made," & said that, "save as stated in the statement of claim or hereinbefore admitted, each of such allegations is untrue":—Held: this amounted to an admission of all the statements alleged by way of counterclaim. 427 i. Jurisdiction.—To try counterclaim.—Inferior court.—Extent of power to grant relief.—Where, although a deft. to a District Ct. action counterclaims for a liquidated amount & unliquidated damages in amounts aggregating over $800, he expressly abandons all of his counterclaim in excess of said sum, the District Ct. has jurisdiction to give judgment on the counterclaim for an amount not

Div. against defts., owners of a British ship & her freight, for salvage services alleged to have been rendered to defts.' vessel in Northern Russia. Defts., besides defending the action, set up a counterclaim in personam for demurrage alleged to be due by the owners of the steam tug under two charterparties. On an application by pltf. to strike out the counterclaim:—Held: a judge of the Admty. Div., as a judge of the High Ct., has jurisdiction to try such a counterclaim, & the discretion of the judge, in refusing to strike out the counterclaim on the ground of embarrassment, had been rightly exercised.

Defts. would not be in a position to bring this counterclaim in a separate action, for the reason that pltf. are out of the jurisdiction (COLLINS, M.R.).—THE CHEAPSIDE, [1904] P. 339; 73 L. J. P. 117; 91 L. T. 83; 53 W. R. 120; 20 T. L. R. 655; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 595, C. A.

429. Set-off—Whether plaintiff obliged to prove whole demand.—In first instance.]—Where there are cross demands, & deft. pleads a set-off, pltf. is not obliged to prove the whole of his account in the first instance but may prove only the balance which he claims, & after deft. has proved his set-off, pltf. may prove other parts of his accounts to show that a larger sum was due.—*WILLIAMS v. 430. — Particulars—Non-compliance with order for—Whether evidence of set-off excluded.]—Deft. who has not complied with a judge's order to deliver particulars of set-off with dates, will not be allowed to give any evidence of his set-off. Particulars delivered in which the only dates were "from Jan. 1823 to Jan. 1834," are not a compliance with such an order.—SWAIN v. ROBERTS (1835), 1 Mood. & R. 452, N.P.

431. — — — — —.]—Where deft. pleads a set-off, & an order is obtained directing him, within a limited time, to deliver the particulars thereof, or be excluded from giving same in evidence, & he neglects to comply therewith, a judge at nisi prius has no power to exclude evidence tendered in proof of such plea:—Semle: proper course to be pursued by pltf. in such a case is to apply for an attachment against deft.; or, if there be other pleas pleaded, to apply to a judge to strike out such plea of set-off.—PAYNE v. DAVIS (1845), 5 L. T. O. S. 220; 9 Jur. 734.

e. Counterclaim to specially indorsed writ.]—The practice in Ontario is the same for writs specially indorsed as it is for writs not so indorsed, & a deft. is within his rights when he sets up a counterclaim to a specially indorsed writ, & it matters not that his counterclaim is, strictly speaking, really a set-off, so long as it is a claim which he desires to enforce over & above his defence, & he sets it out in his affidavit of defence on merits.—*HENDERSON v. Deft. to an action by which rights of common were claimed, counterclaimed against pltf., & several others whom he added as defts., & asked for an injunction on the ground of trespass. The added defts. did not appear or defend. Pltf. by counterclaim moved for judgment in default of appearance, & upon admissions:—Held: the motion must stand till the trial, as if the question raised by the counterclaim was not connected with the original subject of the action, the added defts. were improperly brought before the ct.; & if it was connected, then no relief should be given until trial.—VERNEY v. Upon defts. appearing pltf. took out a summons to sign final judgment in compliance with the terms of R. S. C., Ord. 14. Defts. resisted this application on the ground that they had both a good defence to the action on the merits, & also a good counterclaim against pltf.:—Held: the right to bring a counterclaim is not a right of course, but depends on the discretion of the judge, & as regards the defence, when there is "no fairly arguable point to be argued on behalf of deft.," effect must be given to R. The co. delivered a defence & counterclaim. By the defence they alleged that an amount exceeding £2,000 was, under the circumstances mentioned in the counterclaim, due from M. to the co., & claimed a set-off. By the counterclaim they alleged that M. had been a director & promoter of the co., & while filling those characters had joined with other persons in selling an estate to the co. at a profit, concealing the fact of his interest in the estate, & that he had received more than £2,000 as his share of the profit of the transaction. The counterclaim asked that the exors. might be ordered to pay to the co. the share of profit which M. had received, & also the remainder of the profit which, in breach of his duty as a director, he had allowed to be received by the other vendors. Pltf. applied to have the counterclaim excluded on the ground that it could not be conveniently disposed of in the present action, & ought to be tried in an independent proceeding:—Held: although, taking R. 469. No reasonable cause of action—Claim without substance.—A deft. ought not to be shut out from defending unless it is very clear indeed that he has no case in the action under discussion. There may be either a defence to the claim which is plausible, or there may be a counterclaim pure & simple. To shut out such a counterclaim if there is any substance in it would be an autocratic & violent use of R. S. C., Ord. 14. The ct. has no power to try such a counterclaim on such an application, but if they think it so far plausible that it is not unreasonably possible for it to succeed if brought to trial, it ought not to be excluded (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—SHEPPARDS & CO. v. 471. —.]—A counterclaim in a passing-off action which alleges threats barely, & claims an injunction to restrain such threats, but shows no malice or bad faith on the part of pltf. who is maintaining the action which he has brought, can be struck out under R. S. C., Ord. 14, r. 4, as disclosing no reasonable cause of action under 46 & 47 Vict. c. 57, s. 32, or otherwise.—RIPLEY v. ARTHUR & CO. (1900), 45 Sol. Jo. 165; 18 R. P. C. 82.

472. Payment of money into court—Admission of plaintiff's claim.—A landowner brought an action claiming damages for trespass, & also an injunction. Deft. put in a defence & counterclaim alleging a right by custom to go on the land, & under R. S. C., Ord. 22, r. 1, with his defence, though denying liability, paid a sum into ct. by way of satisfaction of his liability, if any, in respect of the matters complained of. Under r. 6 pltf. took the money out on notice to deft. that he accepted it "in satisfaction of the claim in respect of which it is paid in." On an application by pltf. to strike out the counterclaim on the ground that deft. had by his payment into ct., followed by pltf.'s acceptance, admitted pltf.'s entire cause of action:—Held: there had been no such admission by deft. as to preclude him from prosecuting his counterclaim setting up the custom, nor, semble, such acceptance in satisfaction by pltf. as to preclude him from prosecuting his claim for an injunction, the payment into ct. being by r. 1 confined to pltf.'s claim for damages only.—COOTE v. FORD, [1899] 2 Ch. 93; 68 L. J. Ch. 508; 80 L. T. 697; 47 W. R. 548; 15 T. L. R. 378, C. A.

By Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, "The High Ct. of Admty. may, on the application of deft. in any cause of damage, & on his instituting a cross-cause for the damage sustained by him in respect of the same collision, direct that the principal & the cross-cause be heard at the same time & upon the same evidence; & if in the principal cause the ship of deft. has been arrested

Pltfs.' & defts.' vessels came into collision & both received damage. Pltfs. brought an action in rem against defts., "the owners of the steamship Neptune." Defts. counterclaimed, & applied to pltfs. for security to answer the counterclaim. Security was given, but on pltf. making a similar application, defts. refused to give security on the ground that the Neptune was owned by the French Govt., & was not subject to arrest:—Held: the ct. had no power to order security to be given or, in default thereof, to stay defts.' counterclaim.—THE NEPTUNE, [1919] P. 17; 88 L. The counterclaim against pltf. was abandoned at the hearing:—*Held: the relief asked by deft. against B. was not a matter sufficiently "relating to or connected with the original cause or matter," to be the subject of a claim under Jud. of the Russian Govt. Committee certain actions arising out of the matters to which these documents related. Deft. set up the contention, by way of defence & counterclaim, that he was entitled to a lien on the documents until he had received an indemnity in respect of the other actions pending against him:—Held: although when a sovereign state is pltf., a counterclaim can be maintained against it "to enable complete justice to be done between the parties," the counterclaim must be confined to matters immediately connected with the claim. Here the indemnity claimed by deft. was not in respect of any liability incurred by him acting as custodian of the documents, & the counterclaim therefore failed, while the action succeeded.—*UNION OF SOVIET REPUBLICS v. To an action for dissolution of partnership deft., after denying the partnership, set up a counterclaim stating certain transactions which raised an altogether different cause of action, & claiming remuneration from pltf. for his services. Such transactions were totally unconnected with the partnership, the subject of pltf.'s claim:—Held: such a claim was not convenient to be disposed of in the present action, & deft. could not be allowed to avail himself of it; but it was a proper subject for a cross-action. Semble: applications under R. as mtgee., & also damages for alleged fraudulent misrepresentations made by pltf. to deft. which affected the amount of the balance to secure which the mtge. was given. Pltf. applied to have the action tried with a jury which the judge refused:—Held: the case did not come within R. S. C., Ord. 36, r. 6, so as to give pltf. a right to have the action tried with a jury; his proper course would have been to apply to have the counterclaim for damages tried separately, as a claim which could not be conveniently tried in the pending action.—LYNCH v. MACDONALD (1887), 37 Ch. D. 227; 57 L. J. Ch. 651; 58 L. T. 293; 36 W. R. 419, C. A.

494. —.]—A fund arising from debentures issued by deft. co. & guaranteed by the South African Republic was by arrangement lodged with two trustees, one nominated by the Republic & the other by the co., pending the completion of a railway which the co. was making under a concession by the Republic. The nominee of the co. having died, the Republic brought an action here, the fund being in England, to have a new trustee appointed & the fund paid to the two trustees. The co. put in a defence & counterclaim. By their defence they alleged various grounds of complaint against the Republic as making it inequitable that they should have any control over the fund, & among other things a letter addressed to the co. by the Railway Comr. of the Republic, a copy of which was forwarded by him to the London Stock Exchange, making various charges against the co. which the co. alleged to be untrue. By counterclaim the co. repeated these grounds of complaint, & alleged that they had sustained heavy loss through the letter, which they alleged to be libellous, & claimed £100,000 damages for libel. The judge in chambers ordered this allegation & the claim for damages to be expunged:—Held: this order was right, for if pltf. had been an individual resident in this country the counterclaim for libel would have been struck out, & defts. left to bring a separate action, inasmuch as the claim for damages for libel could not be conveniently tried in an action for appointing a new trustee & protecting a trust fund, & the fact that the co. could not bring a separate action for libel against the Republic was not a sufficient ground for allowing the counterclaim for libel to go on.—*SOUTH AFRICAN REPUBLIC v. SUB-SECT. 5.—EFFECT OF DEFAULT IN PLEADING.

See R. S. C., Ord. 27, r. 11.

495. Right of defendant to judgment on counterclaim.—An order will not be made upon a counterclaim until the original claim has been dealt with. Therefore where in answer to a statement of claim a defence & counterclaim had been delivered, & some months after the expiration of the period allowed to pltf. for replying, a motion was made "for a decree according to the prayer of the counterclaim," the motion was dismissed.

The proper course to adopt in such a case, where there is undue delay on the part of pltf., is to give notice of motion to dismiss the original action for want of prosecution, & for judgment on the counterclaim.—AITKEN v. DUNBAR (1877), 46 L. J. Ch. 489.

There being no positive admissions of fact in the pleadings, but only constructive admissions by reason of the absence of a reply, the action was ordered to be set down on motion for judgment & notice of the setting down was directed to be given.—*CAROLI v. The owners of the French steamship arrested the English vessel in an action in rem. At noon on the day after the collision, & before an appearance had been entered by defts., the solrs. acting on behalf of the French owners filed a præcipe praying a release of the English vessel as they had withdrawn the action. The marshal thereupon released the English vessel. Later on the same day the solrs. for the French owners received a telegram from defts.' solrs. undertaking to appear & put in bail, & asking for the writ to be sent to them by post. The solrs. for the French owners replied: "Sabylia released; not proceeding with action." These telegrams were confirmed by letters. On the following day the solrs. acting for the English vessel wrote saying their clients had a counterclaim, & asking for the writ to be sent that they might enter an appearance, & they then entered an appearance in London & sent the præcipe of appearance to the London agents of the solrs. acting for the French owners, who returned it saying they had no authority to act in the discontinued action. The solrs. for defts. then took out a summons before the registrar calling on pltf. in the action to file a preliminary act so that the counterclaim might be proceeded with. The registrar dismissed the summons. Defts. appealed to the judge:—Held: the action was wholly discontinued on the withdrawing of the arrest before the entry of appearance, & as the counterclaim had not been set up before the discontinuance of the action it could not be proceeded with.—THE SALLYBIA, [1910] P. 25; 79 L. Right of plaintiff to judgment—Set-off less than claim—Whether judgment for balance.] —In debt for goods sold, etc., deft. pleaded as to £10 3s. a set-off, but only proved £8 3s.; as to £8 3s. 6d., he pleaded a plea which he proved; & as to the residue, he paid a sum into ct., which was taken out by deft. There was no plea of nunquam indebitatus:—Held: pltf. was entitled to a verdict & judgment for the £2 unproved on the first plea, although the £8 3s. proved together with the £8 3s. 6d., & the sum paid into ct. amounted to the sum claimed by the particulars of demand.—GREEN v. Debt. denied the retainer of pltf., & made a counterclaim for negligence. Debt. did not appear at the trial, & pltf. produced evidence in support of the allegations in his statement of claim:—Held: pltf. was entitled to judgment as follows: "Dismiss counterclaim, with costs to be paid by debt. 535. Right of plaintiff to judgment on claim & defendant on counterclaim—Counterclaim not able to be pleaded as set-off.]—In an action tried with a jury, where deft. counterclaims in respect of matters which could not be pleaded as set-off, & pltf. recovers a sum on his claim, & deft. recovers on his counterclaim a sum exceeding that which pltf. recovers on his claim, the claim & counterclaim should, for the purpose of taxation of costs, be treated as separate & independent actions, & the costs in each taxed in favour of the successful party, subject to a deduction in respect of the costs of any issues on which he has not succeeded. In such a case it is immaterial, with respect to the taxation of costs, whether the judgment is drawn up in form for pltf. for the sum recovered on his claim, & for deft. for the sum recovered or his counterclaim; or whether judgment is given for deft. for the balance under R. SUB-SECT. 8.—SECURITY FOR COSTS.

See R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 6.

539. Defendant resident out of jurisdiction—Discretion of court.—Where deft. resident out of the jurisdiction set up a counterclaim which arose out of the same transaction as the claim & was in substance, though not technically, in the nature of a defence to the action:—Held: the ct. had a discretion to refuse to order deft. to give security for the costs of the counterclaim.—NECK v. TAYLOR, [1893] 1 Q. B. 560; 62 L. J. Q. B. 511; 68 L. T. 399; 41 W. R. 486; 9 T. L. R. 337; 4 R. 344, C. A.

540. ———.—There is no hard & fast rule of practice which prevents the ct. from making an order for security for costs against a person resident out of the jurisdiction who, upon being sued in this country, sets up a cross-claim, either by counterclaim or by cross-action. It is for the ct. to consider, in the exercise of its discretion, whether, having regard to the circumstances of the particular case the cross-claim must be treated as made, substantially, by way of defence to the action against claimant, or whether it must be regarded as being in the nature of an independent claim made in respect of matters foreign to that action, & therefore one with regard to which security for costs ought to be ordered to be given.

An agreement was made between insurance co. A. & insurance co. B., which was a foreign co. carrying on business out of the jurisdiction, for the reinsurance by the latter co. of a certain proportion of fire risks undertaken by the former co. in various parts of the world. The agreement provided for quarterly settlements of accounts between the two co.'s. Such settlements accordingly took place every quarter during a period of four years ending in 1908. Co. A. brought an action against co. B., alleging that they had been unable to obtain settlements of accounts from co. B. in respect of business done in subsequent quarters, & claiming an account in respect of such quarters & payment of the balance, if any, found to be due to them. Co. B. thereupon brought a cross-action against co. A., asking for inspection of all original documents & vouchers connected with all transactions in which pltf's were interested under the agreement, that all the previously settled accounts between the two cos. should be reopened on the ground of errors having occurred therein, & for an account & payment of any moneys found to be due to them after the accounts had been reopened & taken:—Held: an order should be made for security for the costs of the cross-action against co. B.—NEW FENIX COMPAGNIE ANONYME D'ASSURANCES DE MADRID v. GENERAL ACCIDENT FIRE & LIFE ASSURANCE CORPN., LTD., [1911] 2 K. B. 619; 80 L. J. K. B. 1301; 105 L. T. 469, C. A.

541. — Counterclaim arising out of different transaction.—The test of a cross-bill is that it is a simple bill of defence to an existing attack. Where a bill did not come within the definition, security for costs was ordered, pltf. being abroad.—TYNTE v. HODGE (1862), 2 John. & H. 692; 1 New Rep. 48; 7 L. T. 349; 8 Jur. N. S. 1226; 11 W. R. 52; 70 E. R. 1237.

543. ———.—Where a claim & counterclaim arise out of different matters, so that the counterclaim is really in the nature of a cross-action, deft., if he is residing out of the jurisdiction, may be required to give security for pltf.'s costs of the counterclaim, & if the only dispute remaining arises on the counterclaim, it is beyond doubt right that he should be so required.—*SYKES v. 544. — Counterclaim arising out of same transaction.—In an action for breach of contract against deft., a foreigner residing abroad, he, by his defence, denied the breaches, & also made a counterclaim for breaches of the same contract by pltf., claiming damages to an amount less than pltf.'s claim:—Held: deft. could not be ordered to give security for pltf.'s costs occasioned by the counterclaim.

The case which at first seemed to me at variance with our present decision was Winterfield v. Bradnum, No. 545, post. . . . But I think there are broad distinctions between the two cases . . . one is that the counterclaim arose out of a different transaction from that in respect of which pltf. was suing, whereas in the present case pltf.'s & deft.'s cases rest respectively upon the same circumstances (FIELD, J.).—*MAPLESON v. SUB-SECT. 9.—COSTS.

A. Set-off.

548. Costs of withdrawn plea of set-off.]—Def't. having pleaded a set-off of a sum exceeding the damages laid in the declaration, pl'tf. obtained leave, on payment of costs, to amend his declaration by increasing the amount of damages. Def't. thereupon withdrew his plea of set-off, & pleaded payment into ct. :—Held: def't. was not entitled to the costs of the plea so withdrawn.—GOULD v. OLIVER (1838), 5 Bing. N. C. 115; 6 Scott, 884; 132 E. R. 1048.

549. Plaintiff entitled to costs till set-off pleaded.]—Semble: in such case if def't.'s answer to pl'tf.'s claim consists partly of a set-off, pl'tf. is entitled to his costs to the time of pleading, unless def't. has offered to allow the set-off.—WALTON v. BROWN (1858), 3 H. & N. 879; 28 L. J. Ex. 38; 32 L. T. O. S. 149.

550. Defendant establishing set-off exceeding claim—Defendant entitled to costs of action.]—Pl'tf. claimed to recover commission due to him from def'ts. on an agreement. Def'ts. denied the claim, & claimed by way of counterclaim £230 0s. 9d. for goods sold. The jury found a verdict for pl'tf. on the claim for £114 17s. 6d. & a verdict for def'ts. on the counterclaim for £230 0s. 9d. The judgment entered was "that pl'tf. recover against def'ts. £ for his costs of suit"; & "that def'ts. recover against pl'tf. £115 3s. 3d. on the counterclaim & £ for their costs of the counterclaim":—Held: on taxing the costs according to the judgment, pl'tf. & not def'ts. was entitled to the costs of the cause.

If this had been treated as a pure set-off to the amount of pl'tf.'s claim as I think it might have been & it had so appeared on the judgment then it seems to me def'ts. would have been entitled to the costs of the action because then def'ts. would have denied by way of defence that pl'tf. had any right to bring an action at all. . . . Where there is a claim with issues taken on it & a counterclaim, not a set-off, but in the nature of a cross-action with issues on it, & where pl'tf. succeeds on the claim & def't. on the counterclaim, the proper principle of taxation, if not otherwise ordered, is to take the claim as if it & its issues were an action, & then to take the counterclaim & its issues as if it were an action, & then to give the allocatur for costs for the balance in favour of the litigant in whose favour the balance turns. In such a case where items are common to both actions the master would divide them (BRETT, L.J.).—BAINES v. BROMLEY (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 691; 50 L. J. Q. B. 465; 44 L. T. 915; 29 W. R. 706, C. A.

The arbitrator found the issues on the claim in favour of pl'tf., & awarded him a sum of money in respect thereof, & found the issues on the counterclaim in favour of def'ts., & awarded to them a sum of money in respect thereof. After deducting the sum found for pl'tf. from the sum found for def'ts., a balance of £97 was due to def'ts.:—Held: the word "event" in the order of reference must be construed distributively, &

552. Whether plaintiff entitled to general costs of action—Defendant to costs of counterclaim.]—Pltf. brought an action to recover £90 on breach of contract for dilapidations, & debt., by counterclaim, sought to recover an account book alleged to be improperly retained by pltf., & also a sum of £15 for fixtures. The counterclaim was not in form for detinue of the book. The judge at the trial directed the book to be returned to debt., which pltf. agreed to do, & in order to insure its return, the judge assessed its value at £150. A verdict was found by the jury for pltf. for £90 damages on his claim, & for debt. for £15 on his counterclaim, with 1s. damages for the detention of the book; but there was no distinct finding by the jury as to its value. The judge directed the verdict to be entered for pltf. for £75, the difference between £90 & £15, & ordered the book to be returned to debt. or £150, its value, & 1s. paid to him for its detention.

The certificate of the associate set out the findings of the jury as above stated, & concluded as follows: "The judge directed that judgment should be entered for pltf. for £75, & for debt. for the return of the book, or £150, its value, & 1s. damages for its detention." The book was, in fact, returned to debt. within a week after the trial.

562. — Apportionment.]—Pltfs. brought an action against defts. for wrongfully repudiating a contract to purchase oil from them over a period of a year & to provide storage for the oil during that time. They alleged in their statement of claim that the date named for the first delivery, Feb. 15, 1924, had been postponed till Mar. 15 by mutual agreement, but that on Feb. 18 defts. had refused to carry out the contract. Defts. pleaded as a defence that there had been no agreement to postpone delivery & that pltfs. had committed a fundamental breach of the contract in not making the first delivery by Feb. 15, & in failing to give notice, as they had agreed to do, of the arrival of the oil; & they counterclaimed damages for these breaches. Pltfs. in their reply & defence to the counterclaim denied that they had committed any breach of contract to deliver by Feb. 15; (a) because of the alleged agreement to postpone delivery, (b) because defts. were not ready & willing to provide storage for the oil, (c) because defts. had broken a condition precedent to pltfs.' obligation to deliver in that they had omitted to procure a banker's guarantee for the price of the oil to be delivered, & (d) because defts. had omitted to do this in order to prevent pltfs. from obtaining oil from their suppliers & so performing their contract with defts. At the trial the evidence & the arguments of counsel were mainly directed to these four matters. Both the claim & the counterclaim were dismissed with costs. In taxing the costs the taxing master allowed defts. only the costs of litigating the first matter, the question whether there had been any agreement to postpone delivery, being of opinion that the three other matters arose on the counterclaim only:—Held: all four matters arose upon the claim & upon the counterclaim & the costs of all must be apportioned.

The same principles applicable to cases in which the ct. has dismissed the action & counterclaim with costs apply conversely to cases in which both parties have succeeded (LAWRENCE, L.J.).—CONTINENTAL CONTRACTORS v. MEDWAY OIL & STORAGE Co., [1928] 1 K. B. 238; 96 L. J. K. B. 967; 138 L. T. 125; 43 T. L. R. 830, C. A.

563. Plaintiff entitled to costs of claim & counterclaim.]—A direction in the will of a married woman that her debts shall be paid makes all the property she has power to dispose of, including arrears of an annuity which was subject to a restraint on anticipation, assets for payment of all liabilities of her separate estate, including damages for breach of covenant by her legal personal representatives.

By a separation deed the husband covenanted to pay £1,000 to a trustee upon trust to pay the income thereof to the wife for her separate use without power of anticipation, & to pay him a further annual sum upon the same trusts. Afterwards the husband sued for a divorce. The proceedings were compromised by a deed whereby the wife & the trustee purported to release the husband from his covenant to pay the further annual sum, & she & a surety covenanted with the husband that neither she nor any person on her behalf should take proceedings to compel the husband to allow her any support, maintenance, alimony, or additional income other than the income of the £1,000. The wife lived ten years after this deed, & on every quarter-day she received from the trustee a cheque for £10 representing the income of the £1,000 & made no claim for more. The £1,000 was not in fact invested, & the £10 a quarter was found by the husband.

The wife made a will whereby she directed all her debts to be paid, & gave her property to an adopted daughter for life. Her legal personal representative brought this action against the husband for arrears of the annuity. The husband counterclaimed for damages for breach of the wife's covenant:—Held: the release of the husband's covenant being admittedly void, the conduct of the wife, in accepting the trustee's cheques for less sums than were due, did not amount either to accord & satisfaction, or to such acquiescence as would prevent the wife claiming the arrears. Her representative was therefore entitled to succeed in the action; the wife's covenant not to sue was not personal to herself or confined to her lifetime; it bound all her free separate estate; & the direction in her will for payment of debts made the arrears of the annuity assets for payment of damages for breach of her covenant. The husband was therefore entitled to recover back on the counterclaim all the money & costs which he might be ordered to pay in the action. No order was made except that pltf. should pay the costs of the action & of the counterclaim.—SPRANGE v. LEE, [1908] 1 Ch. 424; 77 L. J. Ch. 274; 98 L. T. 400, C. A.

564. Judgment was given for pltf. on the claim for £25 & costs & for defts., on the counterclaim for £26 & costs. On taxation of the costs of the claim the registrar allowed a brief fee of three guineas, being the maximum fee according to the scale applicable to the amount recovered. No objection was taken by defts., to this allowance. On taxation of costs of the counterclaim the registrar also allowed a brief fee of three guineas. An objection by pltf. that the scale only authorised the allowance of one brief fee & that the maximum fee having been allowed on the claim no brief fee could in the circumstances be allowed on the counterclaim was overruled by the county ct. judge.—Held: the fact that the maximum brief fee had been allowed in respect of the claim did not prevent the allowance of a brief fee for the counterclaim, but the fee must be apportioned between the defence & the counterclaim & only that part which was referable to the counterclaim could be allowed.—*FOX v. Judgment was entered for the landlady on the claim for £200 & costs, & for the tenant on the counterclaim for £225 & costs. On each side the claim & counterclaim were dealt with in one brief. In taxing pltf.'s bill of costs the taxing master allowed the costs of counsel's brief at the trial, fees to counsel, & costs & expenses of witnesses. In taxing deft.'s bill of costs he allowed nothing in respect of these items.—Held: the taxation had proceeded upon a wrong principle; & costs incurred in supporting the claim & opposing the counterclaim ought to be apportioned by the taxing master to the best of his ability & the apportioned parts ought to be attributed to the costs of the claim & of the counterclaim respectively, & similarly mutatis mutandis as to costs incurred in supporting the counterclaim & opposing the claim.—*CHRISTIE v. PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 9.—B. (b).

569 i. Whether defendant entitled to general costs of action—Plaintiff to amount of increase caused by counterclaim.—Although a counterclaim claims a larger sum than that claimed by the statement of claim, but substantially no issues are raised by it which are not raised by the defence & little, if any, additional evidence is called for, & the action & counterclaim are both dismissed, deft. ought to be left in the same position in respect to costs as if he had merely defended successfully pltf.'s action, i.e. pltf. should be ordered to pay deft.'s costs of a defended action & there should be no extra allowance of costs because of the counterclaim.—LEONARD v. WHITTLESEA, [1918] 3 W. W. R. 215; 13 Alta. L. R. 550; 43 D. L. R. 62.—CAN.

569 ii. ———. Pltf.'s claim was dismissed & deft.'s counterclaim was also dismissed. Deft. was awarded the general costs of the action, deducting any costs incurred by reason of & solely attributable to the counterclaim; pltf. were awarded only such costs as were incurred by reason of & solely attributable to the counterclaim, & none of the costs incurred in the action that would have been incurred if there had been no counterclaim.—*CREAN (JAMES) & SON, LTD. v. 1. Apportionment of costs.—A claim & counterclaim, involving the same questions of fact & of law, were both dismissed with costs:—Held: while the taxing officer must, in one sense, tax the costs of the claim on the footing that there is no counterclaim, & the costs of the counterclaim on the footing that there is no claim, he must, however, to the best of his ability, ascertain & apportion to or against the parties respectively (a) costs incurred by pltf. solely in support of his claim; (b) costs incurred by pltf. solely in answering the counterclaim; (c) costs incurred by deflt. solely in opposing the claim; & (d) costs incurred by deflt. solely in advancing his counterclaim; any costs saved to either of the parties by reason of there being a claim & counterclaim instead of two separate & distinct proceedings commenced by two separate writs & conducted as two separate actions, are not allowed to the party, because they are not costs incurred by him but saved by him;

574. ———.]—Costs incurred in respect of both claim & counterclaim.—(1) In an action where there is a claim & counterclaim, the party ordered to pay or receive the costs of the action pays or receives the whole of such costs as if there were no counterclaim.

(2) The party ordered to pay or receive the costs of the counterclaim pays or receives the costs occasioned by the counterclaim, & in determining what they are, costs which have been saved by a counterclaim being brought instead of a cross-action are not to be taken into account.

(3) Costs which have been incurred partly in support of or in opposition to a defence, & partly in support of or in opposition to a counterclaim, must be apportioned by the taxing master, but no costs incurred in the action which have not been increased by reason of the counterclaim are to be apportioned.—*ATLAS METAL CO. v. 575. Set-off of costs — Of claim & counterclaim.—Where pltf.'s claim & deflt.'s counterclaim are both dismissed with costs the proper form of judgment is to refer it to the taxing master to tax deflt.'s costs of the action & pltf.'s costs of the counterclaim & to set off the costs of pltf. & deflt. & to order payment of the balance by the party from whom the same shall be found to be due to the other party.—JAMES v. JACKSON, [1910] 2 Ch. 92; 79 L. J. Ch. 418; 102 L. T. 804.

576. ———.]—Where in actions for infringement, deflt. counterclaimed for revocation of the patents, & at the trial pltf.s submitted to judgments for deflt.s with costs, & thereupon deflt.s did not open their counterclaims, it was held that the actions had not proceeded to trial, & the actions & counterclaims were dismissed with costs, with a set-off.

In two actions for infringement of the same patents deflt.s petitioned by way of counterclaim for revocation of the patents. The actions were consolidated, & on their coming on for trial pltf.s at once submitted to judgment for deflt.s with the costs of the actions. Deflt.s stated that, in the absence of evidence in the actions, they were unable to proceed with the counterclaims. They contended that the counterclaims were in effect part of the defences, & that, on the actions being dismissed with costs, no order ought to be made with regard to the costs of the counterclaims:—Held: the case fell within R. S. C. Ord. 53A, r. 22, namely, that the actions had not proceeded to trial, & that the actions & counterclaims must costs of either party which are common to both the claim & the counterclaim should be divided.—MCINTOSH v. GREEN (Sask.), [1924] 3 D. L. R. 57; [1924] 2 W. W. R. 625.—CAN.

m. ———.]—Where a separate & substantial question is raised by a counterclaim, substantial costs are taxable in relation to the counterclaim, & in such a case there must be apportionment; but where the subject-matter of a counterclaim is substantially the same as the defence or part of the defence, the costs should not be apportioned, & only such extra costs should be allowed as were incurred by reason of the counterclaim.—*CREAN v. C. Liability of Third Party.

See R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 54.

577. Liability for costs occasioned by counterclaim.]—When a third party is brought into an action by deft. who claims indemnity against him, the ct. cannot determine questions between such third party & deft. without an order directing them to be determined. It is in the discretion of the ct. to order such third party to pay to successful pltf. the costs occasioned by his defence or counterclaim.—PILLER v. ROBERTS (1882), 21 Ch. D. 198; 46 L. T. 527; 30 W. R. 595.

578. Liability for costs of counterclaim by defendant.]—In an action by landlord against tenant for rent, deft. brought a counterclaim against pltf. & third parties for illegal distress. The judge, before whom the case was tried without a jury, gave judgment for pltf. on the claim & the counterclaim, but for deft. against the third parties for £2 5s. "with such costs as deft. would be entitled to by law":—Held: as the case had been tried without a jury, the costs were, by R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 1, in the discretion of the judge, & there having been no exercise of such discretion in favour of deft. as against the third parties, deft. was not "entitled by law" to costs.

Semle, when the counterclaim is against a person not a party to the action, Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 24 (3) & R. S. C., Ord. 21, rr. 11–14, do not render County Courts Act, 1867 (c. 142), s. 5 applicable to such a counterclaim.—LEWIN v. TRIMMING, TRIMMING v. LEWIN & CHADWICK & SONS (1888), 21 Q. B. 579. Set-off—Claim in High Court—Reduced by set-off within limits of county court jurisdiction—Right of plaintiff to costs on High Court scale.]—Where pltf.'s debt is reduced below £20 by set-off, the judge at the trial will grant a certificate to empower pltf. to receive costs.—OSMOND v. BONE (1851), 16 L. T. O. S. 538.

580. ————.]—Where pltf. in an action in one of the superior cts. proves a debt exceeding £20, & deft. proves a set-off, which reduces the verdict to a sum not exceeding £20, pltf. "recovers" the balance only within County Court Act, 1850 (c. 61), s. 11, & therefore is not entitled to costs.—BEARD v. PERRY (1862), 2 B. & S. 493; 31 L. J. Q. B. 180; 6 L. T. 352; 8 Jur. N. S. 914; 10 W. R. 619; 121 E. R. 1156. Annotation:—Consd. Stooke v. Taylor (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 569.

581. ————.]—Pltfs. claimed on a balance of accounts a sum of money exceeding £50. Defts. denied their indebtedness, & pleaded by way of set-off & counterclaim that pltfs. were indebted to them for money advanced & money due for work done, & goods sold & delivered, & they claimed a balance on the accounts in their favour exceeding £50. The cause was referred to an arbitrator, costs to abide the event. The arbitrator found that defts. were indebted to pltfs. in a sum exceeding £50, & that pltfs. were indebted in like manner to defts. in a sum exceeding £50, but that a balance was due to pltfs. on the whole account of £11 10s. 3d.:—Held: pltfs. & defts. were each entitled to the costs of the issues on which they had succeeded, on the ground that the relief sought could not be given in a county ct.—NEALE v. CLARKE (1879), 4 Ex. D. 286; 41 L. T. 438.

Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 67, for the relief sought by him could not, within the meaning of the latter sect., have been given by a county ct.—POTTER v. CHAMBERS (1879), 4 C. P. D. 457; 48 L. J. Q. 583. Counterclaim—Judgment recovered for balance.]—Pltf. whose claim is reduced by a counterclaim being proved by deft., recovers judgment under Jud. Acts for the balance only, & the question of costs under the County Court Act, 1867 (c. 142), s. 5, must be decided with reference to that balance.—STAPLES v. YOUNG (1877), 2 Ex. D. 324; 25 W. 584. Right of defendant to costs of counterclaim.]—The County Courts Act, 1867 (c. 142), s. 5, does not apply to counterclaims, so that where pltf. proved a claim for £40, & deft. a counterclaim for £10, deft. in the absence of any order as to costs was held entitled to the costs of proving his counterclaim & of the issues so far as they related thereto.—BLAKE v. The direction of the judge was not questioned. SUB-SECT. 10.—APPEALS.

592. Action & counterclaim founded on distinct causes of action—Cross-appeal.—A cross-notice under R. S. C., Ord. 58, r. 6, by resp. to an appeal can only be given in relation to the subject-matter of the action, & cannot be extended to some other matter not the subject of the action. For example, where an action & counterclaim founded on separate & distinct causes of action have each been dismissed with costs & pltf. on the counterclaim appeals, it is irregular for pltf. in the action, that is, resp. to the appeal, if he desires to appeal also, to give a cross-notice under R. S. C., Ord. 58, r. 6. In such a case, the causes of action being separate & distinct his proper course is to bring a cross-appeal & not to give a cross-notice.—*NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR DISTRIBUTION OF ELECTRICITY BY SECONDARY GENERATORS v. PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 10.

n. Appeal from judgment dismissing counterclaim.—A counterclaim being an independent action, & not a mere defence to pltf.'s claim, if deft. is dissatisfied with the judgment dismissing his counterclaim, it is incumbent upon him to appeal, & in the absence of such appeal, he cannot ask the ct. to deal with the counterclaim under the notice of appeal given by pltf., which is confined to issues arising under the defence to the state-

Part II.—Creation and Construction of Settlements.

SECT. 1.—SETTLEMENTS CREATED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

1. What property passes—Under general words—Remote reversion in fee.]—A remote reversion in fee held to pass under general words in an Act of Parliament, by way of settlement in execution of arts., though the reversion was not particularly in contemplation at that time; the general words being sufficient to carry it; & the intention of the parties being to include all the estate of the settlor.—FREEMAN v. CHANDOS (DUKE) (1775), 1 Cowp. 360; 98 E. R. 1129.

3. ———.]—BIDDULPH v. BIDDULPH (1790), 5 Cru. Dig. 34.

SECT. 2.—SETTLEMENTS CREATED UNDER DIRECTION IN WILL.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

4. Whether settlement ordered—Sufficiency of limitations in will.]—Devise to trustees, of money to be laid out in land, & to be settled as counsel should advise, in trust for A. & the heirs male of his body, to take in succession & priority; & the interest of the money, till laid out, to be paid to A. his sons & issue, A. shall have but an estate for life, with remainder to first & other sons in tail, etc.

LORD CAMDEN took a distinction between the case where testator has given complete directions for settling his estate with perfect limitations & where his directions are incomplete & are rather minutes or instructions & cannot be performed in the words of the will. In the former case the legal expression shall have legal effect though perhaps contrary to his intention. In the latter case the ct. will consider the intention & direct the conveyance according to it.—WHITE v. CARTER (1768), Amb. 670; 27 E. R. 435; previous proceedings (1768), 2 Eden, 366.

5. ———.]—Testator directed £8,000 to be settled on the marriage of his daughter, & then went on to give it to trustees, with a separate life interest to his daughter; after her death for her children, on their attaining twenty-one, if the mother should be then dead; but if not, then not till after her decease; & if no child should live to attain a vested interest, then to fall into his residue; & he gave his residue to A. for life, remainder to B.:—Held: testator had made a positive settlement, & the ct. could not add to it in any way.—FULLERTON v. MARTIN (1860),

7. ——— Share to be secured for benefit of children & their mother.—Testator directed that a share of his property, upon the death of the husband of his daughter E., which happened, should be secured for the benefit of the children of E. & for that of their mother:—Held: the share must be settled upon E. for her life with remainder to her children.—COMBE v. HUGHES (1872), L. R. 14 Eq. 415; 41 L. J. Ch. 693; 27 L. T. 366; 20 W. R. 793.

——— Share of daughter or other female.—See Sub-sect. 2, post.

SUB-SECT. 2.—SHARE GIVEN TO DAUGHTER OR FEMALE RELATIVE.

8. Whether ordered to be settled—Share to be for daughter's sole use.—Testator directed his property to be divided between his children at twenty-five share & share alike, & all moneys inherited by his daughters to be placed in the hands of trustees, to be settled on them for the sole use of themselves & their lawful issue:—Held: "strict settlement" was not intended by these words, but the money inherited was to be settled upon the daughters, & their lawful issue, which would have the effect of giving to the daughters an absolute interest.—SAMUEL v. SAMUEL (1845), 2 Coop. temp. Cott. 119; 14 L. J. Ch. 222; 5 L. T. O. S. 34; 9 Jur. 222; 47 E. R. 1082.

*Annotation:—Reid. Holloway v. Collier (1853), 1 W. R. 266.

9. ——— To the exclusion of husband.—Testator, by his will, gave real & personal property to his daughter A. absolutely; but by a codicil made subsequent to her marriage, he directed that "it should be settled to the exclusion of her present or any future husband, that the same might belong to her during her life, & be secured for the benefit of her children, equally, after her death, so that the issue of any such child dying in her lifetime might take his or her parent's share"; &, in default of such children or other issue, over:—Held: (1) the property must be settled in trust for A. for life, to her separate use, without power of anticipation; &, after her decease, upon trust for such of her children as should survive her, & for the issue living at her death of such of her children as should not survive her, equally, as tenants in common, the issue to take per stirpes, but inter se equally as tenants in common; (2) there should be limitations in the nature of cross-remainders in favour of such of the children & issue as should survive A. in respect of the share of any child dying in her lifetime without leaving issue, & in respect of the share of any issue of any child similarly dying; (3) the realty should be settled as realty; &, as testator, by simply directing a settlement, must have intended, with powers of leasing & sale & exchange, & with a receipt clause; (4) the settlement should contain provisions for maintenance, education & advancement, & a power to appoint new trustees.—TURNER v. SARGENT (1853), 17

Beav. 515; 22 L. T. O. S. 129; 2 W. R. 50; 51 E. R. 1134.

10. ——— Share not to be liable to debts or control of husband.—A father directed a fund, given to his daughter, to be settled "upon her & her issue," so that "the same might not be liable or subject to the debts, control or engagements of any husband" whom she might happen to marry during her lifetime:—Held: the settlement ought to give the daughter a power of appointment by will, in default of issue.

Form of settlement in such a case.—STANLEY v. JACKMAN (1857), 23 Beav. 450; 28 L. T. O. S. 334; 5 W. R. 302; 53 E. R. 177.

*Annotation:—Distd. Findon v. Findon (1857), 1 De G. & J. 380.

11. ——— To be settled on child for life remainder to issue—Gift over on default of issue.—Testator bequeathed to his daughter an annuity of £100 while she remained single but on her marriage & on some adequate provision made & which he directed to be made by settlement for her life & to the use of her issue he bequeathed to & for her use £2,500 & in default of such issue he bequeathed that sum for the benefit of his grandchildren who should be then living. The daughter married but no settlement was made & the annuity continued to be paid to her. She had an only child who died in her lifetime under age:—Held: the gift over did not take effect & her personal representative was entitled to the £2,500.—FINDON v. FINDON (1857), 1 De G. & J. 380; 26 L. J. Ch. 561; 30 L. T. O. S. 19; 5 W. R. 794; 44 E. R. 770, L. C.

12. ——— Directed to be strictly settled.—Where testator directed that his daughters' shares under his will should be "settled upon themselves strictly":—Held: the income of each daughter's share should, during the joint lives of herself & her husband, be paid to her for life for her separate use, without power of anticipation; & if she died first, then her share should go as she should by will appoint, & in default of appointment to her next of kin, exclusively of her husband; & if she survived, then to her absolutely.—LOCH v. BAGLEY (1867), L. R. 4 Eq. 122; 15 W. R. 1103.

13. ———.] — Testator gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trust for his sons & daughters who should attain twenty-one in equal shares, & declared that no daughter should be entitled in any case to receive her share, but should receive the income thereof only with power to dispose of the principal by will, if unmarried; but, in the event of any daughter marrying, then testator especially empowered his trustees to see that her share was duly & properly settled upon her by deed, so that same should be preserved for her separate use independently of her husband:—Held: the share of a daughter marrying should be settled so as to give her a life estate for her separate use without power of anticipation, with trusts in favour of the children of the marriage, & the ultimate trusts usual in a settlement of the wife's property.—Re SPICER, SPICER v. SPICER (1901), 84 L. T. 195.

14. ——— Directed to be settled on daughter for life.—Testator bequeathed as follows: "To my daughter A., wife of M., I bequeath £10,000.

Sub-sects. 2 & 3, A. & B.]

This amount to be settled upon her for life & to be invested for her in good securities in the names of two or more trustees. At her death £8,000 of the above sum to be divided equally amongst her children, & the remaining £2,000 to be given to her husband if living : if deceased, then the whole amount is to be equally divided amongst her children." The daughter & her husband & child applied for the sanction of the ct. to a settlement of the legacy :—Held : (1) a settlement ought to be directed, treating the directions in the will as instructions for a settlement; (2) on the construction of the will, the settlement must be so framed to make the contingent gift of £2,000 to "her husband if living" apply only to M. & not to any future husband, & so as to confine the trusts in favour of the daughter's children to her children by him; (3) the settlement ought to be framed so as to restrain the daughter from anticipating the income, & so as to make the fund divisible only among children who being sons should attain twenty-one, or being daughters attain that age or marry, & it ought to contain the usual powers of maintenance & advancement, & a power of appointment by the daughter in default of children, with the usual limitations to herself or her next of kin in default of appointment, but not any power of appointment among the children, as such a power would be inconsistent with the direction for equal division; (4) the costs ought to be paid out of the legacy & not out of the residuary estate.—Re PARROTT, WALTER v. PARROTT (1886), 33 Ch. D. 274; 55 L. T. 132; 34 W. R. 553, C. A.

15. — To be settled at marriage.—Testator left to his daughter, J., the sum of £2,000 to be settled on her when she married, or to be paid to her on her attaining twenty-one : should she die not leaving issue, the £2,000 to fall into the residue of his estate. J. married in her father's lifetime. The ct. directed the legacy to be settled in trust for her separate use for life; remainder for her children living at her death, according to her appointment; in default of appointment, for her sons at twenty-one & her daughters at that age or on marriage; remainder for her next of kin; & if she had no child living at her death, the legacy to become part of testator's residue.—YOUNG v. MACINTOSH (1843), 13 Sim. 445; 1 L. T. O. S. 106; 7 Jur. 383; 60 E. R. 172.

Annotation :—Consd. Cogan v. Duffield (1876), 2 Ch. D. 44.

16. — Attainment of majority.—Testator, by his will, directed his property to be divided into nine shares, & gave one & a half share to each of his two daughters, "to be settled on themselves at their marriage." At his death, the two daughters were infants. The two daughters having attained twenty-one, & being unmarried :—Held : they were entitled to their shares absolutely, & there was no trust for a settlement which the ct. could execute.—MAGRATH v. MOREHEAD (1871), L. R. 12 Eq. 491; 41 L. J. Ch. 120; 24 L. T. 868.

Annotation :—Fold. Re Bannister, Heys-Jones v. Bannister (1921), 90 L. J. Ch. 415.

17. — Testator directed by his will that his residuary real & personal estate should, after the death of his widow, be "equally divided amongst & settled for their own & sole use upon my dear children & should they marry, the husband to have no control over their property." Testator left him surviving three daughters only [over twenty-one years old] :—Held : the expression in the will of testator was not sufficiently precise to raise an executory trust; an intention to restrict the gifts to life interests could not be extracted from the language used by testator; & the daughters took their shares absolutely.—Re BANNISTER, HEYS-JONES v. BANNISTER (1921), 90 L. J. Ch. 415; 125 L. T. 54.

18. — Share of married daughter—Power of executors to settle.—Testator, possessed of real & personal property, desired his exors., out of such moneys of his as might come to their hands, to purchase two annuities for W. & her children; with regard to the rest of his property, of what kind soever, he desired his exors. after payment of his debts, to pay & make over the whole to his daughter M., the wife of B., & to the children of his daughter after her decease :—Held : the exors. took a power to settle the freehold property upon the daughter for life, with remainder after her decease to her children & their heirs.—KNOCKER v. BUNBURY (1840), 6 Bing. N. C. 306; 8 Scott, 414; 9 L. J. C. P. 212; 133 E. R. 121.

19. — Share of niece—Settled for separate use with trust for issue.—Testator gave one-third of his residue to his niece which he desired might be settled by his exors., on her, for her separate use for her life, but to devolve to her issue at her death, & failing issue, then to revert to his nephew. The ct. directed the third to be settled in trust for the niece for her separate use for life, & after her death, in trust for her issue then living, & if there should be no such issue, then in trust for the nephew.—STONOR v. CURWEN (1832), 5 Sim. 264; 58 E. R. 336.

Annotation :—Apld. Lyddon v. Ellison (1854), 19 Beav. 565.

20. Form of settlement.—Devise to the heir-at-law & his issue male in strict settlement; remainder in trust to be sold, & the money to be distributed among certain persons or the survivors or survivor of them; & that the share of one should previous to her marriage be settled upon her for life; & after her death upon her issue; in default of issue upon her right heirs; the produce of the sale is to be considered as personal; & vests in the survivors at the death of the tenant for life without issue male. A settlement in trust for the husband for life, then for the wife for life, then for the children, as they should appoint, in default of appointment equally; if no children, according to their joint appointment; in default thereof to the husband, his exors., etc., is a sufficient execution of the direction in the will.—*BROGRAVE v. consent as therein mentioned, the share of such daughter or daughters so marrying should be assigned to trustees in settlement "upon such respective marriages" for the benefit of such daughter or daughters so marrying for life, "& after her or their deceases for the uses of her or their intended husband or husbands for his or their life or lives, & after their decease respectively," for the children of "such marriage or respective marriages," with a gift over in the event of a daughter dying "without leaving any issue her surviving." M., the only daughter of the testator, was twice married. On her first marriage, she being then an infant, a settlement of her share was made on herself, husband & children, containing no provisions in favour of the husband or children of a future marriage. On her second marriage a settlement of her share was made whereby a life interest was limited to her second husband in the event of his surviving her, which happened. She subsequently died without leaving issue her surviving:—Held: the executory trust contained in the will authorised a settlement of a daughter's share on her for life with remainder to any husband she might leave for his life; & the second husband of M. was accordingly entitled to a life interest in her share.—NASH v. ALLEN (1889), 42 Ch. D. 54; 61 L. T. 193; 37 W. R. 646; sub nom. Re NASH, NASH v. ALLEN, 58 L. J. Ch. 754.

28. —.]—Testator gave legacies upon certain trusts for each of his daughters for life, & after her death, for her husband & children, & subject thereto he directed that each legacy should "sink into, & form part of, my residuary estate & be applied & disposed of as hereinafter mentioned." He gave his residue to his children equally, "the shares of daughters to be paid to the same trustees respectively & to be settled upon the same trusts" as their respective legacies. One of the daughters having died unmarried:—Held: the direction for settlement of daughters' shares of residue being executory, the ct., in framing a settlement of such a share, would modify the ultimate gift over by inserting a limitation in favour of the other residuary legatees excluding the particular daughter, & the share of deceased daughter of testator was divisible accordingly among the other residuary legatees.—*Re BALLANCE, BALLANCE v. 41. Direction to settle life estate—Estate tail.]—Devise of land to trustees in trust to pay an annuity, & subject thereto in trust to A. for life; remainder to trustees to preserve, etc.; remainder to the heirs of the body of A.; remainder to testator's right heirs, & the residue of testator's personal estate to be laid out in land, & settled to the same uses:—Held: A. was entitled to an estate tail in the lands to be purchased.—AUSTEN v. TAYLOR (1759), 1 Eden, 361; Amb. 376; 28 E. R. 725.

42. Direction for estate tail.]—Testator devised his estates to trustees, “upon trust as counsel should advise, to convey, settle, & assure, the said premises to or for the use of or in trust for his daughter J. for her life, & after her death then on the heirs of his body, etc.” The ct. directed the estates to be settled upon J. for her life, with remainder to her first & other sons in tail general with remainder to her daughters in tail general, etc. The limitations being to both sons & daughters in tail general, there is no necessity for a subsequent limitation to J. & the heirs of her body.—BASTARD v. PROBY (1788), 2 Cox, Eq. Cas. 6; 30 E. R. 3.

43. —With benefits for other children.]—JERVOISE v. NORTHUMBERLAND (DUKE), No. 279, post.

44. Direction for remainder to issue “in tail male”—Daughters entitled.]—Testator devised freehold estates to trustees in trust to settle & convey them to the use of G. R. for life, with remainder to his issue in tail male, in strict settlement, & in default of such issue the estates to go over. G. R. had no son but had several daughters, all born after testator's death:—Held: the words “in tail male” were descriptive, not of the issue, but of the interest they were to take, & the daughters were entitled to take, under the limitation in remainder, as tenants in common.—TREVOR v. TREVOR (1847), 1 H. L. Cas. 239; 9 E. R. 747, H. L.

45. Direction to secure for benefit of family.]—Testator directed that upon the death of his wife, to whom he gave a life interest in all his property, both real & personal, his nephew, whom he named, should be heir to all his property not otherwise disposed of; but added, that, as he had had little intercourse with his nephew, & was apprehensive that his habits might require some control, whatever portion of the property might be possessed by him was to be secured by the exors. for the benefit of his family:—Held: the real estate was to be settled on the nephew for life, with remainder to his sons successively in tail male, with remainder to his daughters as tenants in common in fee; & the personal estate upon the nephew for life, with remainder to all his children as joint tenants, with a proviso that in the event of all the children dying under twenty-one, & daughters, unmarried, or, if sons, without issue, the personality should be held in trust for the nephew absolutely.—WHITE v. BRIGGS (1848), 2 Ph. 583; 15 Sim. 300; 17 L. J. Ch. 196; 41 E. R. 1068, L. C.

46. Direction as to ultimate remainder.]—Devise subject to life interest of testator's widow, upon trust to convey, assign, & assure freehold property “unto & to the use of my son T. F., & the heirs of his body lawfully issuing, but in such manner & form, nevertheless, & subject to such limitations & restrictions, as that if T. F. shall happen to die without leaving lawful issue, then that the property may after his death descend unincumbered unto & belong to my daughter R. F., her heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns”:—Held: the devise was an executory trust to be executed by a conveyance to the use of T. F. during his life, with remainder to his first & other sons & daughters as purchasers in tail, with remainder to R. F. in fee.—THOMPSON v. FISHER (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 207; 18 W. R. 860.

C. Powers Inserted.

48. Power of sale—Direction to insert general & special power.]—Testator having, by will, devised all his estates to trustees, in trust to convey to his son & his issue, in strict settlement, with a remainder to his nephew & his issue; by a codicil directed that a power should be inserted, enabling the trustees, with consent of the son, to sell one of the estates to the nephew, on his agreeing to assume testator's name, & by a second codicil directed that the settlement should contain usual powers to the trustees, with the consent of the tenants for life, & guardians of infant tenants in tail in possession, to sell “all or any part” of the estates:—Held: the special power was not revoked by the general one, but that the settlement must contain both.—GREENE v. WIGLESWORTH (1818), 1 Swan. 234; 1 Wils. Ch. 313; 37 E. R. 134.

49. Power of sale & exchange—Direction to insert all proper & usual powers.]—A will directing a settlement of estates, & that there should be inserted all proper powers for making leases, & otherwise, according to circumstances, for the tenants for life, to be exercised by them when qualified, & when not by the trustees, does not authorise the insertion of a power of sale & exchange to the trustees, to be exercised with the consent of the tenant for life.

51. ——— Settlement of realty & personalty.]

Testator, who made his will in 1810, & died in 1820, directed by his will that his daughters' shares in his property, which consisted of realty & personalty, should be so settled that, if they married, one-half of their fortune should be settled on them & their children, exclusive of their husbands:—Held: this direction authorised the insertion in the settlement of a power of sale & exchange of that moiety of a daughter's share in testator's real estate which was to be settled on her & her children.—WISE v. PIPER (1880), 13 Ch. D. 848; 49 L. J. Ch. 611; 41 L. T. 794; 28 W. R. 442.

52. Power to charge portions—Direction to insert all other usual clauses, powers & provisos —Settlement of realty on sons.]—A will directed a settlement to be made of real estate on A. & his first & other sons in tail, with powers of jointuring, leasing, sale & exchange, & all other clauses, powers & provisos usually inserted in settlements of the same kind:—Held: these last words did not authorise the insertion of a power to charge with portions.—HIGGINSON v. BARNEY (1826), 2 Sim. & St. 516; 57 E. R. 443.

53. Power to appoint new trustees—Direction to insert all other usual clauses, powers & provisos —Strict settlement.]—Testator directed his real estates to be settled on certain persons in strict settlement, & that there should be inserted, in the settlement so to be made, powers of leasing, sale, partition & exchange, " & my will is that, in such intended settlement, shall be inserted all such other proper & reasonable powers as are usually inserted in settlements of the like nature ":—Held: a power to appoint new trustees, was a proper & reasonable power to be inserted in the settlement.—LINDOW v. FLEETWOOD (1835), Sim. 152; 58 E. R. 551.

54. Power of appointment—Settlement settled by court—Life estate to husband.]

Where testator had directed that, in the event of the marriage of his daughter, a certain portion of his property should be secured to her & the issue of her marriage, by a settlement or some other good assurance, in such manner as his trustees or trustee for the time being might think fit, the ct., on an application to which the surviving trustee was a party, approved of a power in the settlement made on the marriage of the daughter, enabling her to appoint by will a life estate in the property to her husband.—CHARLTON v. RENDALL (1853), 11 Hare, 296; 68 E. R. 1287.

55. ———.]—In making a settlement of property directed to be settled on the wife & children of testatrix's son, the ct. has jurisdiction to give to the husband a life interest & also power to appoint the fund amongst the issue of the marriage jointly with the wife during the coverture,

D. Waste.

58. Whether tenant for life made liable for waste.]—A. devises lands to his sister B. & C. & their heirs & assigns, upon trust, that until his granddaughter D. should marry or die, to receive the profits, & thereout to pay her £100 a year for her maintenance: the residue to pay debts & legacies. After payment thereof, in trust for the said D. & upon further trust, that if she lived to marry a protestant of the church of England, & at the time of such marriage be of the age of twenty-one or upwards, or if under that age, such marriage be with the consent of the said B. then to convey, with all convenient speed, after such marriage, to the use of the said D. for life, sans waste voluntary waste in houses excepted; remainder to her husband for life; remainder to the issue of her body, with remainders over; & upon further trust, that if the said D. die unmarried, then to the use of B. for life; remainder to the son of his other granddaughter E. in tail; remainder to deft. C. remainder to his first & other sons; remainder to A.'s right heirs; & upon further trust, that if D. marry not according to the will, then upon such marriage to convey to trustees, as to one moiety to the use of D. for life, then to trustees to preserve contingent remainders: remainder to her first & every other son, being a protestant, with remainders over; & as to the other moiety, to the son of his daughter E. in like manner. A. dies, D. attains her full age; & upon a treaty of marriage with F. applies to B. & C. for a conveyance to herself for life; remainder to her intended husband for life; remainder to the issue of her body; B. executes such conveyance, but C. refuses; D. suffers a recovery of the whole to the use of herself in fee, & then marries F. who made a considerable settlement upon her; she covenants to settle her estate upon husband & wife; remainder to first, etc., sons in tail, remainder to survivor of husband & wife in fee. They bring a bill to compel C. to convey, etc., decreed, not an estate tail to D., but an estate for life sans waste, ut supra, as being the intent of A. upon the will with remainders over in strict settlement.—GLENORCHY (LORD) v. DAVENPORT* (1863), 1 Hem. & M. 775; 3 New Rep. 26; 33 L. J. Ch. 33; 9 L. T. 370; 10 Jur. N. S. 35; 12 W. R. 6; 71 E. R. 339.

Annotation:—Folld. Stanley v. Coulthurst (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 259.

60. —.]—Although, where the object of a direction that property shall be strictly settled appears to be simply to prevent the first taker from alienating the property, he will be made tenant for life without impeachment of waste; yet, where there are other circumstances to show that he was intended to take simply an estate for life, he will not be made dispunishable for waste.

Personalty was settled by will on a woman for life, for her separate use, without power of anticipation, & after her death in moieties on her two sons for life & their first or other sons who should attain twenty-one. There was a power to invest in real estate, to be settled in strict settlement, subject to the same uses, trusts & powers as the trust funds were then subject to, or as near thereto as the nature & quality of the estates would permit:—Held: the tenants for life of realty purchased under the power ought to be impeachable for waste.—*STANLEY v. 65. — Settlement of reversion expectant—Fund subsequently obtained under appointment.—A marriage settlement made in 1864 gave the husband & wife or the survivor, power to appoint the settled funds among the children of the marriage. In 1904 one of the daughters, on her marriage, executed a settlement which contained a recital that, under the settlement of 1864 & a deed poll executed by her parents, she was entitled in reversion expectant upon the death of the survivor of her parents, both then living, to one-third part of £6,500 of the trust funds of the settlement of 1864, & witnessed that the daughter assigned to trustees "all that the third part or share" to which she was entitled in reversion expectant as aforesaid. The mother survived the father & died in 1917, having by her will, made in 1916, appointed £2,000, part of the funds settled in 1864, to the daughter. There was no evidence of any other appointment by deed poll or otherwise:—Held: the appointed sum of £2,000 was caught by & subject to the settlement of 1904.—*Re HARPER'S SETTLEMENT, WILLIAMS v. SUB-SECT. 3.—CONSTRUCTION.

A. In General.

Construction of deeds generally, see DEEDS, Vol. XVII., pp. 242 et seq.

70. Difference in construction of will & settlement.]—Though there may not be any different rule of construction applicable to wills & settlements, yet the different character of the instrument is a circumstance to be weighed in determining the effect of the disposition it contains: shares under a settlement being held not to be vested might create a resulting trust for the settlor whilst in a will the residuary legatee might take.—FARRER v. BARKER (1852), 9 Hare, 737; 68 E. R. 712.

Duffey* (1888), 13 App. Cas. 294. Mentd. Malden v. Maine (1855), 2 Jur. N. S. 206.

71. —[Semble: the distinction between a settlement & a will is, that in the former case, a settlor must be assumed a priori to have a general intention to benefit husband, wife, & children impartially; whereas, in the latter, testator may have good reasons for making a distinction & an intention of equally benefiting all cannot be assumed.—Re CROSSE'S WILL (1863), as reported in 32 L. J. Ch. 344; 8 L. T. 299; 9 Jur. N. S. 429; 11 W. R. 396.

72. —Marriage settlement.]—Marriage settlements, by their very existence, prove an intention to provide for children, & it is not to be supposed that the intention was limited to children who should survive their parents; but a will is arbitrary in its nature, & such may be the intention. True it is, that in the case either of a settlement or of a will, the question is one of intention, & a will may be so framed as to evince an intention to provide for children, & in the case of a will so framed, the principle may be reasonably applied (TURNER, L.J.).—BYTHESEA v. BYTHESEA (1854), 23 L. J. Ch. 1004; 24 L. T. O. S. 17; 2 W. R. 677, L. C. & L. J.

73. Construction that makes interests of children independent of their surviving the parents.]—In putting a construction on a marriage settlement, the ct. always endeavours not to make the interest of the children depend on their surviving their parents.—STRUTT v. BRAITHWAITE (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 369; 21 L. J. Ch. 609; 19 L. T. O. S. 28; 16 Jur. 882; 64 E. R. 1157.

75. Expressed intention to provide for one event that has happened—Not controlled by provision for other events not happening.]—Where parties to a deed of settlement contemplate several states of circumstances, & there is found, on the face of the instrument, a clear & distinct expression of intention to provide for one event, which has precisely happened, the terms of gift so expressed are not to be superseded, nor their effect destroyed, by any ambiguity of terms used solely in reference to other events or states of circumstances which have not happened.

A husband by post-nuptial contract, after granting an annuity to his wife, bound himself, his heirs & exors. to pay her, or any person appointed by her in writing, during her life, with or without the husband's consent, & whether she should survive or predecease him, & have issue or not, the sum of £3,000 or other lesser sum, as she should direct, at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas next after the husband's death, in case he should survive or predecease her without leaving issue of the marriage; or at the first of those terms after failure of the issue, in case she should survive leaving issue of the marriage; or at any of the said terms after any of these events; so that no part of the said sum should be raised during the life of the husband, or the joint existence of the wife, & the issue of the marriage; with proviso, that in case the wife should survive the husband & the issue of the marriage, & recover payment of the said sum or any part of it, her annuity should suffer restriction equal to the interest of the sum recovered. The wife survived the husband, & died without having had issue, & without recovering or disposing of any part of the £3,000:—Held: in the event which happened, the £3,000 belonged to the wife's estate, & her personal representative was entitled to it against the husband's estate.—*DILL v. The husband was entitled to a rentcharge issuing out of the hereditaments, but it was not mentioned in the settlement. The settlement contained no covenants for title:—Held: the settlement operated by way of release & not by way of grant of the rentcharge, & as the husband & wife, the owners of the unsettled moiety of the hereditaments had concurred, that moiety, by virtue of Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859 (c. 35), s. 10, remained subject to the entire charge.—*PRICE v. 82. Proviso for husband & wife to reside in property.]—Previously to his marriage a husband executed two deeds in England, by the first of which he transferred certain mtges. of freehold hereditaments in Sierra Leone, & granted certain freehold hereditaments in Australia to trustees, upon trust for himself until the marriage, & afterwards upon trust to sell same with the joint consent of himself & his wife, & to hold the proceeds of sale, & also the rents & profits until sale, upon the trusts declared concerning same by the second deed, which was of even date with the first. The first deed contained a proviso that until the premises were sold the settlor & his wife, during their joint lives, & the survivor, after the death of either, should be permitted to reside in & enjoy all or any of the premises rent free. The second deed recited the first, & declared that the trustees should invest the proceeds of the sale of the settled premises, & should, during the joint lives of the husband & wife, pay the interest, dividends, & annual produce thereof to the wife for her separate use, & after her death to the settlor for life, & then in trust for the issue of the marriage, but it contained no express trust of the rents & profits of the settled premises until sale. A separation took place soon after the marriage, & the wife filed a bill to have the trusts of the deed executed:—Held: as the husband & wife did not both elect to reside on the settled premises, the proviso did not enable the husband to do so.—*RAINY v. There followed a clause directing that the trustees should, during the minority of each of the said children, pay to the father, to be by him applied or not as he should think fit, & after his decease should apply, the income of the presumptive share of each such child for or towards his or her maintenance & education until his or her share should become vested, or he or she should previously die:—Held: daughters who attained twenty-one were entitled to share in the fund.—Re DANIEL'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS (1875), 1 Ch. 86. — Tail male construed as tail general.]—By a marriage settlement made in 1886 it was provided that if the eldest son of the settlor should become entitled to N.'s real estate under his will for an estate in tail male he should be excluded from all share in the trust funds subject to the settlement. A. was the settlor's eldest son, & under the limitations of the will of M. who died in 1868, he became entitled to testator's real estate for an estate in tail general. The trustees of the settlement took out a summons to determine whether he had lost his right to a share in the settlement funds:—Held: inasmuch as the intention of the settlor was clear & at the date of the settlement she must have known that if A. came into testator's real estate it must be for an estate in tail general, not an estate in tail male, the insertion of the word "male" in the settlement must be treated as a misdescription, & the settlement construed as if the word were omitted; & A. was excluded from sharing in the settlement moneys, without prejudice to his claims if the younger son died.—*Re ALEXANDER'S SETTLEMENT, JENNINGS v. real estate whatsoever & wheresoever now vested in K., to hold unto S., his heirs & assigns, for ever," upon trusts therein declared for the sale, & disposal of the proceeds thereof, by S. among all K.'s children equally; & upon K.'s death:—Held: the legal estate in the property devised to K. in trust by the will did not pass to S. under the conveyance. Although the words of the conveyance are primâ facie sufficient to pass the legal estate in the whole property vested in K. as trustee under the will, yet, when the surrounding circumstances, the nature & purpose of the conveyance, & the intention of the grantor, as gathered therefrom, are considered, a doctrine equally applicable to the construction of deeds as of wills, it is manifest that he could not have intended to convey any property but that in which he was beneficially interested, & the deed operated only upon such parts of the trust property as belonged to him in his own right.—*SIDEBOTHAM v. H. afterwards died, having by will given all his real & personal estate to his wife upon trust for the person or persons who would have been entitled thereto under Statutes of Distribution of the effects of intestates if H. had died seised or possessed thereof intestate. On a summons taken out by the wife against the trustees of the settlement & her children:—Held: the reference in the settlement to the will of E. was not sufficient to supply the want of words of limitation, & the trustees took, in the share of real estate under the will to which H. was entitled at the date of the settlement, only an estate for their joint lives & the life of the survivor.—*Re HUDSON, KÜHNE v. recited that I. was absolutely entitled to freehold hereditaments, "which said freehold property" he was desirous to settle in favour of his wife & children. It was then witnessed that in pursuance of such desire he assigned the "said freehold hereditaments" to the trustees, without the words "heirs," upon trust for sale & investment & to pay the income to Mrs. I. for life & then to the settlor for life & then for their children. The settlement contained a proviso that if any present or future trustee died or wished to retire it should be lawful for the surviving or continuing trustee or, if there should be no continuing trustee, for the retiring trustee to appoint another trustee in his place, & that the trust funds & premises should thereupon be vested in the new trustees. Amongst the settlor's freeholds were some in which he only had an equitable estate:—Held: by reason of the absence of words of limitation there passed to the trustees merely an estate in the settlor's equitable freeholds for the lives of the trustees named in the deed & the survivor of them.—*Re IRWIN, IRWIN v. The copyhold hereditaments were to be held on corresponding trusts, & the investments were to be applied, first, in discharging an incumbrance created by the settlor, & as to the residue, if any, in the purchase of freehold hereditaments to be assured to the trustee or trustees in fee simple upon the same trusts as were thereby declared of the freehold hereditaments thereby assured. On the death of the trustee in 1913:—Held: (1) as to the freehold & copyhold hereditaments the trustee took a life interest only, & the trusts of the settlement came to an end on the death of the trustee; (2) as to the investments

no words of limitation appropriate to real estate were necessary to pass an absolute interest to the trustee, Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 22 (5), having made no alteration in the law in this respect, & the trusts of the settlement did not come to an end on the death of the trustee.

Words of limitation are unnecessary in disposing of the equitable interest either in personal property subject to a trust for conversion into land or in the prospective proceeds of sale of land which is under a trust for conversion into money. The conveyancer can have regard to either the interest in the existing property or the interest in the property which is ultimately to represent the existing property after conversion; & if either the existing property or the ultimate property is of the nature of personalty, he can properly deal with the equitable interests in that property without using the word "heirs" or its equivalent "in fee simple."—*Re MONCKTON'S SETTLEMENT, MONCKTON v. At the date of the appointment some of the land had been sold & the property consisted partly of land & partly of money subject to a trust for investment in land:—Held: (1) the appointees took equitable & not legal estates; (2) though the gift by deed of an equitable estate in land without words of limitation passed only a life estate, the fee might pass if there was to be found in the construction of the deed as a whole an intention that it should pass, & such an intention was shown by the fact that a gift of land was coupled with a gift of money subject to a trust for investment in land which would pass absolutely without words of limitation.—*Re NUTT'S SETTLEMENT, McLAUGHLIN v. 101. ———.]—By indenture of settlement made upon the marriage of A. & B., A. assigned a term of two thousand years in certain premises to a trustee to be held upon the trusts of the settlement. The settlement recited that it was agreed that the premises should be settled "upon A. for life, then to B. for her life; & after their several deceases, on the issue of the marriage, & in default of such issue, then to the brother of A. & his heirs, exors., & administrators." The trusts declared in the deed were "to permit & suffer A. to receive the rents, issues, & profits, etc., for so many years of the term as should expire in his lifetime"; then to B. for life " & from & after the several deceases of A. & B., to permit & suffer the heirs of the body of A. begotten of B., to receive the rents, issues, & profits of the premises for so many years of the term as should expire in the life or lives of him, her, or them, etc." & in default of such issue, then to the brother of A. for the residue of the term.—Held: the words "heirs of the body, etc.," were words of limitation & not of purchase; & the effect of the settlement was to give the absolute interest in the term to A., & which if undisposed of by his will, would go to his next of kin & not to his heir-at-law.—BARTLETT v. GREEN (1842), 13 Sim. 218; 12 L. J. Ch. 148; 6 Jur. 1099; 60 E. R. 85.

102. Mixing funds with settled funds.—By a post-nuptial settlement a wife settled savings of her separate estate upon trusts for herself & her husband successively for life, with remainder to their two sons, with a proviso that in the event of the death of either under twenty-five without issue, his share should go to the survivor. There was also a proviso that the husband or wife should be at liberty to add any part of the dividends to the sum invested, & that the sum to be so added should be subject to the like trusts as the original fund. The wife invested in the names of the trustees, but without communicating the fact to them, various sums, arising partly from accumulations of the dividends & partly from funds derived from other sources; & after the death of the husband, & of both of the sons, without issue, the exor. of the survivor of the sons, instituted a suit to have the trusts of the settlement executed.—Held: it was not a sufficient defence on the part of the settlor as to the additions to the fund that she had invested them under a misapprehension as to the effect of the settlement, & all the additions were subject to the trusts of it.—MUGGERIDGE v. STANTON (1859), 1 De G. F. & J. 107; 1 L. T. 144; 8 W. R. 69; 45 E. R. 300, L. C. & L. JJ.

A settlement will control a writing executed after, but the parties refusing to execute the settlement without it, they must be construed as one entire agreement & both consistent.—TYRRELL v. HOPE (1743), 2 Atk. 558; 26 E. R. 735.

105. Conflict between voluntary settlement & subsequent marriage settlement—Marriage settlement prevails so far as it revokes voluntary settlement.—A father by a voluntary deed conveyed certain estates to trustees upon trust to allow him the rents & profits for life; then to the use of his son, his exors., administrators & assigns. Subsequently he makes another settlement of the same premises on the marriage of the son, by which he gives up the immediate rents & profits to the son, & after some further limitations reserves the ultimate reversion to himself.—Held: the voluntary deed remained in force, in as far as it was not revoked by the subsequent marriage settlement; & the reversion belonged to those claiming under the son, & not to those claiming under the father.—*CROKER v. 106. Conflict between settlement & subsequent appointment—Necessity for clear intention to alter limitations.—By a deed of settlement, lands were conveyed, subject to certain uses, to such use as W. R. & his wife should appoint; & in default of such appointment, to W. R. the younger. W. R. & his wife appointed several times, by way of mtge., with provisos for reconveyance to the former uses; & at length appointed, with a power of sale & a proviso for reconveyance to W. R. & his wife in fee. W. R. survived his wife, & sold his supposed equity of redemption.

On a bill filed by parties claiming under the trusts of the original settlement against the representatives & other persons claiming under W. R., the husband, for redemption.—Held: under the last mtge. deed W. R. & his wife did not take an absolute fee in the equity of redemption; & therefore, plffs. were entitled to redeem against the representatives of the purchaser, the intention will accruing to settlor during marriage.—ARMIT v. BREDDIN (1866), 17 L. Ch. R. 165.—IR.

In a settlement, the limitation was to the children "who should be living at the time of the decease of the father"; this was controlled by the gift over:—Held: a child who died in the life of her father, having attained twenty-one, was held entitled to a share.—*DIXON v. Ten of the children survived D., but died in the lifetime of J. G., one of the ten children, left six children, one of whom, by this bill, prayed that the trusts might be carried into execution. W., another of the ten children, left two children, one of whom died four months previously to J., leaving four children, & the question was, whether these four children were entitled to the share of their deceased parent:—Held: the word "issue" being used in conjunction with that of "parent," more remote descendants than children were not included in the word "issue" & therefore the grandchildren were not entitled to their parent's share.—*ANDERSON v. Under the last-mentioned trusts the property was given after the deaths of the tenants for life "to the children" of the marriage, with a provision for the substitution of the "issue" of such children for their parents, in the event of the latter dying under twenty-one. There was also a maintenance clause confined to "children," & the gift over in both parts of the settlement was to take effect in default of "children" attaining twenty-one without leaving lawful "issue" living at their death:—Held: on the construction of the settlement it was obvious that the issue of children were only to take in substitution for, & not concurrently with their parents & that the word "issue" in the clause relating to the after-acquired property must be read "children."—*MARSHALL v. The husband married again, & at the date of the decree there were four children of the first marriage, two daughters & one son, who had attained twenty-one, one son under age, & a child of a deceased daughter:—Held: the word "issue" was restricted to the first generation, & therefore, the child of a deceased daughter took no interest.—*FREWEN v. 132. —.]—There is no absolute rule that, because the word "issue" is used in one or more clauses of a settlement as meaning "children" only, it must receive the same construction in every other clause.

By a marriage settlement certain funds were assigned to trustees upon trust, after the death of the husband & wife, for the issue of the marriage as the wife should by deed or will appoint, & for want of such appointment, upon trust for the issue of the marriage, if more than one, in equal shares, the sons at twenty-one, & the daughters at twenty-one or marriage, & in case there should be but one child issue of the marriage, or, if more than one, & all but one should die without having become entitled, then in trust for such only or surviving child at the time thereinbefore limited or appointed; & in case there should not be any issue of the intended marriage, upon certain trusts therein mentioned. The wife by will appointed part of the trust fund to the five children of her late son A.:—Held: the word "issue" in the power of appointment must be construed in its strictly technical meaning, & therefore the appointment was valid.—Re WARREN'S TRUSTS (1884), 26 Ch. 134. Issue then in being.]—By a settlement made on his marriage, the settlor granted freehold lands to trustees upon trust for himself for life & after his death to convey the lands & pay the rents & profits "unto or for the benefit of all & every or any one or more child or children, or any grandchild or grandchildren or other issue then in being of the said intended marriage," for such estate or interest & in such shares & subject to such conditions as the settlor should by deed or will appoint. There was issue of the marriage several children, who all attained twenty-one. The settlor appointed a portion of the lands to his eldest son, then of age, his heirs & assigns, & joined with him in mortgaging this portion. The son having died in his father's lifetime:—Held: upon the true construction of the settlement the words "then in being" governed only the words "grandchild or grandchildren or other issue," & not the words "child or children."—*LEADER v. 137. "All & every or any child or children"—Construed as one to exclusion of others.]—A power of appointment in a marriage settlement was to be exercised in favour of "all & every or any child or children":—Held: those words conferred a right of appointing the whole fund to one or more, in exclusion of the others of such children.—*BLAND v. 141. Household goods, furniture, etc.]—A feme sole trader who kept a horse & chaise to visit her customers, before marriage, by deed conveyed to trustees "all her household furniture, goods, & chattels," specified in a schedule in which the horse & chaise were not included, & "all her stock-in-trade, materials & other articles belonging to her, in & about her said business." After marriage, she used the horse & chaise as before.—Held: the horse & chaise passed to the trustees by the deed, & were not liable to be taken in execution for the debts of her husband.—DEAN v. BROWN (1826), 5 B. & C. 336; 8 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 95; 108 E. R. 125.

142. —.]—A marriage settlement, reciting that it had been agreed that the intended husband should settle & assign all the household goods, furniture, plate, etc., belonging to him, & to which he would become entitled on the solemnisation of the said marriage, & set forth in an inventory; witnessed, that in pursuance, etc., & in consideration, etc., the husband did assign all the household goods, furniture, etc., belonging to him, set forth in the inventory, to a trustee upon trust, after the marriage, to assign the same to such person as the wife should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment, to permit her to retain possession & enjoy the said household goods, etc., therein-before described, & to sell the same for her sole use & benefit, exclusive of the husband, & not subject to his debts, etc., & after the death of the wife upon trust for the husband, & after the death of the husband, in case the wife should survive him, in trust for the wife, but in case she should die, during his life, then upon trust for him. The goods mentioned in the inventory were in a house in the possession of the husband; a part of them belonged to the father of the wife, which he had agreed to give her, a part to the wife, & the remainder to the husband. The marriage was solemnised, the parties enjoyed the use of the furniture for five years, when they removed, & the husband, at the desire of the wife exchanged some articles, & sold some, & with the proceeds bought others. The trustee was informed of this, & approved, & ever since the husband & his wife continued to use & enjoy the furniture.—Held: looking at the whole scope of the deed, the husband joined in conveying the whole of the goods to the trustee for the sole & separate use of his wife, the exchanging part of the goods, & the selling other parts & buying fresh goods, were acts done by the husband as the agent of the trustee, & therefore the substituted goods must be considered as belonging to the trustee, & subject to the trusts of the deed.—LANE v. GRYLLS (1862), 6 L. T. 533.

143. Fixtures & fittings up.]—Suit instituted by husband against his wife, from whom he is separated, & the trustees of their marriage settlement, to enforce his claim in the marital right to certain furniture & tenant's fixtures, alleged not to have been comprised in the settlement; the furniture being in a house which is let ready furnished, pltf. claims two-thirds of the rent, in respect of the furniture, & also two-thirds of the rent received already by his wife.—Held: the furniture in question was not comprised in the marriage settlement.

The fixtures mentioned in the settlement are exclusively landlord's fixtures, & I also think it clear that the furniture in question was not included in the settlement. . . . Tenant's fixtures were not comprised in the expression "fixtures" & "fittings-up" did not include furniture (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—SIMMONS v. SIMMONS (1847), 6 Hare, 352; 10 L. T. O. ultimate remainder to the use of the settlor in fee. He died soon after without disposing of the reversion:—Held: the words "survivors or survivor" were to be read "others or other," & consequently, the limitation over to the daughters of one of the settlor's daughters, who had issue, was not defeated by the death of that daughter in the lifetime of another, who subsequently died without issue, but that limitation took effect as a good cross-remainder.—*COLE v. Four of the tenants for life died without issue. Another married & died leaving one child, who attained twenty-one & afterwards died. Another married & died leaving several children, all of whom attained twenty-one, & some of whom were still living. One tenant for life was still living:—Held: the words, "survivors & survivor" must be construed "others & other," & all the children of tenants for life who respectively attained twenty-one acquired absolute vested interests, irrespective of whether they did or did not survive deceased tenants for life or the tenant for life who was still living.—*Re FRIEND'S SETTLEMENT, COLE v. 151. —.] — A wife, who had obtained a divorce from her first husband, by whom she had one son, by a settlement made in contemplation of a second marriage, settled a fund, upon the death of the survivor of herself & the intended husband, upon the usual trusts for the issue of the intended marriage, & if there should be no child who should become entitled thereunder a general power of appointment over the fund was reserved to her; & in default of appointment the fund was to be held, in the event of her predeceasing her husband, in trust for such person or persons as under the Statutes of Distribution would have become entitled thereto at her death, had she died possessed thereof intestate & "without having been married." There was no issue of the second marriage & the wife predeceased her husband without having exercised her power of appointment. On the death of the husband the question arose whether the son of the former marriage was entitled to the fund as next of kin:—Held: the son was excluded by the terms of the ultimate trust, there being nothing in the context or in the circumstances of the case to modify the natural meaning of the words "without having been married."—*BOYCE v. The husband of the second marriage carried on the business, & substituted, from time to time, stock-in-trade, in the place of that previously consumed in carrying on the business:—Held: the substituted stock-in-trade, as well as the original stock-in-trade, was contemplated by the settlement, & the same & the good-will of the business passed under the above words.—*ENGLAND v. There were six sons, of whom the first & last born died in infancy; the second attained twenty-one, & succeeded his father in the title, but died without issue; the third & fourth born attained twenty-one & died without issue; the fifth born attained twenty-one & succeeded his brother in the title:—Held: the second son was the "eldest son" within the meaning of the settlement, & as such to be excluded from participation in the settled fund.—Re RIVERS'S SETTLEMENT TRUST (1870), 40 L. J. Ch. 87; 24 L. T. 253; 19 W. R. 318.

156. ———.—By a marriage settlement made in 1861 real estate was limited to uses under which A. became tenant for life with remainder to his first & other sons in strict settlement. On the same day was executed a settlement of personality by which it was declared that after the death of A. & his intended wife the trustees should stand possessed of the trust funds in trust for the children of the marriage "other than an eldest or only son or other son who before attaining the age of twenty-one years shall be or become the heir male or heir male apparent of" A. as A. & his wife should appoint. Each of the settlements was made in consideration of the marriage, but neither of them contained any express reference to the other. A. had five children, a son W., who attained twenty-one, disentailed & resettled the estate, & died a bachelor in 1899; a son V., who attained twenty-one, became eldest son on the death of W., & took a life interest under the resettlement; B., who died an infant; & two others who were still living. A. died in 1910, & V. thereupon became entitled to the settled real estate for his life:—Held: the two settlements must be read together, but V. was not excluded from a share in the settled personality.

I think it is equally clear that, in considering whether children who are in fact younger children have become eldest sons, the ct. will not hold that a child who does not take the bulk of the estate has become an eldest son within the meaning of the clause though at the time of the distribution he is in fact the eldest child (PARKER, J.).—Re WROTTESELEY'S SETTLEMENT, *WROTTESELEY v. The marriage took place without a settlement. hands of trustees. No notice was given to the trustees, & no fine was levied. The deed recited the ante-nuptial agreement, but it was proved that there never was any. The effect of the settlement was to give the husband a life estate, with remainder absolutely to the survivor, & there was no provision for children:—Held: both husband & wife desiring it, this deed was a nullity; & as against the husband it was voluntary; & it was not such a settlement as the ct. would enforce against the wife. 189. ——Not recited in post-nuptial settlement.—In 1857 an infant engaged to be married wrote to his intended wife, promising that on coming of age he would give her seven specified houses. The marriage took place in 1859, after he came of age. In 1872 he executed a deed, not referring to any previous agreement, by which he conveyed the above & two other houses to trustees, upon trust for his wife for life, for her separate use, & after her death upon trust for himself for life, & after the death of the survivor, upon such trusts as the wife should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment, in trust for her in fee. He subsequently agreed to sell three of the houses, & the purchaser sued for specific performance:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to specific performance, for as the settlement did not refer to any previous agreement, dealt with other property than that mentioned in the letter of 1857, & settled the property in a different way, there was no ratification in writing of the promise contained in that letter, & the settlement therefore was voluntary, & void as against a purchaser for value.—*TROWELL v. 203. — Marriage.—By a parol ante-nuptial agreement, it was agreed that the husband should take a certain portion of the wife's property, & that the residue should be settled for her separate use. This agreement was carried out so far as related to the husband; but no settlement was made on the wife. The wife subsequently to her marriage filed her bill by her next friend, stating these facts, & praying that her interests in certain property, consisting of real estate coming to her, might be declared accordingly. The husband, by his answer, admitted the statements in the bill. A deed was then prepared, purporting to be a settlement on the wife, in pursuance of the agreement, & giving her a power to dispose of her property by will. This deed, though signed by the wife, was not acknowledged by her. She made a will, disposing of her property in favour of her husband & other parties, & died. The husband then filed a supplemental bill, praying, as against the heir of the wife, that the parol agreement might be carried into effect, that the want of an acknowledgment might, if necessary, be supplied, & that the will of the wife might be established as a valid execution of the power given to her by the deed:—Held: (1) in a suit thus framed there was no case established in point of proof as against the heir; (2) the contract so entered into before marriage, there being nothing but marriage following, could not be carried into effect under Stat. Frauds; (3) the ct. would not supply the want of the acknowledgment, as tending to destroy the protection which the law throws around married women.—*LASSENCÉ v. 204. —.]—A husband executed a post-nuptial settlement of railway stock, the property of the wife, in pursuance of a parol ante-nuptial agreement. The wife had been induced by the husband to marry him before the execution of the settlement, on the representation that the settlement would be as good after as before marriage. The husband was insolvent at the time of the marriage, although he had assured the wife & her family that he was solvent. On bill filed by creditor to set aside the settlement:—Held: the subsequent execution of the settlement was not such a part performance of the parol agreement as would avoid Stat. Frauds.

If marriage were to be held such a part performance as would take the contract out of Stat. Frauds, the effect in all such cases would be to make the statute absolutely ridiculous. It is another case where one of the parties agrees to do something more than marry, as, for instance, to settle an estate (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).—WARDEN v. JONES (1857), 2 De G. & J. 76; 27 L. J. to the husband the title deeds. The husband expended money upon the property:—Held: sufficient part performance to take the case out of Stat. Frauds.

The father paid the instalments which fell due during his lifetime, & at his death there remained a balance of £110, which fell due shortly afterwards:—Held: the verbal promise to give the house having been established, the possession took the case out of Stat. Directly after the marriage, possession of the house was given up by pltf. & was held by the son, & he carried on the business there for his own benefit till his death, which occurred in Apr. 1891. Soon after that event a family disagreement arose, & pltf. brought an action of ejectment to recover possession of the house:—Held: the possession of the house given up to the son, equivalent to part performance, dispensed with the necessity of a writing, & as nothing was said to the contrary, the gift was free from incumbrances.—*SHARMAN v. T., as alleged, made several payments on account of the interest due on the principal sum, but the payments were not regular, & no settlement was ever

In administering the estate of T., C. & her husband claimed to be entitled to a certain sum as the balance of the interest due, but in consequence of dispositions in their favour made by testator in his will, the principal sum was not claimed. £10,000." In the settlement which was afterwards executed before the marriage there was a recital to that effect, but there was no express covenant by the father to make good that sum. On a bill filed by the husband who had survived his wife, against the exor. of the father:—Held: (1) although the settlement, if it stood alone, could not have been rectified, yet that having regard to the arts. & representation made by the father, there was sufficient evidence of mistake to authorise the ct. to make the settlement conformable to the arts., & the estate of the father was bound to make up the portion of his daughter to the stipulated sum.

When a settlement purports to be in pursuance of arts. entered into before marriage & there is any variance then no evidence is necessary in order to have the settlement corrected; & although the settlement contains no reference to the arts. yet if it can be shown that the settlement was intended to be in conformity with the arts. yet if there is clear & satisfactory evidence showing that the discrepancy has arisen from a mistake, the ct. will reform the settlement & make it conformable to the real intention of the parties (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).

(2) The representation of the father, though not afterwards fulfilled, yet being of intention merely & not of fact, did not amount to such a misrepresentation as would entitle the husband to relief in equity on the ground of fraud.

The misrepresentation, to come within the doctrine, must be a misrepresentation at the time it was made. If it is made with the view of inducing a person to act, & such person has acted upon the faith of the representation, then the person making the representation would in equity be bound to fulfil it (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—BOLD v. HUTCHINSON (1855), 5 De G. M. & G. 558; 25 L. J. Ch. 598; 26 L. T. O. S. 229; 2 Jur. N. S. 97; 4 W. R. 3; 43 E. R. 986, L. C.

215. Effect of innocent mistake.—On a treaty of marriage the husband applied to the brother of the wife to know the amount of her fortune & the manner in which it was secured. The brother represented it fairly, as he then conceived it, & as being charged on a real estate under the father's will; & added that the husband need not examine the will or the family deeds, the fact being certainly as he represented. A recital to the same effect was made also in the settlement to which the brother was a party. It afterwards turned out that the father had no power to charge the estate by his will; but this fact was unknown to all the family at the time of the marriage. The representation of the brother under these circumstances will not bind him to make it good.—MERKWEATHER v. SHAW (1789), 2 Cox, Eq. Cas. 124; 30 E. R. 58, L. C.

216. — Common to all parties.—Bill by a husband to have his wife's portion, part of which was invested in stock, made up money, on the ground, either of express contract, or representation, upon which the marriage took place, dismissed: the description by the arts., though generally "the sum of £4,000," referring to that sum as in settlement; & the representation under circumstances not amounting to a warranty; & proceeding upon a common mistake.—*AINSLIE v. The husband settled £5,000 part of the £7,000, but the assets proved insufficient to pay even the £5,000:—Held: this was not a representation which the husband was bound to make good, & the deficiency did not constitute a debt payable out of his assets.

The facts are fairly stated, the mistake was common, & every one had a like opportunity to discover the mistake. It appears to me that this is exactly the case of Ainslie v. Medlycott, No. 216, ante (ROMILLY, M.R.).—EVANS v. WYATT (1862), 31 Beav. 217; 7 L. T. 86; 8 Jur. N. S. 499; 10 W. R. 813; 54 E. R. 1121.

Upon the completion of her education, P. who had returned to England, sent her back to India, & on that occasion he wrote to a particular friend, to whose guardianship & charge he confided her, "In regard to her settlement in life I shall be naturally anxious." "You may assure the young gentleman she may choose that, on his marriage with her, he shall have £2,000 sterling, nor will that be all; she is & shall be noticed in my will, but to what further amount I cannot say, owing to the present reduced, & reducing state of interest, which puts it out of my power to determine at present what I may have to dispose of." H. having made proposals of marriage, was informed of the letter written by P., & also of the will he had made, & after some negotiations the marriage was solemnised in 1826, & in 1829 H. & his wife returned to England. In the same year P., who was a domiciled Scotchman, executed, in Edinburgh, another will, by which he gave all his real & personal property for the benefit of his wife & his two sons by her, & in case of their dying without issue, he gave the whole to the issue of his daughter. P. died in 1831 without having made any provision for his daughter, leaving the will made by him in India in the state it was when he executed it; & upon a bill filed by his daughter, insisting that testator had contracted to settle a lakh of rupees upon her, & that the contract was contained in the letter written by him:—Held: in construing contracts, the ct. must ascertain the real meaning of the words used; when no definite or specific sum was mentioned or referred to, the ct. cannot enforce any contract, testator had not afforded means of reference to any other document; except from the answer of H. there was no evidence that he married on the faith & belief that a lakh of rupees would be settled; & it was not evidence to be acted upon in favour of pltf. against the estate of testator, as previous to marriage it had been pointed out to H. that the letter did not state any precise sum; & testator had left himself unfettered by any contract.—MOORHOUSE v. COLVIN (1851), 15 Beav. 341; 21 L. 226. — — — — — Letters promising to leave property by will.]—On a treaty respecting the marriage of H., who was believed to have considerable expectations from his uncle, E., the guardians of the lady desired a settlement; & H. addressed a letter to E., who answered, "I have made my will, & left you my property in the county of T., which is very considerable." The guardians still refused their consent, "until a suitable settlement shall be made by E. of real estate upon the marriage, in the usual course of settlement, & until the sum of £10,000 shall be secured to the trustees of the estate" of the father of the lady, from whom H. had some time before borrowed that money, in order to become a partner in a bank. The resolution of the trustees was communicated to E., who, in Sept. 1815, wrote, "My sentiments respecting you continue unaltered; however I shall never settle part of my property out of my power while I exist; my will has been made for some time, & I am confident that I shall never alter it to your disadvantage. I have mentioned before, & I again repeat, that my county of Tipperary estate will come to you at my death, unless some unforeseen occurrence should take place. I have never settled anything on any of my nephews, & I should give cause for jealousy if I was to deviate in this instance from a resolution I have long made." This answer was, at the desire of E., communicated to the guardians, who, in Mar. 1816, consented to the proposed marriage, which accordingly took place in July of that year. A settlement was then drawn up, in which it was recited, that "H. has reason to expect that he will, upon the decease of E., become entitled, by virtue of the will of E., to a certain portion of his estate & property, pursuant to the declaration of E., contained in his letter to H. of Sept. 1815." E. was made one of the trustees of the settlement, & about twelve months afterwards, he executed the deed; but there was no evidence that he knew anything of its contents beyond the fact that he was named as one of the trustees. E. afterwards devised his property to other persons:—Held: H. could not maintain a suit to compel the trustees under the will of E. to convey the Tipperary estate to him, for that E.'s letters did not amount to a contract to settle it on him.—MAUNSELL v. WHITE (1854), 4 H. In a subsequent letter, addressed to the mother of the intended husband, the father, after declining then to extract £4,000 from his business, & stating that some years since he had made a will leaving "all my property" in trust for his daughter for life for her separate use, & the principal to be divided as she by her will might ultimately dispose of, he said, "It has been my intention, in the event of the marriage taking place, to make a similar will in accordance with the facts of the case, & of course I should settle my property, subject to my sister's annuity, on my daughter absolutely & independent of her husband; or, in other words, in strict settlement." He further "agreed" to allow his daughter & her husband £100 a year during his life; & added, "I will take care that my property, which, I suspect, will exceed £4,000, shall be properly secured upon her & her children after my death." The marriage having taken place, the father, who was then a widower, afterwards married again, & made a will whereby he devised & bequeathed parts of his property to his wife, & gave several life annuities:—Upon bill by the daughter, claiming to have all the property of which testator died seised or possessed settled upon her in strict settlement:—Held: the above expressions of intention on the part of testator amounted to a contract to settle the whole of the property of which he should die seised or possessed upon pltf. in strict settlement.—COVERDALE v. EASTWOOD (1872), L. R. 15 Eq. 121; 42 L. J. Ch. 118; 27 L. T. 646; 37 J. P. 212; 21 W. R. 216.

229. ————J.—P., shortly before his marriage with pltf., wrote her a letter, in which occurred the following passage: "& now, my dearest Lizzie, as life is very uncertain at my time of life, & as you are of all the world the person I love best, I hereby will & bequeath to you, after my death, the eight cottages in Peckham's-walk, occupied by C. & E. & others. You will keep this letter as a proof of my intention, in case of any sudden change occurring to me rendering me incapable of, or not in a state of mind fit for, the performance of so important a document, & making null & void any former will, & bequest I may have made previously. I am doing this, my dearest, as a temporary provision for you in case of any emergency. . . . I am your future husband in its most holy sense.—P." Another part of the will contained a reference to the wedding ring, of which pltf. then apparently had the custody. After the marriage P. died, leaving a will, whereof defts.

were exors. & trustees. By this will the eight cottages were not left to pltf. Pltf. claimed a declaration that P. duly contracted with her to leave to or settle upon her the eight cottages, & that by virtue of the letter pltf. was entitled to them in equity:—Held: no contract had been intended; the writer had mistakenly thought that he was making a gift.—VINCENT v. VINCENT (1887), 56 L. T. 243; 3 T. L. R. 398, C. A.

230. ————J.—In 1873, a father, prior to the marriage of his daughter, in a letter to her intended husband stated: "You are of course aware that with my large family E. will have little fortune. She will have a share of what I leave after the death of her mother, who I wish to leave in comfortable independence if I should leave her a widow." The intended husband accepted the letter as giving him some rights, & the marriage took place. The father afterwards acquired a large fortune, & died in 1898. His wife predeceased him. By his will he left a legacy of £2,000 to the daughter, & gave the residue of his estate equally between six of his other seven children. The daughter & her husband claimed by virtue of the letter to be entitled to an equal eighth share of the father's estate:—Held: the letter did not constitute a contract by the father, but was merely an expression of his intentions.—Re FICKUS, FARINA v. FICKUS, [1900] 1 Ch. 331; 69 L. J. Ch. 161; 81 L. T. 749; 48 W. R. 250; 44 Sol. Jo. 157.

231. ————Representations intended to influence the conduct of another.—A representation made by one party for the purpose of influencing the conduct of another, & acted on by him, will in general be sufficient to entitle him to the assistance of a ct. of equity, for the purpose of realising such representation; & so in proposals of marriage: if the parent, or his agent deliberately holds out inducements to the suitor to celebrate the marriage, & he consents & celebrates it, believing it was intended that he should have the benefits so held out to him, a ct. of equity will give effect to the proposals.

Proposals of marriage written by the lady's brothers, acting by her father's authority, stated that "Mr. J. P. T., the father, also intends to leave a further sum of £10,000 in his will to Miss T. to be settled on her & her children, the disposition of which, supposing she has no children, will be prescribed by the will of her father. These are the bases of the arrangement, subject, of course, to revision; but they will be sufficient for B. to act upon." B., upon receiving the proposals, provided a jointure as required by them for his intended wife, & then married her. In the settlement, afterwards executed, there was no mention of this sum of £10,000; & it was not left by J. P. T. in his will:—Held: his estate was liable to the payment of the £10,000 with interest from the end of one year after his death.—HAMMERSLEY v. DE BIEL (1845), 12 Cl. & Fin. 45; 8 E. R. 1312, H. 232. ——— Necessity for clear proof.]—

Where the evidence with sufficient certainty proved that declarations & representations were actually made by a father to the intended husband, deft. W., & to other persons, previously to, & in contemplation of, & subsequent to the marriage of his natural daughter to deft. W., & that the marriage was contracted in a confidence in such representations, that he had irrevocably settled or intended to settle the E. estate, & a sum of sicca rupees, as a provision for, & which would upon his death become the property of, his reputed daughter & her children: & where there was evidence, parol & documentary, that certain documents, purporting to settle the estate & sicca rupees, were executed by the settlor, but there was a total want of evidence as to the contents or effect of such documents, the ct. gave effect to the representations by declaring that plfts., the children of the marriage, were entitled to the estate & the sicca rupees as tenants in common absolutely.

It is essential in such a case that there should also be perfect or reasonable certainty as to the amount & nature of the property to which the representations apply.—PROLE v. SOADY (1859), 2 Giff. 1; 29 L. J. Ch. 721; 1 L. T. 309; 5 Jur. N. S. 1382; 8 W. R. 131; 66 E. R. 1.

Pltf.'s mother accepted deft.'s proposals, & a marriage took place without the knowledge of pltf.'s mother, & without a settlement having been made of pltf.'s property. A. on the marriage of his daughter promised in writing that neither he nor his wife would exercise the power & on the faith of which promise the daughter's share in the fund in default of appointment was settled; but subsequently A. & B. did execute the power:—Held: a child of the daughter's marriage who was prejudiced by the appointment was entitled after her mother's death to have the appointment set aside although her claim was paramount to her mother's settlement.—*WALFORD v. In an action to recover damages for breach of contract:—Held: (1) as deft. had put it out of his power to perform the contract there had been a breach, in respect of which pltf. had an immediate right of action to recover damages, & the measure of such damages was the value of the possible life estate to which pltf. would be entitled if she survived deft.; (2) where a proposal in writing to leave property by will, made to induce a marriage, is accepted, & the marriage takes place on the faith of it, if the proposal relates to a defined piece of real property the ct. has power to decree a conveyance of that property after the death of the person making the proposal against all who claim under him as volunteers.—*SYNGE v. T. made no settlement, & his wife died in A.'s life, leaving children. A. died, having made another will, whereby he left all his property to H., another daughter. Upon a claim by T. & his children to a third share of A.'s estate:—Held: the letter constituted only a conditional contract, & T. not having performed his part of the contract it was not binding, & in any event the letter was too vague to be enforced as a contract, & the claim was disallowed.—*Re ALLEN, HINCKS v. It is, however, of equal importance, that this should not be carried to the extent, that, whenever anything occurs in general treaty, not entering into particulars, or showing that the marriage actually took place upon such representation, that principle is to be applied to a case, to which it has no application, & was never intended to be applied (LORD ELDON, C.).—*DE MANNEVILLE v. A husband & wife alleged that, on their marriage, the wife's father stated in a letter, which, however, they stated had been destroyed, "that he could do no more for her than he had done, & that he had settled his W. estate upon her." He had, in fact, previously settled that estate on her, but subject to a prior charge of £5,000. They sought to have the representation made good by payment of the £5,000 out of the father's estate. The court doubted whether the principle applied to such a representation, & also whether the marriage took place on the faith of it, & refused relief.

Qu.: whether the notice of the existence of the settlement in this case was not notice of its contents.

(2) The owner of an estate voluntarily charged it with his own simple contract debt, & by the same deed, settled the estate, subject thereto, on himself for life, with remainder to his daughter. He afterwards paid off the debt, but declared that the charge should continue for the benefit of his personal estate. After his death:—Held: the charge still subsisted & must be raised & paid.

B. took this document to C., who thereupon consented to the marriage of her daughter with B., such consent having hitherto been withheld on the ground of B.'s want of means. The marriage took place, but no settlement was made by B. on his wife. A. died about six months after signing the paper, having paid B. the first quarter of the allowance of £500 a year. Effect of subsequent settlement—Previous promise by letter.]—(1) A father, prior to the marriage of his daughter, in a correspondence with her intended husband, stated that all his property would be equally divided amongst his children at his decease; but in a settlement executed prior to the marriage there was no expression of any such intention:—Held: all that was intended to be binding on the father was embodied in the settlement.

(2) "The deed of settlement raises a presumption that it constituted or expressed the whole of the marriage contract so far as property was concerned; a presumption capable certainly of being rebutted or displaced by evidence sufficient for the purpose" (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.).—*LOXLEY v. 269. —. —.].—Upon negotiations taking place previous to a marriage, the father of the lady wrote to the gentleman's father in these words: "When my eldest daughter married, I gave her £1,000 settled on herself, with a promise of sharing with my other daughters what I may be able hereafter to leave them; & this I can do for A.," the intended bride. A settlement was then prepared in the Scotch form, & executed, whereby the father assigned £1,000 to trustees for his daughter, & also all other means & estate whatsoever which she would be entitled to succeed to on his death. The father afterwards transferred a sum of £3,333 to the trustees of his daughter A.'s settlement, & he made his will, whereby he gave more property to his other daughters than to A. Upon a bill filed by the daughter & her husband claiming to be entitled to an equal share with the other children of testator:—Held: the settlement was a final instrument, & the estate of the father could not be bound by his letter, & the daughter had no right to come upon his assets for an equal share with his other children.—SANDS v. SODEN (1862), 31 L. J. Ch. 870; 10 W. R. 765.

270. —. —.].—The father of a lady wrote to her intended husband that he & his wife had determined to settle on their daughter £2,000, & that in addition she would have £2,000 on her mother's death, & at least as much on her father's death. Eleven months afterwards the marriage took place; & on that occasion a formal agreement for a settlement of £2,000 was executed, the letter not being in any way referred to. The mother died sixteen years & the father died twenty-five years after the marriage. The husband then claimed from the father's estate £4,000 under the promises contained in the letter:—Held: the letter had, under the circumstances, been superseded by the agreement for a settlement.—Re BADCOCK, KINGDON v. TAGERT (1880), 17 Ch. D. 361; 43 L. T. 688; 29 W. R. 278.

271. — Ante-nuptial agreement.]—A post-nuptial settlement of money recited an ante-nuptial contract. By the settlement, those children who survived their parents alone took, but by the contract, as recited, all the children took vested interests at their birth. The recital being the only proof of the contract:—Held: the ct. must act on the settlement.—MIGNAM v. PARRY (1862), 31 Beav. 211; 31 L. J. Ch. 819; 7 L. T. 88; 8 Jur. N. S. 634; 10 W. 277. — — —.]—The cases establish that in carrying marriage arts. into effect the ct. does not confine its view to the strict words of the arts. but seeks to effectuate the intention of the parties. Is this, then, such a settlement as the husband agreed to make? His contract was to settle the property on the wife & her children, & though it is to be settled in such way & manner as the trustees may think proper yet their discretion is not as to who shall be the objects of the settlement but as to the manner & way in which the persons who are marked out as the objects of it shall take. Now, by the settlement a great part of the property is in immediate advancement to the husband, & another considerable part of it he takes absolutely upon an event which has happened. 313. — Covenant to settle on issue.]—A covenant in marriage arts. to settle an estate, after the payment of an annuity to the intended wife, “upon his issue” by the intended wife, must be construed as a covenant for strict settlement, & excludes the husband from creating charges in favour of younger children.

By arts. of marriage it was recited that the intended husband had received a sum of £600 from J., his intended wife, & he covenanted to settle upon her an annuity of £60 for her life, to commence from his death, charged upon his lands, with the ordinary powers of distress & entry, & to settle the residue & remainder of his lands “upon his issue by” J., his intended wife. There were several children of the marriage. Some years after the marriage he executed a deed by which he charged on his lands various sums of money in favour of younger children, devising the lands themselves to his eldest son, & his other sons successively in tail male:—Held: this deed creating these charges was void, for the covenant in the arts. gave him no power to charge the lands for the benefit of the younger children, & must be interpreted to mean that he would settle the lands in the ordinary form of strict settlement.—GRIER v. GRIER (1872), L. R. 5 H. L. 688, H. L.

to secure to her & her children by C., her intended husband, a share of his real estate equal to that of any other of his daughters. A. died without having made any settlement:—Held: B. was entitled to an estate for life, remainder to her first & other sons in tail, remainder to her daughters in tail.

314 i. Right of children to take as tenants in common.]—On articles previous to the marriage of W. with H. the father of W. “bound the whole of the farm of, etc. as a dowry or marriage portion to his son W. along certain hereditaments £800, & should invest same in the names of trustees at interest upon govt. or real securities "upon trusts to be declared for the benefit of J., for her life, with remainder to her children, & as to J. to & for her separate use, & with all the powers for changing the security, & for maintenance, & other powers & trusts which are usually inserted in a money settlement of the like nature." No subsequent declaration of trust of the £800 was ever made:—Held: the deed was executory only, & the settlement so directed ought to have limited the £800, after the death of J., amongst her children as tenants in common, & not as joint tenants.—MAYN v. MAYN (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 150; 17 L. T. 439.

315. Meaning of "issue"—Includes female.]—The bill was brought by the daughter & only child of the first marriage of J. for a specific performance of arts. previous thereto, insisting she ought to be tenant in tail of the lands therein mentioned. Issue in the arts. means female as well as male, & consequently plff. is entitled to have a settlement of these lands in tail, & when deft., the son of the second marriage, comes of age, he must convey to her.—HART v. MIDDLEHURST (1746), 3 Atk. 371; 26 E. R. 1014, L. C.

316. —"Issue male"—Not son of daughter.]—In marriage arts. in 1802, which were to be, but never were, followed by a formal settlement, two separate estates, one belonging to the intended husband, the other to the intended wife, were included. Both were vested in trustees, in trust to permit the husband & wife to receive the profits during life, & as to her portion, should she survive her husband, "to such of her issue male by her said husband as she may, by her last will & testament, notwithstanding her coverture, direct, limit, or appoint"; & in case of no appointment, to the "issue male" of the husband & wife; & in case of no issue male, then to go amongst her daughters: " & in case of failure of issue male or female then to go to such person or persons" as she should appoint. There were two children of the marriage, a son & a daughter. The wife survived the husband many years, & made a will, which, reciting the power reserved to her by the arts., appointed her property to her grandson, the son of her daughter, describing him as "issue male" of her marriage:—Held: the arts. were executory; & if in accordance with them a settlement had been executed, the estate would have been put in strict settlement; & the power reserved by them was not well exercised; the grandson, the son of a daughter, not coming within the description of "issue male" therein contained.—*LAMBERT v. Reservation by settlor of power to charge—Parties without notice of existing incumbrances—Priorities.]—A. by arts. previous to the marriage of his daughter agrees to settle several real estates to certain uses, but reserves to himself a power of charging them with £30,000 to pay his debts. He had previously mortgaged those estates for £27,000, but it did not appear that that fact was disclosed to all the parties at the time of executing the arts. On a question, whether the £30,000 should be raised over & above the prior incumbrances:—Held: those prior incumbrances should be paid out of the £30,000; & A. should have the residue, after paying the costs of the suit.—*INCHQUIN (EARL) v. 319. Construction according to intention—Provision for remainder to sons in tail—Intention to settle in tail male.]—(1) Arts. executed before a marriage, having stipulated that estates should be limited to the first & other sons of the marriage in tail, but it being proved that the intention was to limit the estates to the first & other sons in tail male, the ct., after the marriage had taken place, directed that, in the settlement to be executed in pursuance of the arts., limitations to the first & other sons in tail male should be inserted.

(2) A power was reserved, in arts. before marriage, to husband & wife to alter & vary the provisions & terms of the arts. in such manner as to them should seem fit, previous to the execution of the settlement:—Held: not to authorise the insertion in the settlement of a power enabling the husband to jointure a future wife, or to charge portions for younger children of a future marriage.

(3) A stipulation was made in arts. before marriage that the intended settlement, which related to estates in Ireland, should contain all the covenants, provisions, & conditions usually contained in marriage settlements made in England:—Held: to authorise the insertion of a power of sale & exchange under which lands in England might be taken in exchange for lands in Ireland.

D. Settlements of Personality.

321. Usual form of settlement.—Of wife's personal estate.]—Ante-nuptial arts. were signed which provided for the wife's personal estate being vested in trustees, "the trusts of the income being for the benefit of the husband & wife during their lives, & the trusts of the capital being for & amongst the children according to the appointment of the husband & wife, or the survivor of them; & in default of appointment, to the children equally; & in the event of there being no children, & of the husband being the survivor, the trust property to be at his absolute disposal." After the marriage a settlement was executed which limited the income to the husband & wife during their joint lives, & to the survivor of them during his or her life, & then gave the capital to the children absolutely as tenants in common; but if there was no child, & the husband survived the wife, then to the husband. There was only one child of the marriage, & he died at the age of six months in the lifetime of the parents. The husband died in the lifetime of the wife:—Held: the capital of the fund & the arrears of income at the death of the husband belonged to the wife, for the ct. would have carried the arts. into effect by giving the wife the first life estate to her separate use, & by making the shares of sons contingent on their attaining twenty-one & of daughters on their attaining twenty-one or marrying, or by inserting clauses of survivorship & accruer on the death of sons under twenty-one, & of daughters under that age & unmarried, so that the husband would have had no title as next of kin of his deceased infant child, & the settlement must be rectified accordingly.—COGAN v. DUFFIELD (1876), 2 Ch. D. 44; 45 L. J. Ch. 307; 34 L. T. 593; 24 W. R. 905, C. A.

322. Provision for husband to settle personal estate—Real estate purchased with personal.—To be construed as personal.]—Arts. before marriage for settling real estates of the husband & also all & singular his personal estate of what nature or kind soever; a proper execution would be by a covenant, that real estate, that should be purchased with the personal, should with respect to the objects of the settlement be considered personal; the settlement therefore, made after marriage, containing no such covenant, & being in other respects a defective execution, real estates purchased by the husband, according to the evidence in order to defeat the right of his wife, were decreed to be conveyed by his devisee according to the arts.

If a formal deed was executed before marriage, containing such a covenant, it is impossible, that I could do anything with it. But an art. is only the head & minute of an agreement, not to be followed literally (LORD LOUGHBOROUGH, C.).—RANDALL v. WILLIS (1800), 5 Ves. 262; 31 E. R. 577.

She had accumulated much personal property, the savings of her income. unmarried," he being entitled, as husband, to a life interest, if surviving, in the stock bequeathed by the father's will. The intended husband drew two documents, in very obscure language, in one of which he bound himself to consent to her "disposition of a sum of £2,000 out of whatever funds or dividends she" should be "entitled to, be possessed of, or have legally acquired at the time of her decease." The marriage took place, & was kept secret from the son until the wife's decease, she continuing the use of her vidual name, which took place in about six months, without her having made any disposition of her savings, leaving her son sole next-of-kin. After her decease the husband filed a bill against the trustee of the fund settled by the father of the lady for payment of the life interest, & the son filed a bill against the husband praying, amongst other things, a declaration that, as next-of-kin, he was entitled to the savings of his mother's income. The validity of the marriage was conclusively established, before the final hearing of the two suits, by a ct. of competent jurisdiction:—Held: the correspondence showed that the lady implicitly relied upon the skill & integrity of the intended husband to prepare instruments to carry her wishes into effect; those wishes were proved to be that her property should be so settled as that she should dispose of it as if unmarried; the ct. would have given her a life estate, with power of appointment, & in default for her next-of-kin, to the exclusion of the husband, & no such settlement having been prepared, as it was the duty of the husband to have prepared, the husband could take no more than the life interest under his wife's father's will, & the son was entitled to the whole of his mother's savings.—*CORLEY v. A. Insertion of Usual Powers and Provisions.

326. What may be inserted in settlement—All powers tending to better enjoyment of estate.—By marriage arts. it was agreed that estates should be settled in strict settlement, & that there should be contained in the settlement powers to the husband to charge the estates, by way of mtge., with a certain sum, & also to charge the estates with another sum for younger children, & to create terms for raising those sums, & likewise all other powers, etc., usually inserted in settlements of the like nature, & which should be proper for effecting any of the purposes aforesaid:—Held: a power of sale & exchange might be introduced into the settlement.

My opinion . . . is that the person who prepared these arts., intended that any usual power, provision, clause, covenant or agreement that would tend to the better enjoyment of the estates, should be inserted in the settlement, or, in other words that the clause in question should be taken as if it stood thus: " & likewise all other powers, provisions, clauses, covenants & agreements which shall be proper for effectuating any of the purposes aforesaid, & which are usually inserted in settlements of the like nature," which would include everything (SHADWELL, V.-C.).—HILL v. HILL (1834), 6 Sim. 136; 58 E. R. 545.

327. What are usual powers—Power of sale & exchange.—Powers of sale & exchange, inserted in a settlement under a clause in arts. for all usual powers.

Powers of selling, exchanging & investing in new purchases, usual.—PEAKE v. PENNINGTON (1813), 2 Ves. & B. 311; 35 E. R. 337.

331. ————.—A marriage contract, in the Portuguese language, between British subjects resident in Lisbon, expressed that the parties were desirous that it should be regulated, made binding & carried into full & complete effect according to the laws of England. Some years afterwards the parties, who were then resident in England, filed a bill, praying that a settlement in strict conformity with the contract & containing all the covenants, clauses, powers, etc., usually inserted in marriage settlements & deemed necessary, & at the same time, consistent with the substance of the contract, might be executed under the decree of the ct.:—Held: a power to appoint new trustees as often as should be necessary, & notwithstanding the contract provided that the settled moneys should be invested, as they had been, in the English & French funds, a power to change those securities for any other of the govt. stocks or funds of England or France or for real securities in Great Britain or Ireland, were proper powers to be inserted in the settlement.—*SAMPAYO v. as the survivor should appoint; & in default of any appointment, in trust for all the children who should attain twenty-one in equal shares. There were only two children who attained twenty-one. One of them, C., by an ante nuptial agreement, agreed to settle "all her half or other share & interest whatsoever" in the property subject to the trusts of the original settlement. The agreement provided that the settlement should contain certain specified provisions, & generally such other agreements clauses, & provisions as were "usually inserted in settlements of a like kind." M. & his wife, who predeceased him, made no joint appointment under the deed of 1854, but by his will, in exercise of his power, he appointed the sum of £2,000 to C. absolutely:—Held: a covenant to settle after-acquired property was not a "usual" clause in settlements of a like kind with that to be executed in accordance with the agreement for a settlement & the £2,000 was not bound by the agreement.—*Re MADDY'S ESTATE, MADDY v. SUB-SECT. 3.—COVENANTS TO LEAVE PROPERTY BY WILL.

A. Covenant to leave Share.

(a) In General.

See, generally, WILLS.

341. "One full fourth part"—Fourth in value not in specie.]—A father, on the marriage of his son, covenanted with trustees to bequeath one full fourth part of all his real & personal estate, after payment of his debts, to the trustees of the marriage settlement, who were to sell & convert same into money & stand possessed of the proceeds upon the trusts of the settlement. After the father's death, in a suit to administer his estate:—Held: the covenant meant a fourth in value & not a fourth in specie.—BELL v. CLARKE (1858), 25 Beav. 437; 27 L. J. Ch. 674; 31 L. T. O. S. 324; 4 Jur. N. S. 490; 6 W. R. 476; 53 E. R. 703.

Annotation:—Reid, Patch v. Shore (1862), 11 W. R. 142.

342. "Equal share"—Advances to other children—In lifetime of covenantor.]—P., on his daughter's marriage, settled a sum of money on her & her husband & their issue; &, after reciting that he had agreed to make a further provision for his daughter, equal to his other younger children, covenanted to settle, by his will or otherwise, on the husband & wife & their issue, as great a share of his property as he should, by his will or otherwise, provide for any of his other younger children, to take effect on the death of the survivor of himself & his wife; & if he died intestate, or omitted to make such provision, that his exors. should pay to the trustees as great a share of his property as any of his younger children should, in that event, become entitled to:—Held: the trustees had a claim upon the exors. in respect of subsequent advancements by the settlor to his other younger children in his lifetime, & not merely for a provision equal to that which any of the other children became entitled to at his death.—WILLIS v. BLACK (1828), 4 Russ. 170; 7 L. J. O. S. Ch. 3; 38 E. R. 769, L. C.

344. — Bankruptcy of settlor.]—By a settlement, in the Scottish form, made upon the marriage of a Scotsman, domiciled in Scotland, with an Englishwoman, the husband covenanted to pay after his death an annuity to his widow & portions to his children, for which causes the wife assigned her real & personal estate "to & in favour of her husband, in conjunct fee & liferent & the children of the marriage, whom failing, the wife, her heirs, & assigns." For some years after the solemnisation of the marriage the husband & wife continued domiciled in Scotland, the wife in the meantime becoming entitled under her father's will to a share in the corpus of his personal estate. They then changed their domicile to England, after which the trustee of the will of the wife's father paid part of the wife's portion of testator's estate to the husband upon the joint receipt of the husband & wife:—Held: the husband having become are proper to be introduced in a settlement in pursuance of articles directing "usual & proper clauses." So are clauses of survivorship & accruer, if the intent appears to be that no part of the property shall go over, unless all goes over.—ROCHE v. ROCHE (1845), 8 I. Eq. R. 714.—IR.

k. Covenant for gift to daughter on marriage & to leave her one-fourth share of estate—Advance to husband before marriage charged to husband & wife—Set-off of advance against wife's share.]—A father, before his daughter's marriage, in 1857, wrote a letter to her intended husband, saying he would give her £2,500 when she came of age,

& one-fourth of his residuary estate at his death. In 1858, & before she came of age, the father advanced money to the husband, for which he took his note, but which he charged in his ledger to the joint account of the husband & wife, & intended, if the same was not repaid, to set off the amount against his daughter's share of his estate:—Held: in a suit by the wife in the husband's lifetime for the administration of the estate, that the exors. had a right to set off the advance against the wife's share.—TORRANCE v. CHEWETT (1866), 13 Gr. 407.—CAN.

bkpt. before the filing of the bill, & the effect of the settlement, interpreted according to the Scottish law, being to give him a life interest in the fund, with remainder to his wife absolutely, his life interest could not be impounded to secure the performance of his covenant to pay the annuity & portions.—DUNCAN v. CANNAN (No. 2) (1855), 7 De G. M. & G. 78; 24 L. J. Ch. 460; 25 L. T. O. S. 2; 1 Jur. N. S. 291; 3 W. R. 318; 44 E. R. 31, L. J. J.

345. — Election.]—Settlor on the marriage of his daughter, covenanted that, immediately after his death, a share, which in the event became one-third of all & singular his real & personal estate should be settled for the benefit of the daughter, her husband & their children, in equal shares. One of the four children of the marriage, a daughter, died in the settlor's lifetime leaving a husband who also died in the settlor's lifetime & two infant children who survived the settlor. Settlor made a will whereby after directing payment of his debts he disposed of personal chattels, gave a number of legacies & amongst others a legacy of £4,500 & part of the residue of his estate, to his nephews & nieces & his two infant great grandchildren above-mentioned in equal shares:—Held: the liability under the covenant was not a debt to be paid before the division of residue, & the infants were bound to elect between the benefits under the settlement & under the will.—BENNETT v. HOULDSWORTH (1877), 6 Ch. D. 671; 46 L. J. Ch. 646; 36 L. T. 648.

Annotation:—Folld. Re Vernon, Garland v. Shaw (1906), 95 L. T. 18.

346. — —.]—V. on the marriage of his daughter covenanted with the trustees of her settlement that his heirs, exors., & administrators would, within twelve calendar months after his decease or that of his wife, pay to them a share, which ultimately became one-sixth, ascertained by the number of his children, of his real & personal estate upon trusts for his daughter for life for her separate use without power of anticipation, then to her husband J. for life, & subject to a joint power of appointment among their issue, & in default of such appointment as the survivor should appoint, to the children of the marriage at twenty-one or marriage. The settlement contained an agreement & declaration that any share passing to the daughter under her father's will should, if she elected to claim under the will, be a satisfaction of the covenant. The father subsequently made a will whereby he confirmed the covenant in the settlement, & after a trust for payment of his debts, directed his trustees to stand possessed of an equal share of his residuary estate upon trust for his daughter for life, & then for her children at twenty-one or marriage, in default of children for any husband of his daughter for life & subject thereto such share to fall into residue. The daughter having elected against the will, the question arose whether her husband & children could claim under the will & as to their rights having regard to the provisions of the settlement & will:—Held: the liability under the covenant in the settlement was not a debt to be deducted before ascertaining the testator's residue.—Re VERNON, GARLAND v. SHAW (1906), 95 L. T. 48.

Annotation:—Refd. Re Cooper, Townend v. Townend (1917), 86 L. J. Ch. 507.

347. Position of covenantee—On performance of covenant—Position of ordinary legatee.]—A person who has covenanted to bequeath or otherwise provide that a share of his estate shall go to the covenantee fulfils his covenant by bequeathing the share to the covenantee, who then stands in the same position as any other legatee.—*JERVIS v. 348. Liability to lapse.]—NEEDHAM v. SMITH, No. 363, post.

349. —.]—A father, on the marriage of his daughter, covenanted that if she should survive him or leave any child, children, or issue, he would by will, give & devise, or otherwise effectually settle & assure to trustees, a share equal with his other children of the property he should have at his death to the uses therein mentioned, being uses for the benefit of the husband & wife & the children of the marriage, with a clause of survivorship & accruer in the event of children dying under twenty-one & without issue. Some years afterwards the father made a will, giving property to trustees upon the trusts therein declared, the limitations being in substance the same as those set out in the arts. The children of the marriage all died without issue in the lifetime of the covenantor, one of them only having attained twenty-one. The wife survived her father:—Held: the representatives of the child who attained twenty-one were not entitled to anything, for the covenantor was at liberty to make a settlement either by deed or will & he was not bound by the covenant so to frame his will as to guard the child's interest from lapse.—Re BROOKMAN'S TRUST (1869), 5 Ch. Testator, by his will, devised his P. estate to trustees for sale for payment of his debts, the trustees of that estate being also his exors., & he devised his D. estate to which he was entitled in remainder expectant on the death of F., who died in 1860, to trustees upon trust for T. for life, with remainders over. T. mortgaged his equitable life interest in 1863, the £3,000 not having been paid, though interest thereon had been paid down to 1849 by the exors. & trustees of the P. estate, the trustees of the son's marriage settlement instituted a suit for the purpose of having that sum, with interest, raised by sale or mtge. of the D. estate.—Held: the covenant was not a conditional, but an absolute covenant; at the end of three months after testator's death the £3,000 became demandable by the trustees under the covenant; & such demand then became a debt against the devisee of the estate under the statute against fraudulent devises.—*COOPE v. E. Dispositions Defeating Covenant.

360. General rule—Right of covenantor to dispose inter vivos.—Covenant by a father to give or leave by his will all his personal estate equally among his children does not deprive him of the right of unlimited expense, & of any fair application, even by gift, if absolute, & bonâ fide; but a disposition for the purpose of defeating the covenant cannot stand, therefore transfers of stock to one of the children by the father were upon the circumstance of a reservation of the dividends for his life & other evidence of a partial intention, to elude the covenant, set aside.—JONES v. MARTIN (1798), 5 Ves. 266, n.; 6 Bro. Parl. Cas. 437; 8 Bro. Parl. Cas. App. I. 242; 31 E. R. 582, H. L.

361. — — — — —.]—Father under covenant for an equal division at his death of all the property he should die seised or possessed of between his two daughters or their families, though he retains the power of free disposition by act in his life, cannot defeat the covenant by a disposition in effect testamentary; as by reserving to himself an interest for life.—FORTESCUE v. HENNAH (1812), 19 Ves. 67; 34 E. R. 443.

363. — — — — —.]—By covenant in a marriage settlement, the husband was bound to give by his last will or otherwise, to his children in equal shares all his real estates, other than a settled estate, & personal property.—Held: (1) the covenant bound only such real estate as he should die seised of; (2) the covenant bound shares of the settled estate, which the husband became entitled to by devise from a child, who died in his lifetime; (3) children living at the death of the husband were alone entitled to the benefit of the covenant.—NEEDHAM v. SMITH (1828), 4 Russ. 318; 6 L. J. O. S. Ch. 107; 38 E. R. 825.

364. Exception to rule—Disposition defeating covenant.—A disposition in fraud of a covenant in marriage arts., to give a fourth part of the covenantor's real & personal estate at the time of his death, rescinded.—GREGOR v. KEMP (1722), 3 Swan. 404; 38 E. R. 926, L. C.

366. — — — — —.]—Interest reserved to covenantor—Life interest.—FORTESCUE v. HENNAH, No. 361, ante.

367. — — — — —.]—A person who has covenanted that a certain share of his estate at his decease shall be settled upon certain trusts cannot, as against the persons entitled under the covenant, convey any portion of his property upon trust for himself for life, & after his decease upon trusts different from those with respect to which the covenant was made.

By the marriage settlement of W. & R., certain property was settled in trust, after the decease of R., for W. for life. By the same indenture G., the father of R., covenanted that one-half of his property, at his decease, should go upon the trusts of the settlement. Shortly before he died, G. by deed conveyed a certain estate upon trust for himself for life, & after his decease to his two daughters in equal shares, for their sole & separate use respectively.—Held: the deed in question was fraudulent & void as against W., & must be set aside in equity.—PHLEPS v. AMCOTT (1809), 21 L. T. 167; 17 W. R. 703.

368. Testamentary disposition defeating covenant—Invalid.—Arts. in marriage to pay £500 with his daughter by such a time, & to secure to her all his real & personal estate when he died; & afterwards he devised all his personal estate to another, which being contrary to the arts., that agreement was decreed to be performed.—HARMORE v. BROOK (1674), Cas. temp. Finch, 183; 2 Rep. Ch. 92; 23 E. R. 101.

369. — — — — —.]—Covenant for interest greater than that bequeathed.—Covenant, in a settlement by A., to bequeath to B., his intended wife, all such goods, chattels, plate, & personal estate, of which A. should die possessed; or that, if he died intestate, B. should take possession, & enjoy all such goods, chattels, plate, & other personal estate, carried the whole personal estate & effects of A., & he could not make any alteration in the quantum of interest of B. therein.—DAVIES v. DAVIES (1831), 1 L. J. Ch. 31.

370. — — — — —.]—Covenant amounting only to provision against intestacy.—A covenant to settle on particular persons all the covenantor's personal estate, subject only, nevertheless, & without prejudice to any other dispositions, qualifications, or changes, which he should make by his will or concerning the same or any part thereof, is only a provision for a case of intestacy, & does not prevent the covenantor from bequeathing the whole of his personal estate to other persons.—STOCKEN v. STOCKEN (1838), 4 My. & Cr. 95; 7 L. J. Ch. 305; 2 Jur. 693; 41 E. R. 38, L. C.

372. Death of covenantor before settlement—Contract binding on heir.—LANGTON v. NORTH (1683), 2 Rep. Ch. 271; 21 E. R. 676.

373. Remarriage of covenantor before settlement—Different settlement made on remarriage—Original covenant binding.—C. by arts. on his marriage with his first wife, covenanted that all the lands which he should purchase during her life, should descend to, or be settled upon the heirs male of her body by him begotten. No settlement was made pursuant to these articles; but C. upon his marriage with a second wife, settled his estate to different uses.—Held: the eldest & only son of the first marriage was entitled to a specific performance of these arts., & a conveyance was decreed accordingly.—CUSACK v. CUSACK (1714), 5 Bro. Parl. Cas. 116; 2 E. R. 570, H. L.

Annotation:—Refd. Robinson v. Harcastle (1788), 2 Term Rep. 241.

374. Covenant to settle lands of specified value—No purchase made by covenantor—Liability of estate for equivalent value—Payable to party entitled.]—A. covenants by marriage arts. that the estate agreed to be settled is worth £500 per annum clear of all incumbrances; & also to purchase other lands of £300 per annum & settle them to the same uses. The new purchase was never made, & the estate settled was incumbered beyond its value:—Held: out of the purchase-money of A.'s estate not settled, so much shall be paid to the eldest son, as is equivalent in value to £800 per annum computed at twenty-two year's purchase.—BARKER v. IVERS (1724), 5 Bro. Parl. Cas. 127; 2 E. R. 578, H. L.

375. ——— To be laid out in purchase of land.]—Covenant by husband, in consideration of the purchase-money of an estate of the wife, within two years to convey lands in the county of N. of the value of such purchase-money, by way of settlement. The husband having died without performing the covenant, performance of the same decreed, against his representatives, by laying out in the purchase of land so to be settled, a sum equal to the present value of estates in N., which, at the time when the covenant ought to have been performed, would have been worth the amount of the purchase-money, with interest at 4 per cent. from the death of the covenantor.—SUFFIELD (DOWAGER LADY) v. SUFFIELD (LORD) (1812), 3 Mer. App. 699; 36 E. R. 268.

376. ——— Covenant enforced.]—Covenant in consideration of a marriage to settle lands of £350 per annum on husband & wife & the issue male of the marriage, remainder to the brothers of the husband; equity will compel an execution of this covenant, & not put the party to an action of covenant in the trustee's name.—VERNON v. VERNON (1731), 2 P. Wms. 594; 24 E. R. 875, L. C.; aff'd., 1 Bro. Parl. Cas. 267, H. L.

377. Covenantor reserving option to convey—Or pay specified sum—Death before conveyance or payment—Conveyance ordered.]—Testator in a settlement of an estate, reserved to himself an election as to parcels, & afterwards, by indenture, he was to have an option of paying a certain sum within twenty-four calendar months; not having elected in his lifetime, & his personal estate being inadequate to payment of his debts, the estate covenantant shall be conveyed.—TYSSSEN v. BENYON (1785), 2 Bro. C. C. 5; 29 E. R. 3, L. C.

378. Covenant to settle part of specified estates—To provide specified income for wife—Life interest in one estate devised to wife—Contribution rateably from both.]—The owner of estates in the counties of Oxford & Berks covenanted on his marriage to convey such part of them to trustees as should be of the annual value of £900, to the use of himself for life, with remainder to the use & intent that his intended wife should yearly receive for her jointure £800, to be charged upon the same hereditaments. The settlor, not having made any settlement in pursuance of the covenant, by his will, confirming the settlement, devised his estates in the counties of Oxford & Berkshire to his wife for life. He afterwards, by deed, revoked his will as to the estates in Oxfordshire, which, consequently on his death, descended to his heir at law. The jointress insisted that she was entitled to the Berkshire estate for her life, free from any contribution towards her jointure; & that the Oxfordshire estates were exclusively liable to satisfy the covenant:—Held: as no intention to benefit the jointress to the extent for which she contended appeared on the face of the will, the two estates were liable to contribute rateably to the satisfaction of the covenant.—EYRE v. GREEN (1846), 2 Coll. 527; 7 L. T. O. S. 223; 10 Jur. 384; 63 E. R. 846.

SUB-SECT. 6.—ENFORCEMENT OF ARTICLES.

A. By and Against Whom Enforceable.

(a) By Whom.

379. Grandson of covenantor—Father with power to bar entail—Enforcement not granted.]—A. on the marriage of his son covenants to settle lands to the use of the son for life, then to the wife for life, remainder to the heirs male of the body of the son. A. dies & makes his son exor., who dies & makes a second wife extrix. The grandson brings a bill against the extrix. to have satisfaction on the covenant, or that he might sue it in the trustees' names. Bill dismissed, pltf.'s father being tenant in tail, & might have barred pltf. if a settlement had been made.—CANN v. CANN (1687), 1 Vern. 480; 23 E. R. 605, L. C.

surrender, then he would leave the wife £500 at his death. No surrender is made; the husband dies after the month without assets. The judge decreed that the heir-at-law should surrender to pltf. & her heirs, & till surrender he was a trustee for her. Here was no election; if done after the month the £500 was not to be paid; those are two express covenants, & it is not put in the alternative, & here is no purchaser to be defeated; it is a charge in equity.—WOOD v. PESEY (1718), 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 55; 22 E. R. 48, L. C.

385. Person taking inheritance—With notice of articles.]—A person deemed a trustee, if he takes an inheritance after notice of arts. to settle the estate.—SKIRME v. MEYRICK (1739), 2 Com. 700; 92 E. R. 1275.

B. Specific Performance.

389. — —.]—Pltfs. file a bill to compel the execution of a settlement which was prepared, but never executed, by reason of the death of one of the parties. On the hearing it appeared that the settlement so prepared, differed materially from the arts. on which it was founded to the prejudice of pltfs. The ct. will direct a settlement according to the arts., notwithstanding pltfs. do not pray relief so beneficial to themselves.—DURANT v. DURANT (1783), 1 Cox, Eq. Cas. 58; 29 E. R. 1061.

392. Covenant to appropriate produce of estate—To raise sum of money.]—A covenant to appropriate one-third of the produce of a real estate, to raise a sum of money, is not a mere personal covenant suable at law, but creates a lien upon the land, & the covenantees are entitled to have it specifically performed.—LEGARD v. HODGES (1792), 3 Bro. C. C. 531; 1 Ves. 477; 29 E. R. 684, L. C.; subsequent proceedings (1793), 4 Bro. C. C. 421, L. C.

(b) Mutual Covenants Not Performed.

393. Covenant unperformed by party seeking enforcement.]—(1) Semble: a partial performance of a marriage contract will not be enforced by the ct.

(2) Where the whole right of pltf. depends on the execution of a contract which he has entered into, that right must be first established by him before he can make it a foundation for proceedings to enforce a right against another person.—FRYER v. COOKE (1843), 12 L. J. Ch. 487; 1 L. T. O. S. 408.

394. — —.]—By arts. made previously to a marriage, the wife's father covenanted to make certain payments during his life, & to settle three-tenths of his real & personal estate at his death upon the husband & wife during their respective lives, & after their death on their issue; & the husband covenanted to insure his life & to settle the policy, & also other property, in like manner. In default of issue, the property settled by the husband was to revert to him. The marriage took place, & the wife died without issue, & afterwards the father died. The husband did not insure his life or settle his property as agreed, & refused to execute the settlement which had been drawn in pursuance of the arts. A suit having been instituted for the administration of the father's estate, the husband claimed to prove for the value of his life interest in three-tenths of the father's real & personal estate:—Held: it was no answer to the husband's claim that he had refused to perform his part of the agreement, inasmuch as the contract between the parties had been partly performed by the marriage, & the performance by the husband was not a condition precedent to the performance by the father.—JESTON v. KEY (1871), 6 Ch. App. 610; 40 L. J. Ch. 503; 25 L. T. 522; 19 W. R. 864, L. JJ.

406. Incapacity of parties—Infant.]—(1) Where a mother who was tenant for life, with remainder to her son in fee, who was under age, covenanted, on his marriage, that they would settle, within two years, an estate on the heirs male of the marriage; bill, for a specific performance by decreeing a strict settlement, dismissed: & even if it had appeared that there had been a sufficient covenant for that purpose, a great length of time having elapsed, & none of the parties having asserted their rights, the ct. would not have interfered.

(2) Covenant in a marriage settlement that the husband shall, within one year, execute, he being then under age, does not show such an interest in him as to put a purchaser upon inquiry.

It appears that T. [the son] was an infant, & neither did nor could covenant by that deed (NORTHINGTON, LORD KEEPER).—HOWORTH v. DEEM (1758), 1 Eden, 351; 28 E. R. 720.

Husband covenants in marriage arts., in six months after death of his mother, & that he should come to & be in possession of the estate in jointure, to settle, etc. He dies in mother's life, leaving no issue. The estate comes to his heir; who shall not be compelled by the wife to a specific performance.—WHITMEL v. FARREL (1749), 1 Ves. Sen. 256; 27 E. R. 1017, L. C.

409. Covenant contrary to public policy—Annuity on separation.]—By arts. before marriage, the husband covenanted to settle an annuity on the wife after marriage to be paid in the event of his death or any separation taking place:—Held: such a covenant was contrary to public policy & morality, & could not be enforced by a ct. of equity.—*COCKSEDGE v. —A. on the marriage of his son, covenants for himself, his exors., without naming his heirs, to settle lands of £150 a year on the son, & the issue of the marriage, but dies before any settlement made. The son enters on the real estate as heir to his father, & settles it for the jointure of a second wife, who has no notice of the arts. Decreed the arts. to be a lien on the lands, whereof the father was then seised, though no particular lands are mentioned in the arts.—ROUNDELL v. BREARY (1704), 2 Vern. 482; 23 E. But a covenant to settle lands of the value of £60 per annum, without mentioning any lands in certain, this is no specific lien, but the wife must come in as a creditor in general, & the master to value her estate for life, & the wife to come in for that valuation. But the wife to have the arrears before incurred, as well as the valuation of her estate for life.—FREMOULT v. DEDIRE (1718), 1 P. Wms. 429; 24 E. R. 458, L. C.

No settlement was made pursuant to these arts.; but A. when his eldest son attained twenty-one, prevailed on him by threats, promises, etc., & under a total ignorance of the arts., to join in a settlement, whereby the estate was limited to different uses, & a power given to the father of making a jointure. This settlement was set aside as against the eldest son for fraud, & the arts. were established, & the father having, on his marriage with a second wife, given a bond conditioned for making her a jointure, this bond was also set aside as against the heir, & the wife was put to seek satisfaction for the penalty of the bond, out of her husband's personal assets.—*JEVERS v. 424. What amounts to—Assignment of interest in settled funds.]—By marriage arts. dated in 1845 certain funds were settled upon trust for the husband, Sir R. W., for life, then for the wife, Lady W., for life, then for the children of the marriage as the husband should appoint, or in default of appointment by the husband as the wife should appoint. In 1876 Sir R. W. died without having exercised his power of appointment except as to a specific portion of the funds appointed in trust for a daughter. In 1879 Lady W. appointed that after her decease the trustees should stand possessed of the trust funds for the time being subject to the trusts of the arts., other than the sum appointed by Sir R. W. in trust for the remaining six children of the marriage in equal shares. In 1893 one of the sons, William, by his marriage settlement assigned to trustees his one-sixth share of the trust funds, which he specified in a schedule, to which he was entitled on the death of his mother, & all other, if any, his estate & interest of & in all other the trust funds for the time being, subject to the trusts of the arts. of 1845. By a codicil dated in 1878 Mrs. B. directed that the property which she had left by her will to Sir R. W. should be transferred to the trustees of the marriage arts. & be held upon the trusts thereof, & she died in 1900. Subsequently, in 1900, Lady W. appointed this property in trust for certain of her children, including William:—Held: (1) the appointment of 1879 did not operate as an appointment of any moneys not then subject to the trusts of the marriage arts.; (2) William's marriage settlement passed only such estate as he then had in the trust funds; & therefore, his share of the property bequeathed by Mrs. B.'s codicil was not included in that settlement.—Re WALPOLE'S MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT, THOMSON v. WALPOLE, [1903] 1 Ch. 928; 72 L. J. Ch. 522; 88 L. T. 419; 51 W. R. 587.

425. — Agreement to execute settlement—Of property to which covenantor "may be entitled."]—By an ante-nuptial agreement the husband agreed that he would forthwith execute a settlement "of all my share, property or interest, as well vested or accruing, to which I may be entitled under any will or settlement." The settlement was never made, but many years after the agreement had been executed the husband became entitled to residue under the will of his father:—Held: such residue was not caught by the words of the agreement.—Re RIDLEY'S AGREEMENT, RIDLEY v. RIDLEY (1911), 55 Sol. Jo. 838.

ELTON* (No. 2) (1860), 27 Beav. 634; 54 E. R. 252.

428. — Power to grant mining leases—Covenant to settle subject to same powers.]—In a settlement of personal property, the parties covenanted to settle all future acquired property upon the same trusts, etc., & subject to the same powers, etc., or as near thereto as the nature & tenure of the property would admit of:—Held: this authorised the insertion of a power to grant mining leases in the settlement of subsequently acquired freeholds, the prior owner having granted such leases, though the mines had never been effectually worked under them.—SCOTT v. STEWARD (1859), 27 Beav. 367; 54 E. R. 144.

429. Effect of subsequent settlement on different trusts—Original settlement not superseded.]—Two ante-nuptial settlements were executed, each contained a covenant to settle after-acquired property of the intended wife, but upon different trusts. In the absence of evidence of reasons for making the second settlement, the ct., without deciding whether the first settlement in point of time could have been superseded as to after-acquired property, refused to hold that the first settlement was superseded by the second.—Re GUNDRY, MILLS v. MILLS, [1898] 2 Ch. 504; 67 L. J. Ch. 641; 79 L. T. 438; 47 W. R. 137.

430. Remedy for breach of covenant—Measure of damages.]—Trustees can recover substantial damages for a breach of a covenant to settle after-acquired property, & the measure of damage is the value of the property which would have come to the hands of the trustees if the covenant had been duly performed.—*Re CAVENDISH BROWNE'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, HORNER v. By the next witnessing part of the same settlement, it was agreed, that in case any real or personal property should, during the coverture, be given or bequeathed to the wife, the husband should settle it upon trust so that the wife should have the sole power of disposing of the same:—Held: a legacy bequeathed by another will to the wife after the marriage was not subject to the trusts for the children, the latter witnessing part of the settlement showing that the former must be read in a restricted sense.—Re STEPHENSON'S TRUSTS, *Ex p. By his will, O. did not validly appoint the fund, but he gave certain legacies to his children of whom A. was one, at twenty-one. By the marriage settlement of A. dated in 1851, she being then an infant, after reciting that A. was entitled to certain sums & to other interests, & that it had been agreed that the intended husband should covenant to assign to trustees all the property which "under the will or otherwise of the said O.," A. might become entitled to, the husband covenanted to assign to trustees all the property which "under the will or otherwise of the said O. or otherwise howsoever," A. might become entitled to. A. attained twenty-one, & a share of the unappointed fund, under the settlement of 1821, becoming therefore payable to her:—Held: as between the trustees of the settlement of 1851 & the husband of A. the former were entitled.—Re OWEN'S TRUST (1855), 1 Jur. H. then became entitled to a share of her brother's residuary estate as one of his next of kin; & the question was, whether such share was included in her marriage settlement:—Held: it was not.—Re NEWBOLT'S TRUST (1856), 4 W. 439. —.]—A marriage settlement recited the treaty to be, to settle all property which may come to the wife from H. by will, or codicil or codicils, or otherwise. The husband subsequently covenanted to settle all property which thereafter might come to the wife by any will or codicil or codicils of H., or otherwise:—Held: a gift to the wife by the will of one of the trustees of this marriage settlement, not being H., was not bound by this covenant; & the covenant only bound the husband to settle such property as should be derived by the wife from H.—Re NEAL'S TRUSTS (1857), 4 Jur. 440. —.]—The words "or otherwise" construed as relating to a mode of acquisition ejusdem generis with survivorship & accruer previously mentioned.

By a marriage settlement, after reciting that the intended wife was entitled to a one-sixth part or share of & in certain specified funds, subject to the trusts of the will of W., & might become thereafter entitled to other shares under the trusts of such will, & that it had been agreed that all her shares in such trust funds under such will should be settled, it was witnessed that she assigned to trustees to hold upon the trusts of the settlement all the one-sixth part or share & all other the parts or shares vested or contingent to which she was then or might become entitled by accruer, survivorship, or otherwise, in such specified trust funds, & also all the share & interest, whether vested or contingent, or in expectancy, & of which she was then or might become entitled to in any property whatsoever under the will of W. The wife afterwards became entitled to a further share in the specified trust funds under the will or codicil, or as one of the next of kin of the person entitled thereto:—Held: as she did not take the last-mentioned interest under the will of W., it was not comprised in or subject to the trusts of the settlement.—PARKINSON v. DASHWOOD (1861), 30 Beav. 49; 4 L. T. 41; 7 Jur. N. S. 854; 9 W. R. 493; 54 E. R. 807.

A. In General.—Expression of Contrary Intention.

452. 453. — — — — —.]—SCHOLFIELD v. SPOONER, No. 533, post.

454. — — — — —.]—By an ante-nuptial indenture of settlement made in 1898, the husband covenanted to settle all property to which during the continuance of the marriage he should become entitled not exceeding in the aggregate £1,000, upon trusts under which the wife & husband were entitled to successive life interests with remainder over in favour of the children of the marriage.

Under the trusts of the will, made in 1920, of his father who died in 1926, the husband became entitled during his life to receive the income of certain property, until any event should happen in consequence of which he would cease to be so entitled; & after the determination of the trusts in his favour, there was a gift over of that property. The will contained an expression of testator's intention that the benefits accruing to the husband under his will were not to be affected by his covenant to settle after-acquired property:—Held: the equitable assignment of the husband's life interest under his father's will at the moment of testator's death would have constituted an event within the meaning of the will, if the covenant applied to it; but, as the effect of the covenant would thus be to destroy that interest at the moment of its creation, the husband's covenant had no application to it; with the result that his life interest was not forfeited, but continued to subsist under the trusts of his father's will.—Re SMITH, FRANKLIN v. SMITH, [1928] 1 Ch. 10; 97 L. J. Ch. 1; 138 L. T. 81; 71 Sol. Jo. 744.

B. Accumulations of Income and Property Purchased therewith.

455. Income laid up as capital.—Effect of a contract on marriage by bond to devise, convey or assure, all such goods, personal estate & effects, that the husband should at any time during the joint lives of him & his wife be possessed of, to the use of them & the survivor; attaching on capital; not income, unless laid up as capital; admitting therefore expenditure, & debts, in a fair application of income, not liable to a minute account. On that principle an estate purchased by the husband with money, partly his own, partly borrowed on his personal security, & some paid off by him, was after his death held to belong not to the trust, but to the heir, charged for the benefit of the trust with the money, that was his own, the debts paid on account of that purchase, & expenditure in repairs, improvements, etc.—*LEWIS v. 456. Income not originally included in covenant.—If income not originally included in a covenant in a marriage settlement to settle other & after-acquired property is so invested as to indicate a permanent intention on the part of the owner to turn it into capital, such investment becomes subject to the covenant, provided the terms are sufficiently large to include it as capital. The same result follows in the case of a sale of capital property not originally included in the covenant, where the proceeds are laid out in the purchase of other property coming within the terms of the covenant.

partly out of the proceeds of property subject to a covenant to settle, partly out of accumulations of her income under the settlement, & partly out of a loan subsequently repaid by herself & her husband:—Held: the property so purchased belonged to her absolutely, but subject to a charge in favour of the settlement trustees for the amount (a) of the income accumulations, (b) of her contribution towards repaying the loan.—*Re BENDY, WALLIS v. 458. "Savings out of income"—Expressly included in settlement—Portion of annuity unpaid on death of annuitant.—By an ante-nuptial settlement an annuity was assigned to trustees in trust for the lady for her sole & separate use for her life, with a provision that all savings arising from her income should be held by the trustees subject to her appointment, & in default of appointment in trust for her next of kin. The lady died in May 1847, without having made any appointment, & the last payment to her, in respect of the annuity, has been made in the Dec. preceding her death:—Held: the portion of the annuity remaining in the hands of the trustees between the last payment to & the death of the lady constituted "savings out of income" within the meaning of the settlement, & her administrator was not entitled to it as against the next of kin.—Re ROSENTHALL'S SETTLEMENT (1857), 6 W. R. 139.

459. Property purchased with savings—From separate estate of wife.—By a marriage settlement, dated in 1838, real estate was conveyed to such uses as M. B. N., the intended wife, should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment to certain uses for the benefit of the children of the marriage, with an ultimate remainder to the use of M. B. N. in fee; & it was provided that all property which during the coverture should come to or vest in the husband in right of said M. B. N., or in the said M. B. N. by descent, devise, limitation, gift, or otherwise, should be settled to the same uses, trusts & intents, etc., as were thereinbefore expressed concerning the hereditaments thereby granted & released. M. B. N. by her will, made shortly after the settlement, devised & bequeathed all the residue of her property, except such real & personal estate as might remain subject to the trusts of her marriage settlement by reason of no specific disposition thereof having been made by her under the power for that purpose therein contained, & of which that general devise & bequest was not to be taken as in execution, for the benefit of her children. If no children then over. In 1854 M. B. N. purchased real estate out of the savings of her separate property, & it was conveyed to the same uses & trusts as those declared by the settlement of 1838, omitting only the uses in favour of children:—Held: (1) the exception in the will referred only to the property subject to the trusts of the

462. — Effect of change of investment.—By ante-nuptial marriage contract executed in 1848 the wife bound herself to convey to trustees the whole funds & estate real & personal which she might hereafter “conquest & acquire by purchase succession or otherwise.” The trustees were directed to pay the income of the trust estate to the wife during her life for her own separate benefit & use exclusive of the ius mariti, & by a clause in the contract the provisions in favour of children were to bar any claim they might make under the head of legitim :—Held : (1) the clause of conquest did not extend to estate which at the dissolution of the marriage by the death of the husband consisted of or was purchased with accumulations of the wife's separate income; (2) the only child of the marriage was not entitled to legitim out of his mother's estate.

There are some considerations which it is as well to bear in mind as aids to the construction of such clauses. These considerations may, of course, be excluded either designedly or accidentally by the language used, but unless they are so excluded they are, I think, of general, if not universal, application. One is that change of investment—mere alteration in the outward form of property—is not “acquisition” within the meaning of a provision of this sort. Another is that property which has reached its destination through the medium of the trust, or property which, in accordance with the declarations of the parties to the contract, comes to be at the absolute disposal of one of those parties, does not again fall under the operation of the trust unless there is a clear direction to that effect (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—*MACKENZIE v. C. Estates Tail.

464. General rule—Not included.—A marriage settlement contained an agreement & declaration by the parties that, if the wife then was, or if, during the coverture, she, or her husband in her right, should become seised or possessed of or entitled to any real or personal property, of a specified value, for any estate or interest whatsoever, in possession, reversion, remainder, or expectancy, then & in every such case, the husband & wife, & all necessary parties, should, as soon as circumstances would admit, convey, assign, & assure the real & personal property to, or otherwise cause same to be vested in, the trustees of the settlement, upon the trusts thereof :

—Held : an estate tail in possession to which the wife became entitled during the coverture was not bound by this agreement, & she could not be compelled either to execute a disentailing deed, & to convey the estate in fee thus acquired by her to the trustees, or to execute a conveyance of the property to the trustees, so that they could by enrolling the deed acquire an estate in fee simple. —*HILBERS v. 469. —.]—There is no general rule of construction of covenants, in marriage settlements, to settle after-acquired property of the wife that a gift from the husband to the wife during coverture is to be excluded from the covenant.

A marriage settlement made in 1882 contained several covenants by the husband & wife to settle "all the real & personal estate whatsoever & wheresoever, if any, to which the wife or the husband in her right should upon the solemnisation of the intended marriage, or at any time afterwards during the intended coverture, be or become absolutely entitled for any estate or interest whatsoever in possession or reversion." 470. —.]—By a marriage settlement made in 1878 certain funds coming from the wife's father were settled upon the usual trusts of a wife's fund, with an ultimate trust, in the events which happened, for the wife's statutory next of kin; & it was also agreed that all real & personal property to which the wife was entitled at the date of the marriage, or to which she, or her husband in her right, at any time during the coverture, should be or become entitled, whether in possession, reversion, or otherwise, should be assured & transferred by the husband & wife respectively to the trustees to be held upon the trusts of the settlement.

In Aug. 1884, a sum of £1,018 15s. was invested by the husband in the purchase of certain stock in the name of the wife. This was subsequently sold by the wife & reinvested in the purchase of £1,125 Grand Trunk Railway of Canada 4 per cent. debenture stock, which remained registered in her name down to the date of her death, intestate & without leaving any issue, on Feb. 2, 1909. The stock was now standing in the name of the husband, to whom letters of administration to his wife's estate had been granted.—Held: (1) the stock in question, which was a gift by the husband to the wife, was caught by the agreement to settle the wife's after-acquired property; (2) the next of kin of the wife being volunteers & strangers to the marriage consideration, could not enforce the contract to settle as against the administrator of the wife, & that therefore the trustees were not bound to take any steps to obtain a transfer of the stock.—Re PLUMPTRE'S MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT, *UNDERHILL v. E. Interests Existing at Date of Covenant.

(a) In General.

471. Not included.—(1) A bond, conditioned to settle lands, "if the obligor shall become seised" will not affect lands of which he is seised at the date of the bond.

(2) Bond entered into by one on his marriage, to trustees conditioned to be void, if his intended wife should survive him, & if his heirs, etc., should pay to the obligees for her benefit £1,000; & also if the obligor should survive his intended wife, & there should be children of her by him living at his death & his heirs, etc., should pay to the obligees £1,000 in trust for the children; "& further, if the obligor should at any time during his natural life become seised of any messuages, etc., in possession & should settle the same upon his intended wife, & the issue of the marriage by such good conveyances in the law as counsel should advise in such parts & proportions & to such use & uses as should be thought requisite, the better to make a provision for her in case she should survive the obligor." The obligor survived his wife, had several children by her, but did not during that coverture acquire any land in possession; after her death he married a second wife, acquired lands in possession & died without making any settlement of such lands:—Held: the words of the condition were not confined to such lands as he should acquire during the continuance of the first marriage, but a settlement was decreed on the children of the first marriage as tenants in common in fee of the lands the obligor had acquired after the death of his first wife.—*PREBBLE v. 472. — Collateral agreement.—By a settlement made on the marriage of a widow, all the property to which she was then known to be entitled was settled specifically in the usual way. The settlement did not, however, contain a covenant for the settlement of after-acquired property.

By an agreement of even date, made between the intended husband & wife, after reciting that by the settlement "certain moneys, shares & other property" belonging to the intended wife had been settled, & that "it has been agreed that any property that the intended wife may be entitled to, other than that included in the settlement should be settled" it was agreed that in case the intended wife "shall be entitled to any property, other than that contained in the said settlement, the same shall be settled" upon similar trusts.

Some years after the marriage the husband became bkpt., & a little later the wife became entitled to about £8,000 under an intestacy:—Held: the collateral agreement was intended, & must be deemed to apply not to any other property to which she was entitled at the date of the agreement, & which was not included in the settlement, but to any property to which she might afterwards become entitled & the £8,000 was therefore declared to be subject to the trusts of the settlement.—Re BLOCKLEY, BLOCKLEY v. BLOCKLEY (1884), 49 L. T. 805; 32 W. R. 385.

other of his American property. Neither of the wills referred to the other. His daughter, who was entitled to personal property under both wills, executed, previously to her marriage, a settlement of various descriptions of personal property, including specifically her property under the English will, but not mentioning or referring to her property under the American will. The settlement contained a clause providing that such further personal estate, if any, as should during her life become vested in or accrue to or be assignable by her & her husband, should be assigned upon the trusts of the settlement:—Held: this clause did not affect her American property.—*HOARE v. 475. —.]—In a settlement made before marriage there was an agreement to settle upon certain trusts all real & personal property to which the wife or the husband "in her right at any time during her now intended coverture shall become entitled, except jewels &" certain other articles "which it is hereby declared shall belong to" the wife "for her separate use." The trusts included a power of sale, the moneys arising from the sale to be held upon the trusts agreed & declared concerning such part of the personal estate of or to which the wife "now is or she or" the husband "in her right shall become possessed or entitled as aforesaid":—Held: on the true construction of the agreement, read in conjunction with the context, it included property to which the wife was entitled before marriage; & therefore jewels given to the wife before marriage were within the exception & belonged to the wife for her separate use.—*WILLIAMS v. 476. —.]—Where a lady, at the date of her marriage, was entitled to a contingent interest in remainder in real estate & was also entitled in possession to two sums of stock, & in the settlement executed on her marriage no mention was made of her interest either in the real estate or in the stock, but the settlement contained a covenant to settle upon the trusts declared by the settlement any real or personal property to which the husband & wife, or either of them in right of the wife, should, "by gift, descent, succession or otherwise howsoever, become entitled" during the coverture; & the wife's contingent interest in remainder in the real estate fell into possession during the coverture:—Held: the words "become entitled" imported a change of condition in the property, & the parties contemplated the wife's becoming entitled during the coverture, & did not intend to include property to which she was entitled at the time of the coverture; & therefore, the wife's interest in the real estate having changed during the coverture, it fell within the covenant; but the wife having been absolutely entitled to the two sums of stock at the date of the marriage, & there having been no subsequent change in her interest, those sums of stock did not come within the terms of the covenant.—*ARCHER v. 477. — Covenant by husband to settle property acquired in right of wife.]—On the marriage of a lady, who was possessed of funded property & shares in water works, the funded property alone was settled; the settlement, however, contained a recital of an intention, that all property which the wife or her husband, in her rights, should after the marriage become entitled to, should be settled on similar trusts & a covenant by the husband & by the wife, that all property which she or her husband, in her right, should after the settlement become entitled to should be settled:—Held: the shares were subject to the trusts of the settlement.—*JAMES v. 478. — Tontine debenture.]—Though the tontine existed at the date of the settlement, & these four debentures were then existing, they are not mentioned in, or assigned by, the settlement; & I am of opinion that they are not comprised within the terms of the covenant. It is clear that the covenant points to after-acquired property; that is, property which the lady, or her husband in her right, should afterwards become possessed of or entitled to. The lady was at that time both possessed of & entitled to this property. The fact that from the nature of the property & the accident of the long life of the cestui que vie, it became more valuable year by year, does not, in my opinion, accepted particulars, to which the wife or the husband in her right should become entitled during the coverture should be vested in the trustees upon the trusts of the settlement. A sum of money not mentioned in the settlement was handed by the wife to the husband before the marriage took place, & the evidence, in the opinion of the ct., established that the transaction was simply a loan:—Held: the sum of money was caught by the settlement, & was subject to the trusts thereof.—HAMILTON v. JAMES (1877), 11 L. R. Eq. 223.—IR.

479. Stock-in-trade & effects—Covenant to settle first capital moneys.—By an ante-nuptial settlement, a trader covenanted with the trustees of it to pay them £3,000 out of the first capital moneys or real or capital personal estate, or capitalised income, of or to which he should be or become possessed or in anywise entitled after the solemnisation of the marriage within six months after he should "have become" so possessed or entitled. The trader was at the time possessed of stock-in-trade & effects exceeding in value £3,000, & so continued for more than six months after the date of the settlement, but did not after the marriage acquire additional property to that amount. He became bkpt. after the expiration of the six months:—Held: the event contemplated by the covenant had happened before the bkpcy., & there was a breach of the covenant entitling the trustees to prove.—Re WASS, Ex p. EVANS (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 948; 22 L. J. Bcy. 5; 20 L. T. O. S. 149; 1 W. R. 69; 42 E. R. 1143, L. J.J.

480. Vested interest not in possession—Leaseholds.—By a marriage settlement the husband covenanted to settle all the estates, etc., of or to which the wife should at any time become seised, possessed or entitled. She had at the time of the marriage a vested estate in a moiety of a leasehold house; & a vested interest in certain moneys, the amount of which was not ascertained & distributed till some years after:—Held: the settlement contemplated future acquired title; these were present titles, & not included in the covenant to settle.—WILTON v. COLVIN (1856), 3 Drew. 617; 25 L. J. Ch. 850; 27 L. T. O. S. 289; 2 Jur. N. S. 867; 4 W. R. 759; 61 E. R. 1039.

482. — Share of estate—Subsequent distribution.—By a settlement made in June, 1842, property of the wife was settled, & the husband covenanted that if, during the coverture, any real or personal estate should "descend or devolve to or vest" in his wife, or in him in her right, he would settle it. In Aug. 1842 a sum, part of the distributive share of the wife in the estate of her father, who died in 1821, & which had been overlooked, was recovered & paid to the trustees of the settlement, & the husband received the income for twelve years:—Held: it was not within the covenant to settle, & the husband had not so acquiesced as to make it subject to the trusts of the settlement.—CHURCHILL v. SHEPHERD (1863), 33 Beav. 107; 55 E. R. 307.

483. — Release set aside by court.—By marriage settlement in 1859, which recited that the wife was absolutely entitled, amongst other property, to £10,000, part of her share of the residue of A.'s estate in the hands of the exors. of his will, & secured by a mtge., & that it had been agreed that the intended husband & wife should enter into covenants for the settlement of the future real & personal estate of the intended wife, this £10,000 was settled, & the husband & wife, in pursuance of the recited agreement, covenanted with the trustee for the settlement of all the estate property & effects, exceeding £300 at one time, which the husband & wife, or either of them in her right, should at any time or times subsequent to the marriage & during the coverture become seised or possessed of or entitled to at law or in equity by any means whatsoever. The day before the settlement the intended wife, then sui juris, had, in consideration of the payment of £10,500, executed to the exors. of A.'s will a general release of all her claims as residuary legatee. The release was executed by the intended wife without independent advice, & in ignorance that her share of residue was worth considerably more than £10,500. On Feb. 10, 1885, while the coverture was still subsisting, an order setting aside the release was made by the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: the covenant to settle after-acquired property did not apply to any existing property to which the wife was entitled at the moment of marriage other than the £10,000; but the setting aside the release of 1859 did not confer any new title, but merely removed a bar to the assertion of a pre-existing title, & accordingly the additional residuary property could not be treated as first acquired when the release was set aside, so as to be bound by the covenant.—Re GARNETT, ROBINSON v. GANDY (1886), 33 Ch. D. 300; 55 L. J. Ch. 773; 55 L. T. 562, C. A.

(b) Interests in Remainder or Reversion.

i. Indefeasible Interests.

484. Interest falling into possession during coverture.—By a marriage settlement £1,500 & £2,700 stock, of which the lady was possessed, were settled in trust for her separate use for life, remainder in trust for her intended husband for life, & after his death as the wife should appoint by will; & the intended husband covenanted that, if the marriage should take effect, he would, as often as occasion should require, join with his wife in doing all necessary acts for assigning to the trustees all the property to which his wife should become entitled during the coverture upon the trusts declared of the £1,500 & £2,700 stock. At the date of the settlement the wife had an absolute vested interest in £1,935 stock expectant on her father's death, but it was not mentioned in the settlement. During the marriage the husband became bkpt., & then the wife's father died:—Held: the £1,935 stock did not belong to the husband's assignee as part of his estate, but was bound by his covenant as being property to which the wife would become entitled during the coverture.—*BLYTHE v. 489. —.]—By marriage settlement executed by husband & wife in 1896, after a recital that provision should be made for the settlement of the future acquired property of the wife, it was agreed that if the wife during the coverture or the husband in her right should become by any means, except purchase for valuable consideration, seised, possessed, or entitled of or to any real or personal property or any estate or interest whatsoever in possession, reversion, remainder, or expectancy, except certain property which did not include the property in question, such property should be assured by the wife & all other necessary parties to the trustees upon trust that they should, but as to reversionary property not until it fell into possession unless it should appear to the trustees that an earlier title would be beneficial, sell & convert the same & should hold the proceeds upon trusts therein declared in favour of the wife & husband & their children. At the date of the marriage the wife was entitled in reversion under her parents' marriage settlement to certain policy moneys & the proceeds of sale of certain furniture, subject to the life interests of her parents therein. By the deaths of her parents during her coverture the wife became entitled in possession to the property to which at the date of her marriage she was so entitled in reversion:—Held: (1) upon the assumption that the property was the property of the wife & therefore capable of being bound by her covenant, that upon the true construction of the settlement, notwithstanding that at the date of her marriage she was entitled to the property in reversion, yet, as she became entitled thereto in possession during the coverture, the property was, within the meaning of the covenant, property to which during the coverture the wife might become entitled in possession, & was therefore caught by the settlement; (2) if the property were not bound by the covenant of the wife, then, as the effect of Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 19, is to render Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 2, as if it were non-existent in the case of a settlement which would have bound the property but for that Act, the property on falling into possession belonged to the husband in right of his wife & he became bound by his covenant to settle the same.—*Re CROOK'S SETTLEMENT, Re GLASIER'S SETTLEMENT, CROOK v. At the date of the settlement the wife was entitled on the death of her mother, to a share in a sum of stock in her own right, & a further share as one of the next of kin of a deceased brother. The value of the two shares taken together was above £400, but the value of the wife's reversionary interest in them at the date of the settlement was much less than £400. On the death of the mother, the husband & wife presented a petition to have the two shares paid to the husband :—Held : (1) the share in the trust fund was included in the first part of the covenant, as property to which the wife was entitled at the time of her marriage ; (2) the covenant referred to the value of the property, not to the value of the wife's reversionary interest in it ; (3) in estimating the value of the share, the aggregate value of the two sums must be taken, & not the value of each sum separately. Qu. : whether succession duty & costs should be deducted in estimating such value.—Re MACKENZIE'S SETTLEMENT (1867), 2 Ch. There was issue of the marriage two children only, a son & a daughter. The daughter married, & by her marriage settlement she & her intended husband covenanted with the trustees for the conveyance & settlement of all property which she then was "seised of, or interested in, or entitled to," upon the trusts therein mentioned, including in effect reversionary interests. The daughter survived her husband, & thereupon H. by deed appointed the real estate comprised in the original settlement, subject to his life estate, to his son & daughter equally in fee, the daughter thus taking the same share as she would have taken in default of appointment :—Held : inasmuch as the reversionary moiety appointed to the daughter constituted a new interest acquired by her subsequently to the date of her settlement, such moiety was not bound by the covenant in her marriage settlement.—*SWEETAPPLE v. I may observe, that as to the words, of the value or to the amount of £100 or upwards, it has been decided that they do not mean the actual value of the thing, if reversionary, but the property as if in possession, i.e. considering it as if in possession though in fact in reversion (HALL, V.-C.).—CORNMELL v. KEITH (1876), 3 Ch. 513. Interest falling into possession during coverture.—A marriage settlement, executed in 1819, recited an agreement that one moiety "of all such property & effects as the said A. B., the settlor, should or might at any time during the said intended coverture, be or become seised or possessed of, or interested in or entitled unto" should be settled as therein mentioned. The settlement also contained a covenant by the said A. B. for himself, his heirs, etc., "that in case any lands, tenements, etc., or other real or personal estate, should at any time during the said then intended coverture, accrue unto or vest in him the said A. B. upon the death, or by the settlement, devise or bequest, gift or disposition of any of the relations of the said A. B. or of any person or persons whomsoever," he the said A. B. should & would convey, settle & assign the same. At the date of the settlement, the settlor had a vested remainder in tail in certain lands, expectant on the death of his father, & defeasible under the father's power of appointment.

The father died in 1828, without having exercised the power of appointment; whereupon the estate tail vested in the settlor in possession. A disentailing deed was afterwards executed by the settlor:—Held: upon the true construction of the settlement, taking the covenant with reference to the recital, the estate tail which had become vested in the settlor in possession was an estate which had "accrued" to him on the death of his father; & consequently it was included within the covenant, & was subject to the trusts of the settlement.—MCLURCAN v. LANE, MELHUSH v. MCLURCAN (1858), 32 L. 519. Interest falling into possession after coverture—Death of husband.—"Be or become entitled."—By an ante-nuptial settlement the intended husband & wife covenanted with the trustees that if the intended husband & wife, or either of them in her right, should at any time during the coverture "be or become entitled" to any personal property of the value of £100 or upwards, the same should be settled. At the time of executing the settlement the wife was interested in a legacy, which had been bequeathed in trust for all the daughters of her father living at the time of his death, who should attain twenty-one or marry, in equal shares. The marriage was solemnised, &

520. — Death of wife—Share under will payable on death without issue.—Gift to daughters for life, with remainder to the child or children of such daughters, as they should appoint; in default of appointment equally, & on the death of such of the said daughters after attaining the age of twenty-one years as should die without issue, her share to be paid to her personal representative. The husband of one of the daughters, after the death of testatrix, by post-nuptial deed covenanted with a trustee that all the real & personal property which might thereafter at any time during the joint lives of himself & his wife devolve on her, should be held & disposed of by her as separate property, notwithstanding coverture:—Held: the before-mentioned property, on the wife's death without children, was not subject to the covenant & did not pass by her will, but went to her husband as general administrator.—Re WYNDHAM'S TRUSTS (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 290.

522. — Dissolution of marriage.—Two daughters of testator, P. C., E. F. C., who became E. F. P., & E. C., who became E. H., testator having died in 1880 & divided his converted estate into nine equal parts or shares, were respectively entitled to one-ninth share under his will. The shares were given upon trust to pay the income unto each of his daughters during their lives, & after their respective decease & the decease of their surviving husbands each daughter's share was to be in trust for the daughter's children at twenty-one or marriage in equal shares, & testator directed that if any of his daughters should die without leaving children her surviving then the share of such daughter should be divisible amongst brothers & sisters then living & the children of such of them as should be dead, such children to take equally their parent's share only. One share of residue was held in trust for E. F. P. the mother of the first & second depts. The first dept., a daughter of E. F. P. was married in 1895. Her father died in 1910, her mother, E. F. P., in 1914, & her marriage was dissolved in July, 1917.

By her marriage settlement, dated June 15, 1895, she covenanted that all property to which she should during her then intended coverture become entitled should be vested in the trustees as soon as circumstances permitted upon trusts as to the income as therein directed.

E. H., another of testator's daughters, married, & having survived her husband, died, aged ninety-three, without having had a child. On E. H.'s death one-fifth of her share passed to the first dept., who had previously mortgaged her reversionary interest in P. C.'s estate to the second dept.:—Held: the first dept.'s interest in the one-ninth share being contingent on the death of her mother & of E. H. without issue, & not having belonged to her absolutely during the coverture, since the ct. could not take into consideration that E. H. was from the date of the marriage settlement past the age of child bearing, was not caught by her covenant to settle after-acquired property.—Re CAZENOVE, PERKIN v. BLAND (1919), 122 L. T. 181.

523. Interest becoming indefeasibly vested during coverture.—DERING v. KYNASTON, No. 466, ante.
